Polls Close on Egg and Fowl Marketing Plan

PICTON (Staff) — Polls close today at Deputies of Agriculture Offices across the province following week-long voting on the Ontario Egg and Fowl Marketing Plan proposed by the Ontario Poultry Producers' Association.

Eligible voters included any producer of eggs or fowl, or anyone who produced them last year.

The proposed plan received lengthy consideration by representatives of the Ontario Egg and Fowl Producers' Marketing Board. Promotion was stressed also with suggestions including the preparation and distribution of leaflets that would create a demand for eggs and fowl and feature recipes calling for them. The plan featured a research with the object of using it to increase consumer acceptance of eggs and fowl to expand the market for eggs and fowl and to improve conditions that adversely affect any stage of marketing them.

Information was a further goal of the plan. It suggested that producers be better educated in respect to production, distribution and the marketing of eggs.

The plan proposed to establish an Egg and Fowl Industry Advisory Committee to study and negotiate terms, charges, rates and matters relating to the marketing of eggs and fowl. It was required that 66 2-3 per cent of the voters favor the proposed plan.

Grounded Boat Now Off Shoals, Resumes Trip

PICTON (Staff) — The 'Star of Sore', the first ocean-going boat ever to run aground at Salmon Point, was set afloat at 7:15 P.M. Tuesday. The ship, over 800 feet long carried hundreds of pulp which were removed in part by the ship's crew. Approximately 220 tons of the cargo was transferred to a barge.

Other ships which have run aground on Salmon Point shoals includes the "Aragon" which was stranded there with her cargo of corn from November of 1921 until May of 1922, and the tug, 'Elida' which was towing the barge William Hirst with its load of wheat. In 1927 the "William C. Warren" foundered there carrying $1,000 bushels of wheat. The "Calgarian", a package freighter carrying a consignment of Plymouth cars to Picton harbor, was stranded at the point until freed by the Fiks salvage company. In 1944, the "William Reese" ran aground. The 'Star of Sore' has now been moved to safer waters and is being reloaded for its journey.

Pollution Will Be Probed Says Minister

PICTON (Staff)—Following report of the appearance of oily wastes on the shores of Outlet Beach, the federal member for Prince Edward - Lennox, A. Douglas Altenbrack addressed this question to the Minister of Transport in the House of Commons: "In view of the current heavy pollution of the waters on the shores of Lake Ontario bounding Prince Edward Counties, which is apparently created by the ruthless dumping of oily wastes by shipping on the lake and which is ruinous to the beaches, the tourist industry, and to the fish and game, will the minister use his authority to investigate forthwith the origin of this pollution and use all means available to him to apprehend, prosecute and stop this flagrant and barbaric breach of the law?"

In answer the Hon. J. W. Pickersgill said: "I am very much against pollution, Mr. Speaker, and I will do everything I can."

May Declare Labor Surplus At Bancroft

OTTAWA (CP) — The question of declaring the Bancroft uranium district of Ontario a surplus labor area is under consideration, Labor Minister Mac-Eachen said Wednesday in the Commons.

He was replying to Rod Webb (PC — Hastings-Frontenac) who inquired about requests for such action so that unemployed persons could receive government assistance to leave to find jobs elsewhere.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For June 26

"The wise man controls his destiny . . . Astrology points the way."

Aries (Mar. 21 - Apr. 19): Experienced individuals may make helpful suggestions. Read their words! Stay with the tried-and-proven. Friends are adventurous now with your time and money! Utilize common sense.

Taurus (Apr. 20 - May 20): Best this morning to avoid crowds. There could be feeling of restriction. But don't be provoked! Get out of project. Insist on being heard. Finish project. Hold off on new endeavors.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20): Display "staying power." Show that you are sincere, determined. Follow through on correspondence, contracts. Key is being progressive. But remember that lowest ones are apt to be sensitive.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22): Avoid misunderstanding concerning money. Get agreements, facts in writing. Speculation concerning sports event could create friction. Do plenty of listening. Offer views only if asked.

Leo (July 23 - Aug. 22): Stress on relations with public. No day to force issues, views. Be receptive. Martial or business partner offers plan. Be courteous. Not don't commit yourself.

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Excitement due tonight. May involve member of opposite sex. Don't argue. State position. Then keep mind open. Maintain beliefs, but be willing to modify them. Be receptive.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 23): Speak to one who has traveled. Base wishes, plans on solid information. Romance could color judgment. You do require "a change." But be sure you can really afford it!

Scorpio (Oct. 24 - Nov. 21): Fine for writing, taking notes, completing outlines. Ideas are plentiful. But you must be selective. Best not to mix with pleasure. Choose "helper" on basis of ability!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get proper perspective. Viewing events, persons through rose - colored glasses not wise. See situation as it actually exists. There are some associates longing for a "lift."

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Cycle high. Judgment accurate. Especially concerning work, friendships, romantic possibilities. Strength on your side. Those with power to aid your cause — are willing.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): You can state your needs — and obtain results. Key is confidence, original approach. Others fascinated with your proposals. Know this — act accordingly. But don't reveal all!

Pisces (Feb. 19 - Mar. 20): Be with friends. You gain most from casual entertainment. Enjoy yourself. Engage in activity connected with hobby. Break through to new areas. Make contacts — meet people.

If today is your birthday . . . you are practical, but idealistic enough to fight for principles.

General Tendencies: Cycle high for Aquarius, Pisces, Aries. Special word is Leo: Watch behavior in public. Many apt to be supercritical.

McNAB - YEOMANS HOUSE

Located on West Bridge Street

The "old river boat" hall way up Bridge Street West Hill, began life as the staid and severe stone house of the Scottish miller, James McNabb. The lacey porches which gave it its nickname, presumably because they looked like the deck rails of a boat, were a flourish added by Horace Yeomans, its second owner.

James and Simon McNabb, came to Meyers's Creek from Scotland in the early part of the 19th century. They built the sawmill dam across the Moira to operate McNabb's Mills, at the corner of Coleman and West Moira Streets, in competition with the grist and saw mills of Capt. Meyers.

This commercial rivalry seems to have resulted in two factions developing in Meyer's Creek — one composed of British-born immigrants who rallied around the McNabbs, and the second made up of citizens of American birth who supported the Loyalist Capt. Meyers.

The War of 1812 fanned the flames of racial bigotry. The McNabbs publicly (and unfoundedly) accused Meyers of disloyalty, and petitioned in 1816 to have Meyers' Creek renamed "Belleville." They divided most of the public offices in town, such as Magistrate, Collector of Customs, Post-Master, and Registrar, between them.

James became a Captain of Militia and Member of the Legislative Assembly.

The McNabb's ascendancy over their rival was short lived — their name and achievements — forgotten, but Meyer's name, as founder and benefactor of early Belleville, is firmly enshrined in the history books.

In 1832, James McNabb bought 50 acres on the south side of West Bridge St. He began immediately to subdivide it land into town lots, saving the best site for his own residence. A legend persists to this day that a man was killed during the building of the house, leaving it uncompleted for years.

The man who was killed was James McNabb himself, who had the distinction of being Belleville's only casualty of the MacKenzie Rebellion of 1836.

In those jittery times, panicky city fathers saw rebels on every street corner and called out the militia at the slightest provocation.

During one of these midnight alarms, Capt. McNabb, running through the unlighted hallway of a local hotel, was accidentally impaled on the bayonet of one of his own militiamen.

The Captain's bereavement did not remained in the house, pressed on every side by her late husband's creditors, for McNabb had died deeply in debt to most of the Family Compact in Toronto.

In 1859, Horace Yeomans, a well known local lawyer, bought the place from the bank that finally gained possession. It was he who added the dormer windows and the filigree wooden verandahs.

The original house was a sturdy and unadorned stone rectangle in the architectural tradition of British Classicism. Horace Yeomans turned it into a frivolous Victorian confection with trim and trellises inspired by Renaissance motifs.

The bracketed cornice is Tuscan Italianate; the scrolled verge boards over the upper verandah are mediaval, but the columns supporting the porches and the lacey railings are carpenter's copies of Renaissance stonework.

The main entrance was upstairs, opening off the upper verandah. The kitchen was downstairs, in the British manner. Equally as interesting as the house is the stone barn and stable at the back, where the horses were housed behind finely constructed stone arches. On the north end of the stable, across the kitchen, was the scullery, where laundry was done.

Historically, the McNabb-Yeomans house is associated with two prominent citizens; architecturally, it combines British Classicism with an icing of early Victorian whimsey. On both scores it deserves our attention and respect.

Nigeria Making Major Strides In Development

By Mohammed Tukur Odumu

LAGOS (Reuters) — Nigeria largest and most populous country in Africa, is making major strides in its six-year development program, which began in 1962, two years after the country became independent.

The effects so far of the $1,900,000,000 project are already apparent.

Since most of the population are farmers, the federal government has emphasized the need to develop agriculture, forestry, veterinary and fisheries services.

It has made $70,000,000 available to the regional governments, either as loans or grants, for agriculture in the six-year plan.

Of this amount, $8,400,000 will be on credits to farmers, and $3,920,000 on agricultural research, with special emphasis on soil fertility and breeding improved strains of seed.

In their respective development programs, the regional governments have also given top priority to agricultural developments.

One of the biggest problems facing Nigeria and other developing countries in Africa is malnutrition, that is why the infant mortality rate on the African continent is one of the highest in the world.

Three specialized agencies of the United Nations have been fighting malnutrition in Africa for several years. They have achieved a large measure of success.

The West Nigeria government, like the other governments of the federation, is solving the problem of malnutrition by encouraging farmers to grow crops with high protein content. The plan has worked out successfully.

It has also paid special attention to the livestock industry to increase the production of beef cattle, poultry and pigs.

In its efforts to curb increasing unemployment, the federal government has established several large and small industries. It has discovered that one of the most effective weapons in fighting unemployment is to establish farm settlements.

Under this program, settlements for teaching young farmers modern techniques of farming have been built and sites cleared for yet more.

Box Score to Test Your Real Age By

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — How young are you?

Thanks to wigs, anti-wrinkle creams, hormone pills and other devices, the inroads of time are so camouflaged that it is getting harder to tell anyone's real age.

But how old are you actually? Here is a box score to test yourself. You're probably still on the sunny side of middle age if—

The mortgage on your home has 19½ years to run.

You still call your wife by the pet nickname of your courtship days instead of saying the children by addressing her as "mother."

Being broke all the time now doesn't bother you so much, because you feel supremely confident that in another five years at most you'll double or triple your income.

It makes you feel more mature to smoke a cigar, but you are so unused to doing this that you haven't learned to take the band off before lighting up.

You like to open letters because you relish the hope that good news as well as bad news comes by mail.

You can overhear a conversation between two teen-agers and understand at least half of what they are saying.

STAIR CLIMBING EASY

Confronted by a long flight of stairs, you automatically go up two at a time and reach the top without feeling you need to lie down until you can breathe easier.

You don't remember how Shirley Temple looked as a curly-haired little girl, or Bing Crosby singing as one of The Rhythm Boys.

Other men may not be able to handle martinis, but you—you're different.

If a shoelace breaks, you balance on one foot while you fit it instead of looking around for a fire hydrant to use as a support.

The only glasses you wear are sun glasses, and the fine print in the telephone directory is no problem.

You'd rather get out on the lawn and cut the grass yourself than sit on the front porch and tell your wife how to do it

At the office your desk drawer contains a small box of aspirin tablets—but no pep pills or medicine for an acid stomach.

You'd rather go out and pay to see a good new movie than stay at home and watch a lousy old one on television.

You still have the same number of chins you had 10 years ago.

WILL SHARE ESTATE

WINDSOR (CP) — An estate of $503,406 will be shared by the wife, daughter and two sons of Calixte Adelard Thibodeau, founder of Thibodeau Express Limited, according to the terms of his will filed for probate here Wednesday. The company has more than 150 units and offices in Windsor, Detroit, Chatham, London, Hamilton and Toronto.

YOUTH PROGRAMS

On May 8th, 1964, the Ontario Legislature ordered

"That a Select Committee of this House be appointed to conduct a comprehensive inquiry into and report upon the special needs of youth with particular reference to educational, cultural, recreational and employment opportunities as well as the health, welfare and sports facilities now available to youth and the steps to be taken which in the opinion of the Committee would enable a wider participation by youth in the life of the community;

"To conduct hearings for the purpose of receiving representations from organizations and individuals engaged in youth activities and to hold meetings to study the experience of others in the youth field . . ."

The Committee has defined youth as those persons in the age range 14 to 24. It is recognized that certain situations may involve other age groups; the Committee's focus of study, however, is on youth as defined. It is the intention of the Committee to hear organizations and to visit places where there are active youth programs; to invite briefs from municipalities, from individuals and organizations, private and public; to study submissions and make recommendations.

It is expected that the Committee will be ready by early fall to schedule meetings in various centres. It is urged that individuals and organizations who wish to meet the Committee contact the Secretary, Select Committee on Youth, the Parliament Buildings, Queen's Park, Toronto, Ontario, before August 31st, in order that the Committee may prepare its fall schedule.

If a delegation or single applicant intends to prepare a brief, it is suggested that the Secretary be provided with a short summary stating the problems and the major conclusions.

China's Ability To Fight Major War In Tailspin

Air Force Short of Parts And Badly Needs Planes

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is drawing the line on Southeast Asia at a time when Communist China's ability to fight a major modern war is in a tailspin.

China's air force is short of spare parts and needs new planes to replace jet fleet that is largely of Korean War vintage.

Her army, huge in manpower, is strapped for up-to-date tanks and short on artillery.

There are acute scarcities of fuel to run the planes, tanks and vehicles that China does have. It is reported pilot training has had to be limited to conserve aviation fuel.

Red China's military deterioration set in about four years ago as the Soviet Union's dispute with Russia led the Soviet Union to shut off supplies and technical help to China.

One effect of this has been to set back the day when China can even explode her first atom bomb.

The Russian-Chinese split seemingly has deepened and the prospect that the Soviet Union will resume arming China is considered remote.

Moreover, the feud between the two huge Communist countries has shredded China's military resources. She has moved sizable forces within reach of her long border with Russia.

CAN'T COUNT ON RUSSIA

U.S. officials regard as significant Russia's recent warning to Red China that she should no longer count on Russian backing in a crisis.

Some high officials believe this Russian action was a direct result of repeated U.S. warnings that it is ready to risk war with China to keep Southeast Asia from the growing Communist domination.

Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara has said it will be "many, many years" before Red China is a first - class power.

This evaluation, based on solid intelligence information, is a main underpinning for the new U.S. "hard line" toward China.

There is an awareness that China could feel forced to call the U.S. bluff.

She could, as she did in Korea, send hordes of men rolling southward into Laos, truckers and dredges — to cut the 135-mile seaway route from Montreal to Prescott, Ont.

The seaway itself cost $475,

'Big Ditch' Five Years Old Today

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP) — The "big ditch" is five years old today — but nobody seems to care.

Exactly five years ago, the Royal Britannia sailed sedately through a ceremonial gate at the Montreal entrance to the St. Lawrence Seaway, carrying Queen Elizabeth and President Eisenhower into man's greatest inland aquatic highway.

There were fireworks, balloons, whistles and bells the day they pulled the cords from a vintage bottle-of-fizz in the mighty St. Lawrence River.

And now—five years later—the excitement is lost another working day in the uneventful life of a time-tested waterway.

It seems that Montreal, which is the only place that plans to mark the birthday with a festival Saturday.

Elsewhere on the international waterway, quiet lakers bustle and with tons of grain and an occasional pleasure craft "salties" boarded up from foreign abroad for the inland ports ringing the five great Lakes.

The formal opening, June 26, 1959, of the St. Lambert lock on the south shore of Montreal harbor by the Duke of Edinburgh was the ceremonial opening of the seaway, but the route was actually opened to ships in April.

CARRY HEAVY CARGO

Since the real start of the seaway, ships flying the flags of more than 36 nations — from Egypt to Formosa — have carried 134,000,000 tons of cargo through the route.

Altogether, there have been 30,000 ship transits since that day.

The current seaway season is shaping up a record breaker. In May cargo traffic was more than 5,000,000 tons—32 per cent higher than in May, 1963 and exactly double the business in May, 1959.

It took five years and thousands of men, using $100,000,000 worth of equipment — 61 cranes, dozens of steamshovels, trucks and dredges — to cut the 135-mile seaway route from Montreal to Prescott, Ont.

The seaway itself cost $475,

First Winter Flight to Antarctic Made to Rescue Injured Flyer

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (Reuters)—An American navy aircraft was reported to have touched down safely in the Antarctic today on a mercy mission to the bottom of the world.

The safe landing came after one of the most hazardous flights in the history of antarctic aviation.

The ski-equipped plane made the 2,000-mile, eight-hour trip from here to McMurdo Sound.

A U.S. antarctic base, to bring back a critically injured American construction worker.

It was the first major effort to attempt to land in Antarctica. The plane was one of two aircraft which reached here early today after a 10,000-mile dash from Quonset, R.I.

The injured man was 39-year-old Bethseal Lee McMullen of the American Seabees, who broke his back in a fall at the antarctic base last Sunday.

One of the navy doctors aboard the plane, which carried 10 persons—old reporter Mc Mullen was "in: pretty bad shape."

Construction gangs at McMurdo braved below-zero temperatures and high gales to build a 10,000-foot landing strip.

The daring mercy flight was followed closely by personnel at the American base here and also by New Zealanders.

The crew got some moral support from a group of New Zealand schoolchildren who cabled a message: "May God go with you gallant gentlemen."

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Variable cloudiness with a few thundershowers is the forecast for the northern half of the province today while mainly sunny and warmer weather is expected in the south. Little change is likely in the weather pattern for Saturday with continuing fair weather along the lower lakes and partly cloudy conditions further north.

WORKING ON THE RAILROAD are Mayor Jack Ellis and Ex-Mayor McLean Haig, as they help lift five-foot section of track. Occasion was symbolic lifting of tracks marking the end of railway traffic on Pinnacle Street. Behind Mayor Ellis and helping in the "lift" are Tommy Hunter of TV fame, Keith Hunt, CN Rideau manager, while behind Ex-Mayor Haig are Gordie Tapp and CN vice-president J. A. McDonald.

Tshombe Back In Congo

By ARNOLD AMBER

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—Moise Tshombe, the ousted former president of Katanga, arrived here by air before dawn today and was immediately whisked off in a government car to the residence of Congo Premier Cyrille Adoula.

It was believed the two would discuss the possibility of Tshombe participating in a new "national reconciliation" government.

Tshombe went into self-exile in Europe in June, 1963, after his Katanga secessionist movement was put down by the United Nations military forces in The Congo.

Although diplomatic officials refused to support local speculation today that Tshombe

Johnson Balked in His Bid To Set up Talks on Cyprus

WASHINGTON (CP-AP)—The Johnson administration, balked in its efforts to set up direct talks between Greece and Turkey, turned to United Nations today for an easing of the explosive Cyprus crisis.

After four days of apparently unsuccessful personal diplomacy, President Johnson sent Undersecretary of State George W. Ball, his Cyprus trouble shooter, to New York to report to UN officials on the results of his talks with Turkish Prime Minister Ismet Inonu and Greek Prime Minister George Papandreou.

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin of Canada talked with Papandreou Thursday night and an official who was with Martin said the meeting was encouraging. Martin con-

Given 4 Years for Million-Dollar Mishap

SUDBURY (CP)—Henry Linekar, 18, of Foleyet, was sentenced Thursday to four years in penitentiary for his part in a $1,000,000 derailment on the CNR main Toronto-Vancouver line near Foleyet April 25.

Paul Bernatchez, 22, of Foleyet, Ont., 150 miles northwest of here, also pleaded guilty to public mischief in the accident.

CRASHED HEAD ON

The diesel crashed head on into an eastbound freight train near Foleyet.

Gunther Manthiu, 42, of Hornepayne, Ont., lost a leg as a result of the crash, suffered a fractured spine, and had his other leg seriously injured. Manthiu was a fireman aboard the freight train. Two other members of the freight train's crew were also injured.

Constable Harold Foster of the provincial police testified after the Crown amended the charge to a less serious subsection of the Criminal Code. The original charge called for a maximum sentence of life imprisonment. The amended charge called for a maximum sentence of five years.

Linekar jumped from the cab as the diesel left the yard, Constable Foster said, and it hit the east-bound freight only minutes later.

Defence lawyer Richard Hubenschmid told Judge Cooper that Linekar, a former railway employee at Foleyet, had been drinking during the evening.

"Had it not been for the considerable amount of liquor consumed the incident would never have happened," Mr. Hunsuult said.

Judge Cooper, in pronouncing sentence, said: "Had not the Crown and the defence counsel consented to modifying the original charge — mischief that causes actual danger to life—I would have had no hesitation in imposing life term."

The maximum penalty for the original charge is life imprisonment. The maximum penalty for the reduced charge is five years.

Justice must be served as a warning to others, who have undoubtedly read of this case, and may be fostering similar ideas, Judge Cooper said.

Mr. Thompson and Linekar confessed he had been drinking during the evening of April 24 and had climbed into the idling cab of the diesel engine to keep warm while drinking wine.

He began to play with the levers and eventually got the engine moving. Finally he lost control and jumped clear. The diesel moved on to the main line at about 30 miles an hour.

OTTAWA (CP) — "Stand up or shut up!"

"You can't call me a liar!"

Such was the level of repartee in the Commons Thursday as members continued their partisan infighting in the fourth day of debate on interim spending authority to carry on federal government services for July.

Nobody apart from the Social Credit Leader Thompson mentioned whether or not the routine supply bill should be passed. He said the House should endorse it quickly and get on to important legislation.

Mr. Thompson has joined in a side discussion in which it was generally agreed something should be done to expedite parliamentary business. But there was no agreement on how.

The Commons has been sitting the supply debate, filling out the week with it. Conservative MPs recognized a time-waster that they could keep the debate going three weeks they might force a general election.

"The way we have been carrying on these past four days is certainly not to the credit of anybody in this House, nor to the advantage of anybody because we do not expedite parliamentary business. But there was no agreement on how.

ANNOUNCES DECISION

State Secretary Lamontagne announced to the House the CBC board of directors' decision to uphold the CBC's earlier determination not to show the $25,000 documentary Mr. Pearson, based on a play in the life of the prime minister.

Mr. Pearson himself tabled correspondence he had had with the CBC and the film private producer, Richard Ballentine. Mr. Ballentine wrote last Sep-

Official View To Be Given

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian doctors today will get the official view of the Canadian Medical Association on the recommendations of the royal commission on the health and broad national health insurance plan for Canada.

The executive of the Canadian Medical Association, now in annual convention here, has been studying the voluminous report of the Hall royal commission on health services for months but this official view before the 1,500 doctors attending the meeting.

In interviews and a series of press conferences since the report was released a week ago individual members of the executive, including President Dr. W. W. Wigle of Toronto, indicated they do not like the Hall commission proposals. And they

Way Sought to Boost Defence Contract Flow

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—Canada and the United States agreed to seek specific ways of expanding the flow of defence contracts across the border as a joint ministerial committee Thursday completed the first major North American military review in four years.

Defence Production Minister C. M. Drury of Canada told reporters that both sides expressed satisfaction with the existing production - sharing agreement but felt a higher volume of orders should be achieved. Since 1959, the U.S. placed about $763,000,000 worth of contracts in the U.S.

At the day - long meeting, headed by External Affairs Minister Paul Martin and State Secretary Dean Rusk, ended, Drury said Canada is contemplating large purchases of defence needs in the U.S.

It was imperative, therefore, that the U.S. also considers placing increased orders in Canada if the trade balance in this specific field is to be maintained.

Drury said no specific military items were discussed in Thursday's review but he indicated that if Canada decides to obtain a new tactical aircraft from U.S. sources, would likely production established in Canada set only to RCAF Canadian air force needs but also some of the needs of the U.S. Air Force.

He noted also that de Havilland Aircraft of Canada is producing the prototype of the Caribou jet transport plane for the U.S. Army. No decision has yet been made by the Pentagon whether to place full production for this plane in Canada.

Defence Minister Paul Hellyer said he was asked several questions by Defence Secretary Robert McNamara and other U.S.

OTTAWA (CP)—The RCAF is in the process of compulsorily retiring 406 officer pilots and navigators—10 per cent of its entire aircrew strength.

Of these 406, a total of 344 were actually engaged on flying duties when notified their services were no longer required. The others were in temporary ground jobs.

(About 45 of the officers are stationed at Trenton, with Air Transport Command Headquarters, Air Station Trenton and Number Six Repair depot, and it is assumed that many of the officers will leave the area after their retirement, July 22. Some of the officers live in Department of National Defence houses, in Middleton Park, and will have to move. Others will move back to their homes, or in search of jobs. One officer plans to move to Australia, to take a job with an airline there. Airlines in Canada have approached a reluctant to take former military pilots, and most of the retired officers will probably have to accept jobs in industry. Several of the younger officers, retiring from short service commissions, are planning to return to school after their retirement.)

Besides the 406 airmen, the RCAF is discharging before normal retirement date 33 air traffic controllers and 19 other officers connected with the Ground Observer Corps—336 officers in all.

An air force spokesman said Thursday that the 336 officers became surplus last fall when Defence Minister Hellyer announced a series of defence cuts and on Jan. 1 when the last elements of the Ground Observer Corps were disbanded.

The "permanent" commission flight lieutenants and flying officers being released had an average of 14 and 22.4 years service, respectively. The short-service commission officers had 7½ to 8½ years' flying experience.

New Lyrics of Maple Leaf Forever Sung Publicly for First Time

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP) — New lyrics for The Maple Leaf Forever were sung publicly for the first time Thursday after the Canadian Authors Association announced it had won a competition by Victor Cowley of Ottawa in a nation-wide competition.

Mr. Cowley, 70, a poet who has never had a song published wasn't present to receive the $1,000 award offered by the CAA.

"I tried the CBC but they want someone who is tall and handsome. I could never be tried 10 years earlier."

Mr. Thompson gave permission to update the refrain and "a few lines" of the new lyrics. The first verse starts:

"Our fathers came
Across the sea
To make us free and liberty
To settle on this virgin land,
Where all men can be free.
Long may our land be bright
Into New York tune circles but when I was an unknown they wouldn't look at me. Maybe this thing might help me. If anyone wants to use my talents, I'm here."

John Morgan Gray of Toronto, president of the publishing firm of Macmillan Company of Canada, received the University of New Brunswick award for his popular biography, Lord Selkirk of Red River, during the launch.

Awards from the University of Western Ontario went to Alfred Purdy of Amelasburg, Ont., for poetry; Margaret Lawrence of Vancouver for the best short story; Prof. H. B. Parker of the University of Toronto's English department for the best scholarly article, and to Peter Gzowski, managing editor of Maclean's Magazine, for the best general article.

Mr. Cowley is a portly man with thinning hair and a sense of humor. He was Ottawa's first Armistice baby, born the day the First World War ended.

Mr. Cowley, besides writing songs, sings.

"I used, to go to some of the Cowley's parties and sing as an amateur. I used to do all right and people told me I was good. I still think I was."

"I tried the CBC but they want someone who is tall and handsome. I could never be tried 10 years earlier."

Mr. Thompson gave permission to update the refrain and "a few lines" of the new lyrics. The first verse starts:

"Our fathers came
Across the sea
To make us free and liberty
To settle on this virgin land,
Where all men can be free.
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy flame."

Ontario Association of Deaf Holds Three-Day Biennial Convention at O. S. D.

Many of the delegates attending the 39th biennial convention of the Ontario Association of the Deaf are former students of the Ontario School for the Deaf, and in one case it was the first time in 40 years, a student had re-visited the school.

This Association which was founded in 1926 and incorporated in 1963 is meeting in Belleville, the first time in ten years here, for a three-day convention which opened officially Thursday evening.

Mr. Wayne Fox, a teacher at O.S.D., and assistant dean of residence, was master of ceremonies for the initial meeting. Addresses of welcome were given by Superintendent J. G. Demaus, Mayor Jack Ellis, Kincardine councillor Mrs. Sandercock, MLA, Warden of Hastings County Tom Burnside, and assistant principal G. R. Locklin.

President William McGovern of Toronto, addressed the meeting. The interpreter was Miss Mary Foster, a teacher at OSD. The association is composed of adult deaf people who have long been interested in the education of the deaf in Ontario. The organization has had a new crest designed, incorporating the colors of the two schools for the deaf at Belleville and Milton. Mr. Demaus unveiled the new crest, which is composed of blue, green and gold colors.

The first session was devoted to business and the appointment of committees to carry out the work of the organization.

On Friday morning Mr. J. G. Demaus addressed the gathering on the subject, "Progress in the Education of the Deaf in Ontario." A second address was given by Mr. L. H. Parker, executive director of the Canadian Hearing Society.

A boat trip through the Thousand Islands was planned for Friday afternoon, as well as a tour of the OSD. In the evening a grand ball will be held in the gymnasium. The convention closes on Sunday.

An interesting event took places on Thursday evening when recognition was given to the oldest delegate attending the convention, Miss Ada James, formerly of the OSD, and now living in Toronto.

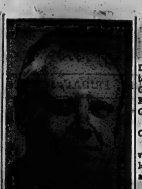
Bare-Breasted Barmaid Says Dress in Cool



SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP)—Bare-breasted barmaid Joy Sheridan, 25, a waitress at the Rogue Room, was arrested Thursday on a charge of outraging the public decency by wearing a topless bathing suit.

She was released on $375 bail until a court appearance July 1.

District Attorney Louis Bergna said he also will file a complaint against Rogue Room owner Allan P. Burdick on the same grounds, and recommended Burdick's liquor licence be lifted.

Several women complained Miss Sheridan was serving drinks while dressed in a topless bikini.

Miss Sheridan described her costume as "comfortable and cool and real cute."

New Pastor At Parkdale Baptist Church

Rev. Stuart A. Mulligan, who has accepted a call to be the pastor of Parkdale Baptist Church, will assume his responsibilities there on Sunday, June 28. He will preach at the morning and evening services of that day.

Mr. Mulligan has been serving as a Canadian representative of The World Radio Missionary Fellowship, Incorporated. This organization is engaged in helping to create the Gospel to people around the world via radio and television broadcasts and in medical ministry as well, in addition to travels in Canada and the United States, the duties of representative have taken Mr. Mulligan to Central and South America. The new pastor at Parkdale has not always been in the ministry. After serving with the Royal Canadian Air Force overseas in World War II, he returned to his position with the Customs Department of National Revenue in Ottawa and was subsequently transferred to Vancouver. Pupils Tour Kingston and Thousand Islands

On Tuesday last the Grade seven and eight pupils of St. Michael's Academy went on their annual class trip.

At eight a.m. they boarded the Dawson school bus for the school. Their first stop was the Aluminum Company of Canada, where four tons of bauxite ore is conducted tour. This plant is the largest one of its kind in Canada. The pupils observed the process of making aluminum foil from huge ingots. They were amazed to learn that one ingot five feet long, three feet wide and nine inches thick could be rolled and pressed into thirty-two miles of foil.

Soon they were en route for Old Fort Henry where they learned how war was carried on during pioneer days and how they protected their (the soldiers') manner of living was compared to the present day.

The last part of the trip proved to be the most pleasant as it included a boat trip through the Thousand Islands, aboard the "American Rose", from Brockett stop at Clayton, New York.

It was a tired but happy group that arrived back in Belleville.

Pembroke Mayor Accuses Spooner Of Arrogance

SUDBURY (CP) — Mayor Angus Campbell of Pembroke, immediate past president of the Ontario Association of Mayors and Reeves, said Thursday that Municipal Affairs Minister Wilfred Spooner's criticisms have this week were frivolous.

Accusing the minister of arrogance, Mr. Campbell said in an interview that Mr. Spooner should do some soul searching to discover if he should continue in his present post.

Mr. Spooner said in a television interview after attending final session Wednesday that many of the conference's resolutions hadn't received enough study and were frivolous. He also warned municipalities were risking their autonomy by continually asking the province for money.

Mr. Campbell said Mr. Spooner, who attended only one day of the three-day conference should have attended the entire conference as part of his duty.

The provincial government should be careful it does not adopt an autocratic attitude, Mr. Campbell said. Mr. Spooner remarks had overtones of arrogance and were a reflection upon the municipal leaders of the province, he said.

Wesleyan Methodist Church Pastor Moving to Trenton

Pastor of the Wesleyan Methodist Church here for the past 21 years, Rev. J. S. A. Spearman is giving up his Belleville charge to pioneer another church at nearby Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Spearman will take up residence in Trenton around the first of August.

The Wesleyan Methodist Church congregation in Belleville was just nicely getting underway and holding services at the old Schmster Mission on Dundas Street when Mr. Spearman came here 21 years ago.

In 1947 the congregation moved to Everett Street where a small church had been built. During the 1950's the church was remodelled and enlarged. The congregation now totals about 167 families.

"I have always had a deep interest in pioneer church work," Mr. Spearman said.

And it was this desire for pioneering that prompted him to move to Trenton.

NEW CHURCH PLANNED

Despite the fact the Trenton congregation is small, a new church is planned, and the hope is to break ground next week for a new building.

A native of Winchester district near Ottawa, Mr. Spearman's first charge was at Wallaceburg. He was then stationed at Belleville and Toledo of Campbellford, for one year.

Meeting at the Armstrong Funeral Home, Belleville, on Sunday, June 28, 1964, at 10 a.m. Interment in St. Gregory's Cemetery.

THE FEMININE WAY — Six robust men worked up a sweat moving a five-foot section of 100-lb. rail on Pinnacle Street last night, but the girls made it look easy. Here Mrs. Ellis, wife of Mayor Jack Ellis, Mrs. Clarence Boorman, wife of the Peterborough mayor, Mrs. A. M. Haig (hidden by Mrs. Ellis) and Mrs. Jane Root carry the rail with ease.

First Slice of Pinnacle St. Railway Track Is Lifted In Thursday Eve Ceremony

Six men signalled the end of a slice of Belleville railroad history last night. But applause drowned out any possible nostalgia.

With a mild flourish, the sexiet eased 168 pounds of steel track from the surface of Pinnacle Street—securely sealing off the downtown thoroughfare from railroad traffic for all time.

It was only a symbolic gesture. It also was a highly popular one.

It marked the first time in 100 years Bellevillians were glad to see the end of a railroad operation—in a town that owes much to the railroad.

It also climazed the events of Railway Week here—an occasion last night's event caused in the first place.

The Pinnacle Street right-of-way is an intimate part of Belleville's local history. Originally part of the Grand Junction Railway started in the 1870's, it was taken into the Grand Trunk system when its founders went broke. Later it became part of the nationalization legacy left to Canadian National. It lingered on into the automobile age as a CN sprotline, still an important link in local railroading — and a nuisance to the modern motorist.

But after last night it's goodbye to all that—for sure.

To add a vivid touch of the past to the symbol of the future, CN hauled down an old wood-burning locomotive to the track-lifting site.

Built in 1906, it was running on Canadian railways when the Pinnacle Street right-of-way was being laid.

Under its shade, last night's brief ceremonies were carried on opposite the Hastings County Court House.

HUNDREDS WATCH

Hundreds of spectators lined the sidewalks overflowed the courthouse lawn for the event. However, it's doubtful if many of them glimpsed the actual moment when the five-foot strip of track was raised.

A dress of photographers and other sightseers behind the traffic barriers crowded round the official party at the crucial moment.

Otherwise the ceremony went without a hitch and a clean heave brought the section of track — pre-cut earlier by a railroad work crew — out from the roadbed.

On one heaving end were Mayor Jack Ellis, Mayor Harry A. McLean Haig, CN area manager Jack Root and CN vice-president J. A. McDonald and Tommy Hunter and Gordie Tapp — the latter two on hand for a CBC show from the site following the ceremonies.

Members of the official party also were enthusiastic about the event.

"It marks the end of a sustance in terms of traffic," Mayor Ellis announced.

Mr. Haig, who instituted negotiations for removal of the tracks while mayor, said it may have been his biggest achievement in office and spoke in glowing terms of the co-operation of the CN and CPR.

"At one or two junctures in the negotiations I was afraid that, in spite of our efforts at diplomacy, things would not work out as we'd hoped they would. Fortunately for us they did."

Although the symbolic gesture has been made, it is not known when the tracks will actually be cleared off Pinnacle Street.

But the last word on that went to Mr. McDonald.

"This is not the beginning of the end . . . but the end of the beginning," he said.

Prior to the ceremonies a reception was held at the Hotel Quinte sponsored by CJBQ and the City of Belleville.

Two Stores Are Entered

Thieves pushed in a rear window air - conditioning unit to gain access to Walker Hardware on Front Street during the night.

However the resulting noise scared them off, say police.

In a second breakin, at Belleville Lumber and Building Supplies on East Dundas Street, detectives were still checking late this morning to ascertain what was missing.

Ask Ontario Police Board To Advise on Size of Force

TRENTON — By a majority vote, the Trenton Police Commission moved last night to request the Ontario Police Commission to "determine the number and composition of police force to properly police the town of Trenton". Voting for the motion were the commission secretary, Judge J. C. Anderson, and member Magistrate W. R. Phillip of Peterborough. Abstaining from voting was the commission chairman, Mayor James MacDonald.

At the same time, the two commission members voted to instruct "the officer in charge of the department", to institute a 40-hour week for the force, without allowance for overtime, as soon as the Ontario commission has ruled on the first motion.

It is the opinion of Judge Anderson and Magistrate Phillip that the department should be comprised of a minimum of 20 men, including a chief constable. The council has stated frequently that in its opinion, the department could be run efficiently and a 40-hour week instituted, with the present strength of 19 men, including the chief.

SHORT OF MONEY

The Trenton Police Commission and town council will also be advised that, since the $125,934.95 allotted by council in its 1964 estimates for the running of the department falls short by approximately $11,000 of the sum needed to allow for salary increases agreed upon by the members of the commission and the Trenton Police Association, there may not be any increase in the men's salaries in December and possibly for part of November.

The commission submitted a budget to the town of $136,-719.95, and when council in fact never and whether it would or would not accept the police budget, it allocated only $125,934.95 for police services.

Since the commission has not received Police Chief F. J. Taylor's official resignation, the members could not act on appointing an interim chief or a permanent man last night.

"We have had an informal communication to the effect that Chief Taylor means to resign to accept a post as advisor to the Ontario Police Commission," Judge Anderson said last night, "but we have yet to be advised of this formally. We expect his resignation to come within a day or so."

OPPOSED TO OVERTIME

All three members of the commission voted to "register a protest" over council's failure to pay overtime pay to the officers on monthly basis. The commission was advised by letter that council no longer meant to pay overtime.

Mayor MacDonald said last night that council thought the matter was settled by the police association in negotiations last year, could be included with the present force, with no necessity for the men getting overtime pay for working more hours than the 40 agreed upon.

"Council is being very highhanded in this matter," said Judge Anderson. "It evidently thinks it can bend the commission to its way of thinking by taking it out on the men."

"This is a matter which must be ironed, out," agreed Magistrate Phillp, "even if we have to get Milligan down." (Percy Milligan, chairman of the Ontario Police Commission.)

"In my opinion, any member of the force could take action against council over this," said the judge.

Two Police Cruisers Will Be Purchased

TRENTON — The Trenton Police Commission voted last night to call tenders for the purchase of two cruisers for the department. The cars must be equipped to suit the requirements of the local force, and if the tenders are all above the $6,000 allocated by council for the purchase, council will be notified. Meanwhile, the commission will not cancel its contract with a car rental firm until the cars have been bought.

TAKEN STEP FURTHER

Trenton town council's commendation of Constable Frederick Nokes for diving fully clothed into the bay and rescuing a man from drowning earlier this month, was taken one step further by the Trenton Police Commission last night when Mayor MacDonald, Commission Chairman, was asked to investigate "the possibility that some group or society might be asked to recognize the "heroic" action with a suitable award.

Heavy Leakage Found in Mains

TRENTON — Utilities manager James Page told the members of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission yesterday that workmen had located 901,000 gallons of water a day in leaks in the mains. The men have conducted leakage tests over 75 per cent of the town, and have recovered 307,000 gallons (per day) of water by the repair of the leaks.

A large leak in a main crossing the river has been discovered and skin divers will be employed to assist in repairing the crack in the pipe.

Following yesterday's meeting the commission drove in a body to the riverfront where a large garage, on a town road allowance, is placed directly over two 12-inch water mains. Council will be asked to see to the removal of the garage. At the same time, council will also be asked to have removed a concrete wall, built last year by a former dealer, and also on top of the water mains. When the mains have been repaired, the concrete would have to be removed.

River Pollution To Be Discussed With Commission

TRENTON—The members of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission voted yesterday to request a meeting in Toronto with Ontario Water Resources Commission officials to discuss pollution in the Trent River, caused, say the members of the local commission, by industrial waste being dumped into the river.

OWRC engineers, making a survey of the river water last year, said that the bad odor and taste of water from the river might be due to the weeds.

The ECAF Station to the east of the town is supplied with a million gallons of water a day from the river all year round and town residents, living in east Trenton, use a mixture of river and well water during the summer months when the canning factory in west Trenton is in operation.

The subject was introduced by Clifford A. Baker, who said the commission had "taken a lot of abuse" about the taste and odor of river water.

Charles Hilton, commission chairman, said that the town had spent a million-and-a-half dollars on the sewage treatment plant, at the instigation of the OWRC, to prevent river pollution, and he thought it was time the Ontario Commission spent some of its own money to see that the industrial waste was cleared up.

It was decided to call for a meeting with the OWRC officials in Toronto as the local members felt if an OWRC man was in Trenton he could give pertinent information on the subject would have been left behind in the minds of other officials in Toronto.

Choice of Poles Irks Committee From Council

TRENTON — It seems to be a case where someone is trying to fit a square peg into a round hole.

At yesterday's meeting of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission, Mayor James MacDonald said that the public works' committee of council having asked the PUC to install "seven or nine" modern street lights between Bay and Campbell Sts. and Dundas St. East, was not happy about the utilities' choice of poles. Three large wooden poles have been installed and at least four smaller, square, concrete poles. The council committee would like more uniformity.

Utilities manager James Page said that as for him, he was "fed up" with these particular poles. He said the location of the poles, (on paper), had been changed six times and the poles themselves had been moved twice. All at the instigation of the council committee. Once, they were moved because they landed up in the middle of the sidewalk allowance, which had been moved after the pole installation started. Changing the four square poles to round poles would now cost the town around $2,500, Mr. Page said. One large pole, near the Dominion Store, is going to cost $1,000.

Mayor MacDonald said that he felt the present situation was all due to a "lack of understanding." between the PUC and the committee. He said he felt the committee would be "thrown" when it found out the extra cost of the poles. The mayor said the committee's main concern was that one entrance to the town should present a "good appearance."

Utilities Will Seek More Information

TRENTON — In a letter from the Department of National Defence, read at yesterday's meeting of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission, the commission was asked to quote prices on supplying workmen to inspect, maintain, repair and service the town's three air raid warning sirens. These operations would start in April and carry out four times a year and reports submitted to the DND. At the same time, the commission would have to guarantee that experienced workmen would be on 24-hour call, should an emergency arise or should the sirens be sounded by accident.

Utilities manager James Page objected to the commission entering into an agreement with the DND as he said he didn't have the men to put on 24-hour call.

"The sirens aren't being used," observed Commissioner C. A. Baker. "What the Sam Hill is there to wear out on them? If a state of emergency arises, you won't find anyone around to overhaul them anyhow."

It was decided to make more investigation about costs of inspection, etc., to the commission and advise the DND.

GETS CERTIFICATE

The Trenton Public Utilities Commission has received a certificate, from the Canadian Division of the Water Works Association, "in appreciation of 20 years of service received," for the duration of the local commission's membership in the association.

It looks as if we are in for at least a small dose of escalation of the war in South-East Asia.

Escalation is the Madison Avenue substitute for Monty's "hit 'em for six" and General George Patton's plain-spoken "give 'em hell."

Today, though, even escalation is permissible only if the political climate is just right.

So, of course, the balloons have gone up. As anticipated, they show the prevailing winds are favorable for the escalation caper.

If it comes, this will be the world's first dividend from the emergence of Senator Barry Goldwater as a real power in U.S. politics.

Of course, it is President Lyndon Johnson who will order the escalation, if it comes, and it seems a little unfair to lump the blame on his rival's shoulders.

The plain truth is, however, that after the Senator's excursion into the realm of vegetation control, anything less than the scattering of a few atomic bombs in Viet Nam, Cambodia and Laos seems like peace mongering.

Our boy, Johnson, would not want to be accused of that and he has absolutely nothing to lose by getting tough, providing Goldwater is his opponent in the forthcoming presidential elections. No matter how tough he gets, nobody who favors a more moderate approach is going to vote for Goldwater as a protest. And he will almost certainly pick up some votes which would otherwise go to Goldwater.

So, in a sense, escalation of the war in South East Asia can be interpreted as a peace-making plan, a sort of backfire to check the rampages of the fiery Senator and make certain a few leaves and people are left around by the time 1968 arrives.

A Good Appointment

The appointment of Ernst Kneisel as acting industrial commissioner for Belleville will be received by local citizens with universal interest and general approval.

Mr. Kneisel brings to his new duties several assets, not all of which are generally enjoyed by men holding such offices.

He is at one and the same time a man with varied business experience, including service with major industries, and a man who knows Belleville intimately.

This combination should serve him in good stead in meeting many of the problems which will arise in the discharge of his duties. Not the least of the reasons why local citizens will hope for worthwhile results is the fact that Mr. Kneisel has shown his imaginative qualities in connection with the services offered by the Hotel Quinte of which he has been vice-president and director of sales.

It needs to be added, though, that obtaining new industries is seldom an easy job and is often one in which the hardest work goes unrewarded for lengthy periods. The atmosphere generated by this appointment should, perhaps, be one of reasoned hope, rather than of confidence. The latter would provide any reason to revise this attitude, it can be done easily and with pleasure.

Cutting the Cost of Government

Saskatchewan's new premier is a man to keep an eye on.

Not only did Mr. Thatcher confound the experts by defeating the strongly-entrenched CCF machine in Saskatchewan, but, into the bargain, he beat it with an "economy-in-government" platform.

Mr. Thatcher has already set to work to implement his election promises to cut the high cost of government. "A freeze has been put on new civil service hirings and the purchase of new cars; the number of cabinet ministers has been reduced; various government grants and donations have been slashed, and expense account travel has been curbed.

Mr. Thatcher says the reforms, so far, will save the province almost $500,000 annually and that his economy drive has scarcely begun. In all, Mr. Thatcher hopes to cut the cost of government in Saskatchewan by some $20 million.

What Mr. Thatcher seems to be proving is that the trend towards continually higher spending—manifest on virtually all levels of government today—is not an irreversible equation, granted there is a will to institute economies. This could prove to be a vote-getting formula elsewhere for politicians with enough imagination to try it.

Can Type By Breathing

By BRUNO FRIEDMAN
in UNESCO Features

By simply breathing very lightly in and out, a totally disabled patient lying flat on his back can work an electric typewriter at speeds of up to 100 words per minute. Or, the same patient can operate an electronically - controlled big - boring machine, and other precision machine tools.

This remarkable restoration of functional abilities is made possible by a pneumatic control system recently developed at the Electro-Mechanical Laboratory of the National Spinal Injuries Centre, Stoke Mandeville Hospital, Aylesbury, England. The design of the system, called a patient-operated selector mechanism or "possum", was sponsored by the Polio Research Fund.

Possum is based on the fact that even totally paralyzed individuals retain breathing functions. Only a very slight amount of breath pressure or suction is needed for its operation, so that it can be used even by iron-lung patients.

A plastic tube leading to the pneumatic switch is held in the mouth in much the same way as a pipe. When the patient puts into the mouthpiece a series of electrical pulses which control the equipment can be generated. The patient hears the pulses as a series of clicks, the number of clicks depending on the length of breath pressure is maintained. Suchlike clicks may produce a series of clicks, but of a different tone.

In operating an electric typewriter, letters are selected by various combinations of pressure clicks and suction clicks. For example, two pressure clicks and two suction clicks cause typing of the letter "A". Click combinations have been chosen so that the most used letters are coded by the least number of clicks.

The same principle is applied for the direction of modern electronically - controlled machine tools. In this case, too, various click combinations indicate each of the various functions of the tool.

With the basic Possum, the patient can learn to utilize a typewriter at a speed of 30 words per minute. However, a high-speed model has also been designed which uses two levels of breath pressure and two levels of suction, enabling typing speeds of up to 100 words per minute to be achieved.

Possum is but one of the direct self-sufficiency devices for the patient's own well-being — the controlling of his own bed, the heating system, bed tilt, telephone, TV, and turning the pages of a book.

Other present applications of Possum are the operation of electrical accounting machines and cordless telephone switchboards.

In History's Boneyard

Brantford Expositor

The study of early man, known as palaeontology, sounds as dry to most people as the old bones that make up its subject matter. It thrives largely to the efforts of one man, however, this science has been firing the imagination of large numbers of people at intervals.

Dr. Louis B. Leakey, a British anthropologist has been scrambling over the rocky slopes of Olduvai Gorge in Tanganyika, East Africa, for more than a generation. In recent years, he, and his chief assistant, his wife, have made finds that have revolutionized our knowledge of modern man's family tree.

His newest discovery, the bones of what he calls "zinj nibila" (able man), may push the roots of that tree back at least 1,000,000 years. That is even more revolutionary is that this pygmy man may have been more advanced than people which appeared hundreds of thousands of years later.

A picture of the prehistoric world is emerging in which various strains of men, and near-men lived and struggled — with nature and perhaps each other — and procreated and died. One of the types resulted in modern man. Which one, we do not yet know.

The question now is whether success will spoil Homo sapiens. Either he learns to get along with himself or there won't be anyone around to search for his bones someday.

Khrushchev Underrated

London Observer

Khrushchev is impulsive, amusing, homely. So it is not altogether surprising that Soviet intellectuals, historical romantics and believers in dignity have tended to underrate him — although the moral courage — needed to challenge the cherished illusions of your own past, and then to denounce Stalin. And he has scattered the seeds that enable him, for example, to stand the Chinese taunts of cowardice so well. He has rare qualities and we shall be lucky if his successor shares them.

Today in History

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

June 26, 1964 . . .

The French fortress of Louisbourg on Cape Breton Island surrendered to the British 208 years ago today — in 1758. Once the strongest citadel in North America, the fortress was hopelessly outdated. By 1745, 900 soldiers and 14,000 naval forces and more than 1,800 pieces of artillery, after occupying it, the British systematically destroyed all its defences.

1845—The UN charter was signed in San Francisco.

1908—The St. Lawrence Seaway was opened by Queen Elizabeth.

Big Spenders

Winnipeg Tribune

Contrary to rural habits in some countries, Western farmers have never been hoarders of money. Nor do they have money they spend it.

This fact is now being graphically demonstrated by the sale of agricultural machinery, particularly in Saskatchewan. Combines, tractors, cultivators, seed drills and all manner of ancillary equipment are being bought in expectation of favorable market conditions for some time in the future.

50 Was Old In Pepys' Day

Vancouver Sun

At one time world population was controlled. It increased at a reasonable rate, keeping measure with the increase in agricultural and manufacturing output. By and large, production and therefore prosperity increased a little faster than the number of people.

But the controls were abolished.

Two centuries ago there were probably a billion people in the world. Now there are more than three billion. Recent census show the explosion has outstripped predictions and by 2,000 A.D. — 36 years from now — there will be seven billion. We are outgrowing our production increase. Result, poverty and starvation.

The controls we abolished were early death in its many forms.

Three hundred years ago, out of every 100 children born in England 35 died in infancy. Now it is not many die out of each 1,000 born.

The extremes of human life remain about the same. Men and women then lived to three-score and ten several of their centuries and more. But many, many lower did it.

Samuel Pepys considered himself well into middle age at 50. His contemporaries were elderly at 45, old at 30. One who died at 37 was considered to have lived a ripe old age.

They lived faster than we did. And died faster. John Evelyn, the immortal diarist, lost five sons, only one of whom lived to become an adult. John Evelyn married a girl who died in motherhood. His favorite son died at six, already educated beyond his years. He could read Greek and compose Latin verse. His daughter Mary was an old maid at 34.

These are the conditions to which, if the population explosion continues, we will be reduced again. Leading medical, demographic and sociological scientists regard health standards and proper nourishment cannot be maintained throughout most, if not all, the world by the ways of growing population and congestion.

That is the case for world birth control. If we do not have it, the controls of early death will be automatically reestablished.

Tries to Stop Noisy Jets

London Free Press

It would be an ironic twist to the Age if conservation man were able to slow it down simply because technological improvements had to be continued.

There may be a legal precedent in a world case in Oklahoma City, where a district court judge ordered the Federal Government to halt supersonic flight tests over that metropolis. These were being conducted on a regular basis in a frank effort to find out how much sonic boom the public would stand.

Lawyer George Miskovsky couldn't stand very much. He argued that the sonic booms resulting from supersonic flights were "destroying, damaging, and weakening" the structures of private homes and business properties and he got his injunction. The tests were called off.

Oklahoma City's may prove to be a test case. Supersonic flights are scheduled to begin world-wide five or six years. They will not be an unmixed blessing. The United States Air Force has already paid hundreds of thousands of dollars for damaged greenhouses, shop windows and even chicken coops damaged by its Mach-3 fighters.

What is going to happen when scheduled flights start streaking across the countryside at 1,500 to 1,800 miles an hour, leaving a trail of shattered earthenware and cracked windows behind? How much time is mankind expected to pay for progress? They'll be somewhere twice as fast as he used to!

Even a neighbor's barking dog or a howling wife is a nuisance to folks trying to sleep. But how does the common man take action against an airline whose noise - producing pieces he cannot even see? Lawyer Miskovsky may have started something that million - dollar corporations can't stop.

To Your Good Health
Child Should Be Checked By Allergist for Bee Bite

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My two-year-old daughter is very allergic to mosquito bites. However, my worry is bee stings.

We live in an unincorporated area and anything is allowed. We have a neighbor who raises bees in his back yard. All the neighbors have complained. Now if my child swells up from a mosquito bite, what will happen if she should be stung by a bee? I just read about a man who was stung to death by a swarm of bees. — Mrs. H. W.

Most very small children swell and turn pink — more than we do — from a mosquito bite. The bite is the same size; the bitten child is much smaller than we are. So don't get too upset too soon.

Besides, an allergy to mosquito bites doesn't necessarily mean allergy to bee stings. As for the bees decides he's in danger. So he stings, even though he loses his stinger and dies.

I decline to be a referee to decide whether bees should or shouldn't be kept in populated districts. But I think, in fairness to the welfare and comfort of your little girl, if there are signs that she is really allergic, rather than normally sensitive to stings, then take her to an allergist. He has specialized tests, and can tell you how to protect her if necessary.

Even if not allergic, she'll be a mighty sad small girl if a bee does sting her. It may hurt her, but it won't harm her life's average. (Are you and your husband subject to allergies?)

And, recalling back in my memory, I recall that twenty-some years ago one of my own, a few months older than yours, came through the door, tearful and resentful, and announced angrily:

"The bee bited me! And I never bited it at all! And it did was pat it!"

Dear Dr. Molner: Our 18-year-old son is suffering from sickle cell anemia. He has such terrible cramps that it is affecting his mind. Is there anything we can do aside from giving painkillers? — Mrs. R. S.

Sickle cell anemia is a hereditary disorder seen primarily in Negroes although it is totally limited to them. It affects the oxygen-carrying capacity of the red cells in the blood, and in this case the shape is altered, too. They become crescent or sickle - shaped.

A crisis in this disease is due to the breakdown of these sickle cells. It is associated with terrible pain and fever, and can affect various parts of the body, such as the intestinal tract, kidneys, joints, etc.

Painkillers and blood transfusions are used to help a patient over a crisis.

Federal Government has supersonic flight tests over that metropolis. These were being conducted on a regular basis in a frank effort to find out how much sonic boom the public would stand.

Lawyer George Miskovsky couldn't stand very much. He argued that the sonic booms resulting from supersonic flights were "destroying, damaging, and weakening" the structures of private homes and business properties and he got his injunction. The tests were called off.

Oklahoma City's may prove to be a test case. Supersonic flights are scheduled to begin world-wide five or six years. They will not be an unmixed blessing. The United States Air Force has already paid hundreds of thousands of dollars for damaged greenhouses, shop windows and even chicken coops damaged by its Mach-3 fighters.

What is going to happen when scheduled flights start streaking across the countryside at 1,500 to 1,800 miles an hour, leaving a trail of shattered earthenware and cracked windows behind? How much time is mankind expected to pay for progress? They'll be somewhere twice as fast as he used to!

Even a neighbor's barking dog or a howling wife is a nuisance to folks trying to sleep. But how does the common man take action against an airline whose noise - producing pieces he cannot even see? Lawyer Miskovsky may have started something that million - dollar corporations can't stop.

NOTE TO Mrs. M.: Prostate gland trouble usually occurs among older men, from gradual enlargement of the gland. However, like any part of the body, it can occasionally be attacked by infection. It is unusual but not unknown in young men.

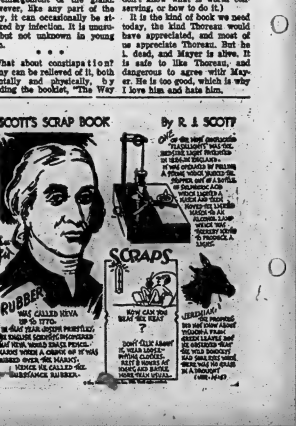
Strictly Personal
Dangerous to Agree With Author, Mayer

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS



"What Can A Man Do?" is a collection of articles by Milton Mayer, with a foreword by Father Martin Scharnlis, published by the University of Chicago Press. Practically nobody will buy the book, and practically nobody who buys it, and reads it, will agree with most of it.

Mayer is an old friend and enemy of mine, so I am partial, both ways. I love him and I hate him. I love him for his intellectual and moral virtues, and I hate him for the same reasons.

He makes me think hard, about myself, and you, and the world. And I do not like what he makes me think of. Too — while calling it angel's food cake. But Mayer won't let me do that. He is, for instance, what they call a "pushy pacifist." I am not a pacifist, so I don't like him. But when this pushy pacifist pushes me to the wall, and asks me what alternatives there are, I am suddenly mute and uncomfortable. "Realism" seems to be the only answer. For it seems to be on his. No wonder they poisoned Socrates; it was the only way they could get him to shut up.

This book is guaranteed to irritate almost everybody. The Big Government people and the Small Government people. The militarists and the communists. The Christians (or those who think they are), and the Jews (or those who think they are.) The One Worlders and the No Worlders. The Liberals and the reactionaries. (Illiberal), and the conservatives (who don't know what is worth conserving, or how to do it.)

It is the kind of book we need today, the kind Thoreau would have appreciated, and kind of we appreciate Thoreau. But he is dead, and Mayer is alive. It is safe to like Thoreau, and dangerous to agree with Mayer. And what makes this is why I love him and hate him.

Trust Company President Tells French-Canadians To Seek Economic Progress

MONTREAL (CP) — Marcel Faribault, president of La Trust General du Canada, called on French - speaking Canadians Thursday night to seek economic progress through their own efforts, not from the state.

"The progress of a nation is not that of the state but of its people," he said.

"It is not from the state that Quebec, or the French - Canadian, should expect economic success. It must come from himself, from his own reflection, his own effort, ambition and care for detail."

Mr. Faribault was addressing some 1,200 persons at the annual St. Jean Baptiste Society banquet, part of the week-long celebrations marking the feast day of French Canada's patron saint.

He said one of the needs of the new Canadian federalism is for greater consultation and co-operation between member states and the central state.

But progress was required of French-speaking Canadians too. They needed to heed and respect others to be able to work with them better. They needed to become masters of themselves before they could become masters at home.

"There is no other road to prosperity."

Mr. Faribault said the present climate for Quebec's economic development could not be more favorable.

"French-speaking Canadians could not hope for a better attitude from their compatriots in the pursuit of their economic development."

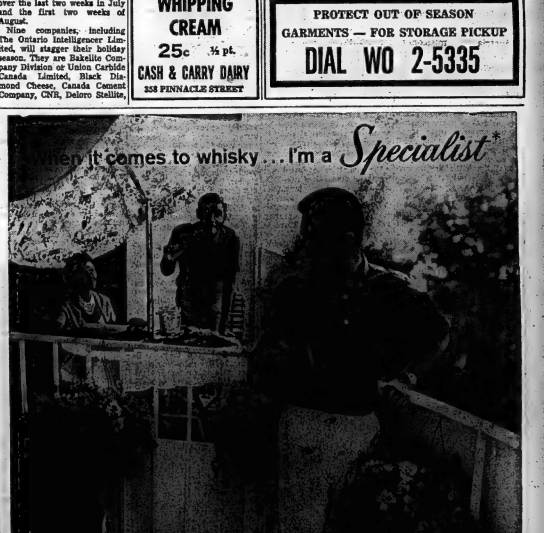
Driver Injured After Vehicle Is Sideswiped



A glancing sideswipe on Highway 37 sent a car out of control and its woman driver to hospital with minor leg injuries last night.

Injured was Mrs. Barbara Allen of Tweed.

Police say her automobile was hit by a car driven by Michael Hubert Leveck, also of Tweed, as Mrs. Allen was passing a line of traffic on a straight stretch of the highway about a mile north of Plainfield. Damage to her car was estimated at $700.

Mrs. Irish Wheelis, who married a U.S. serviceman in Melbourne and moved to Paragould, Kan., (pop. 10,000) 18 years ago, explained the townspeople raised the money for the trip by collecting the stamps in a community project.

lember that "the finished film will be yours to judge and approve, and then will contain nothing to which you object."

Reeves Haggis, supervisor of public affairs program for CBC, wrote in January withdrawing this commitment, saying it was "a degree of control over a CBC production never accorded to any other political leader and contrary to the corporation's well-established principles and practices. . . .

In the debate that followed, Douglas Fisher (NDP — Port Arthur) said he believed Mr. Pearson had not directly interfered to prevent the film being shown on television. But Mr. Fisher said he found it difficult to believe that political considerations were not in mind when cabinet ministers, members of Mr. Pearson's staff and Liberal Party Director Keith Davey reviewed the film to screen out anything private, secret or in bad taste.

Mr. Fisher also kicked off the side discussion of House procedures and mentioned the "unflamatory" words of closure. It inflamed some of his own party members.

He said that unless agreements can be made among party leaders to speed up legislative debates and thus get on with parliamentary business, the government might have to consider imposing closure.

"No, no," said Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), "I object." shouted H. W. Herridge (NDP — Kootenay West).

The only other alternative, Mr. Fisher said, was for the government and the whole Parliament and call a new general election to break the stalemate.

"I personally would prefer an election because I am not convinced that this government or this prime minister is ever going to act, with the kind of resolution which would enable them to use the other thing (closure)."

Gordon Churchill (PC — Winnipeg South Centre) said he would "reject and resist" any effort to limit debate. He is Conservative house leader, but admitted that he hasn't attended a house leaders' meeting for two months "for very good reasons."

Mr. Pearson said there were no grounds for suggesting, as Mr. Churchill did, that in the leaders' meetings the NDP, Social Credit, and Creditiste representatives teamed with the government against the Conservatives.

Mr. Knowles, chairman of a sub-committee on House procedure, said he is in the midst of negotiations with party representatives trying to work out some formula for, voluntary restricting of Commons time such as prevails in the British Parliament. This was far from closure, which he opposed.

The wildest scenes in the Commons Thursday involved Creditiste Leader Real Caouette. He accused Opposition Leader Diefenbaker of widening schisms between English and French Canada, and lying about minor-party support for the government in the new 112, 000 salary of MPs.

When asked to withdraw the lying charge, Mr. Caouette said he had been misunderstood while speaking French and meant, in English, that Mr. Diefenbaker had misled the public.

Louis-Joseph Pigeon (PC—Joliette - L'Assomption - Montcalm) said Mr. Caouette was a Canadian Mussolini. Mr. Caouette demanded a withdrawal but "pigeons and parrots."

Judge Calls Evidence 'Fantastic'

STRATFORD, (CP) — After hearing evidence he called "almost fantastic" Judge H. D. Lang Thursday sent Lawrence P. Hirras, 40, of London to two months for two years less a day.

Hirras, conducting his own defence, had pleaded not guilty to three charges of false pretences with the intent to defraud involving cheques he had cashed which had bounced.

The charges, plus three similar ones in Oxford county still pending, arose from dealings with 12 banks in three counties.

Police testified Hirras would cash as many as 16 cheques in a day at as many as six different banks, some of them 90 miles apart.

"The evidence of the police was almost fantastic. One can hardly believe it," said Judge Lang.

Referring to the $10,000 bank shortage which was the result of his cashing cheques, Hirras said: "How this whole thing started I don't really know. It just snowballed."

do not believe they will be implemented as written.

In a previous statement by the executive, the CMA said the method of providing medical services recommended by the commission would "in the long run impede the quality of medical care."

Dr. Elliot Corday, a Canadian now living in Los Angeles, expressed fear in an interview Thursday that such a plan would result in a "terrible" exodus of doctors from Canada.

But Dr. Osler Peterson of Regina, who has studied medical insurance plans in Europe, said he would have to be shown that such a plan would actually drive doctors to another country.

In convention Thursday the CMA's governing general council heard a report recommending among other things that sex education be taught in Canadian schools.

Dr. G. E. Duff Wilson, chairman of the physical education and recreation committee, said doctors should be considered as teachers in sex education since there are not enough qualified instructors.

The council endorsed a section of a committee report that all licensing authorities be asked to "give special study to all persons with alcohol problems who apply for driving permits."

The committee suggested that provincial divisions of the CMA seek the support of driving provincial governments and bar associations for changes in the Criminal Code provisions dealing with drinking drivers. There is a need for clear definitions of the degree of driving while impaired and driving while intoxicated.

Assistant Deputy Speaker Herman Batten said he couldn't find that on his list of unparliamentary words.

Mr. Caouette said Mr. Pigeon was a political clown. At another stage, a Conservative shouted "Hell Hitler" at Mr. Caouette.

At the final bell, Mr. Caouette and Mr. Pigeon were still trading insults—"stupid bore," and "pigeons and parrots."

000,000 — about three quarters of it from Canada, the rest from the United States which built two of the seven locks near Massena, N.Y., across the river from Cornwall, Ont.

At the same time, a $600,000,000 power project was erected near Cornwall, a massive job that created a huge man-made lake in the river, flooding seven shorelines villages and forming a new parkland along the riverfront.

LIFT SHIPS

The seven locks along the river west of Montreal are like a giant water staircase—lifting or lowering ships 568 feet from the ocean level to the top of the Great Lakes system at the Lakehead.

They replaced an old system of locks and channels along the north shore of the St. Lawrence that limited shipping to less than 14 feet in draught. The seaway depth is 27 feet.

Grain and iron ore are the big cargoes for which the seaway is really designed, although freight comes from around the world.

Giant lakers can haul 28,000 tons of grain, the produce of 31,000 acres of prairie farmland.

Tolls were set to pay for the capital cost of the seaway—largely at the insistence of the United States.

Revenues from tolls so far have failed to meet the interest charges on the seaway job, and there has been pressure to boost the fees so that the 50-year amortization schedule will be met.

However, many seaway experts believe that tolls will increase to such an extent in the years ahead that the 50-year deadline will be hit. Indications are a current review of the toll level will result in no change for another three to five years.

might be offered the premiership of the new government, they all agreed he is a key figure in any decisions that might be made.

Tight security precautions surrounded his arrival here today after an overnight flight from Brussels.

START VOTING SATURDAY

Adoula and other government leaders have the task of forming a new transitional government under a new constitution that will be voted on during a two-week national referendum starting Saturday.

The constitution has not been publicly opposed and seems certain to gain overwhelming support in the referendum.

Since various uprisings against the central government in the country during the last two months, there has been a growing demand in political circles for the transitional government to include many former rebel leaders as well as members of the present administration.

Besides Tshombe, another leader mentioned in this connection is Antoine Gizenga, former vice-premier in Patrice Lumumba's government, who has been held by the central government in "administrative detention" since early 1962.

Diplomatic officials said Tshombe's arrival today while Gizenga still remains in detention indicates the present administration wants to make its peace with Tshombe who represents the Congolese "right-wing" before dealing with Gizenga on the "left."

Two Couples Narrowly Escape Death

OTTAWA (CP) — A honeymoon couple from Indianapolis and a Montreal couple narrowly escaped death when their sailboat overturned in Crystal Bay on the Ottawa River west of the city Wednesday.

Dr. Ray Doucette, 34, of Indianapolis and Michel Allaire, 22, of Montreal spent three hours clinging to the overturned boat before they were rescued by a launch.

Mr. Doucette's wife, Bobbie, 22, and Mrs. Allaire, 23, who are strong swimmers, swam two miles to shore for help. They were in the water for nearly 3½ hours.

representatives about the impact of Canadian-limited fences proposal on joint Canada-U.S. defence co-operation. He assured it is unlikely there would not be a decline in Canada's co-operation with the allies and existing arrangements would be made to continue the international flow of defence information.

Asked whether the U.S. ministers, who also included Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon, exerted pressure to get Canada to increase its defence outlays, Hellyer said he wouldn't say there was pressure, though it was obvious that a number of allies, like Canada, thought they would like to see the maximum defence effort made.

He found "very favorable reaction" to his explanation of how Canada planned to pursue her role in international peace-keeping operations through a mobile force that could be linked with other Commonwealth, Scandinavian forces and others that may be developed in Asia and Africa. He said he didn't see Canada's decision to send troops to Cyprus won praise among the Americans.

Asked whether the future of U.S. military aircraft overflights of Canada was discussed, Hellyer said this matter was not brought up and he "presumed" therefore that the U.S. is satisfied with existing Canadian procedures for allowing such flights.

Finance Minister Walter Gordon said that in talks with military discussions, he also held talks with Dillon on the Canadian auto industry plan and the proposed U.S. tax on foreign security sales.

He found Dillon understood that through the automotive plan — granting tariff rebates equal to increased automotive exports—Canada was in effect trying to reduce tariffs ad agreements trade quota by. Minister Gordon said he himself has gained increasing acceptance among the fiscal representatives of the automotive industry both in Canada and the U.S. However, some independent U.S. auto parts manufacturers have lodged complaints against the program and the U.S. customs bureau now is gathering information before deciding whether to recommend countervailing duties against imports of Canadian automotive parts.

Gordon said he realized that under U.S. law Dillon is bound technically to consider the question of whether such duties should be applied. Gordon added that he is hopeful such duties would be rejected by the treasury.

DEAR DORIS — As a social worker, don't you think you take a chance when you advise a reader without knowing the other side of a story? — A FAN OF YOURS.

DEAR FAN — Yes, I do. Which is why I suggest choices, confine my counsel to pretty reliable principles, and send people off to where they can get personal counselling when the problem is complicated. Also, my private replies are often longer than there is space for in the column, and cover more angles.

There are times when all a thoughtful person needs is to be pointed in the right direction. One correspondent wrote a second note to say "It hadn't even occurred to me that any of the fault could lie with me. Just today my husband remarked that I seemed so much more understanding lately. I was so grateful that I just had to write and let you know."

That letter set me up in business for a month!

s willing to spend it.

But the United States has no intention of getting into a ground war with China unless there's no other way out.

What the U.S. would do, officials here explained in private, is to apply its massive air power. China's air force would be virtually helpless to halt such an assault.

If China infiltrated the jungles of Laos and Viet Nam in a guerrilla offensive on a big scale, it would be hard to halt such a surge on the ground.

WOULD HIT SUPPLY LINES

But U.S. aircraft could be expected to hit hard at the sources of supply and reinforcement in China, at highways and railways, if necessarily at industrial centres and bases deeper in the country.

U.S. intelligence has pinpointed a series of military bases and a vast network of roads and railways radiating from South China's Yunnan province toward North Viet Nam and Burma.

Some seven U.S. military men long have advocated hitting at bases and transportation facilities in south China from North Viet Nam to choke off supplies to the Communist guerrillas infesting Laos and South Viet Nam.

Although short on major modern military weapons, the Chinese have plenty of small arms and ammunition—and this is the sort of thing it takes to support guerrilla operations.

Available U.S. marines and airborne troops in the Pacific is too thin to undertake major, sustained ground war. But the U.S. ace in the game are nearly 3,000 military planes in the Pacific, plus the 125 ships of the 7th Fleet, ranged along the Asian coast.

U.S. HAS AIR BASES

U.S. warplanes—most of them faster, more manoeuvrable and heavily armed than the Chinese—can strike at China from bases on Okinawa, Formosa, Philippines, South Viet Nam, Thailand—and Japan, although political considerations might prevent this.

The 7th Fleet has three big carriers from which marine and navy fighters and bombers could be launched against the mainland.

This is what the Chinese have, based on intelligence reports:

1. An air force of about 2,400 planes, chiefly elderly fighters —MIG-15s and MIG-17s. As much as half of this force has been immobilized by a shortage of fuel and a need to take parts from some planes to keep others flying. Some medium and long range bombers and a few transports. The 75,000 air force men include about 10,000 pilots.

2. People's liberation army of 2,000,000 men formed into 180 divisions. About three are armored divisions, one is airborne, some are cavalry for desert operations and the great mass are infantry.

China produces about 300 tanks a year, a variety of howitzers, mortars and artillery, plus a missile with an effective range of about 10,000 yards. Some 400,000 Soviet T-style bury made a year, plus other small weapons.

3. A navy of about 135,000, which includes marines. An air arm of about 500 MiG-17s. Some 30 submarines, about half equipped for mine-laying.

Sunday School Lesson

Join in Circles of Love

By Dr. Clarence W. Cranford

"In his book, "God Was In Christ," (Chas. Scribner's Sons, 1948) Dr. Donald M. Baillie says that God seems for men to live and work together like children joining hands in a circle to play a game, each facing the leader who stands in the circle to direct the play. In the case of mankind, God wants us to join hands in a circle of understanding and brotherhood, each facing the centre where God shines as the Light to illuminate their activities. In such a circle of faith and understanding, men see the way the Light shines on the faces of the others in the circle. In other words, each begins to see others the way God sees them.

But, says Dr. Baillie, something has gone wrong. Men have turned their backs on God. They no longer see the Light in the centre and the faces in the circle. All they see is the shadows of their own inner emptiness and fears. The shadows frighten them, so they dance to try to forget them, but the shadows only become the more frightening. And when fears surround, face toward God, and rejoin hands in a great work of love and service.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for July 4th is "The Family of Fellowship of Christians," Ephesians 2:11-22; 4:1-16.

In this kind of a world, suggests Dr. Baillie, God is trying to create a new family which can demonstrate His intention to the world. That smaller circle is the family, fellowship, of the church. Unfortunately, the church in the world is divided by that spirit in which churches are drawn together to bear a common witness to their faith in Christ in spite of their differences concerning various other matters in the church.

It was this spirit of unity the author of Ephesians had in mind when he urged Christians to grow toward "the unity of the faith and the knowledge of the Son of God." (Ephesians 4:13). The more Christians can achieve unity, the more "man-sized" they become in the work of the kingdom.

BASIS FOR UNITY

There are seven things, says Ephesians, that make for such unity. The seven are: one body, one Spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and one God and Father of us all. The one body is, of course, the church. This church is vitalized by one Spirit, that is, God's Spirit who leads it to one hope of salvation. It is united also to the one Lord, Jesus Christ, leads the church to one unifying faith, and to one baptism as the act of baptism. All this leads mankind to see relationship to the one God and Father of all who is around and all in all.

With regard to that with all these common elements in their faith, Christians sometimes divide into various denominational lines. This, says Ephesians, is contrary to Christ's will who spent his cross for all men. In so doing, he "has broken down the dividing wall of hostility" Ephesians 2:14. It is that had existed between the Jewish and Gentile world. Now, in the Christian church, is free from both groups who share faith in Christ are "made both one" (Ephesians 2:14).

NEEDED—WRECKING CREW

As walls of different cultures and prejudice tended to divide the world, Christians in Gentile Christians in the early church, so walls of prejudice still tend to divide some Christians from others. In the 18th Psalm, the author makes an interesting boast. "And by my God," he says, "I can leap over a wall." But there are some walls of distrust and fear which millions of people cannot jump, it isn't high enough, or long enough or high enough. We must get rid of the walls that divide Christians from one another.

The author of Ecclesiastes says there is "a time to break down and a time to build up." (Ecclesiastes 3:3) Walls of pride and prejudice must be broken down before a true spirit of unity in the church can be built up. This can be done if Christians will meet to seek and pray for the coming of one kingdom, even God's kingdom, because they believe in one Lord, even Jesus Christ. In His name they should forget their differences, and join hands in one great mission to extend His love and spirit to the ends of the earth. This can be done if each Christian will give himself to the one purpose of exalting Christ in His life and in His relationships to all men.

Johnson

ferred earlier with Ikoza in New York.

The official said that while it appears direct Greek - Turkish talks will not take place immediately as President Johnson wants, "the situation is by no means hopeless."

EXPRESSES CONCERN

The Canadian minister met the two leaders to express Canada's concern over the Cyprus question, particularly in the light of Canada's deep involvement through the 223-member Canadian peace-keeping force on Cyprus. Martin said he hoped that no step would be taken that would prove harmful to the Atlantic alliance.

Canada may be asked to supply more men to the force as a result of Britain's decision to pull out some of her troops of about 800 to 850 of the 1,800 men assigned to the force.

A UN spokesman said Thursday the British cuts will leave the force "still a good deal short" of its strength of 6,400 and that Secretary - General U Thant plans to ask other countries already in the force to send more men to fill the gap.

Fearful of open warfare between the two North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies, Johnson tried to envisage Ikoza and Papandreou that they should open direct diplomatic negotiations on a Cyprus settlement.

The Greek-Cypriote outnumber the Turkish minority on Cyprus almost five to one, and Greece advocates self-determination for the eastern Mediterranean island. Turkey firmly rejects Enosis—union of Cyprus with Greece.

ASKS CONCESSIONS

Johnson told both men their countries need to move to make concessions, but argued this is in the interest of preventing a war between NATO allies and blocking a new Communist thrust into the area. Russia is expected to have proposed heavy arms aid to the Greek-Cypriot government.

After ending Johnson Monday and Tuesday, Ikoza reportedly have left with the understanding that he would go along with negotiations if they prove feasible. Papandreou saw the president Wednesday and again Thursday and turned down his appeal.

County Council Endorses Action of Govt.

PICTON (Staff) — The proposed development of the Sandbanks has been endorsed unanimously by Prince Edward County Council.

The motion carried at the June meetings reads as follows:

"That this council endorse the proposal of the Department of Lands and Forests to develop the Sandbanks in the county of Prince Edward and to construct a road from the village of Wellington to the Sandbanks."

This council is of the opinion that a public park in this area in the close proximity of the superb park at the Outlet would far outweigh the disadvantages suggested by any groups opposing the development of the Sandbanks as a provincial park. The council is further of the opinion that if the Sandbanks are going to be enjoyed by the general public as a whole it is necessary that development take place to provide for the maximum use and access. Copies of the resolution are being sent to Premier Roberts and Hon. Kelso Roberts.

Mature Women Now Entering Labor Force

OTTAWA (CP)—The average married woman today will work about 25 years outside her home, says Helen Traynor, newly appointed assistant to the director of the federal labor department's women's bureau.

This means that mature women, some of whom had never been given training in skilled work, will be entering the labor force in increasing numbers once their families are old enough.

And it might be necessary to find short cuts for teaching them the necessary skills as quickly as possible.

Miss Traynor says an experimental course in nursing to be conducted for women between 30 and 50 at the new Quo Vadis School of Nursing in Toronto is being watched closely.

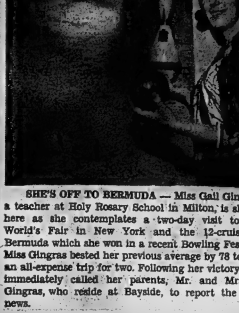
The course, starting in September, will offer mature women a chance to accomplish in a two - year course what younger women attempt in three. Examination will be set by the College of Nurses of Ontario.

Miss Traynor says education-ists will be interested in seeing how these mature women compared with younger women taking the regular three - year course. Success might mean the establishment of a pattern for opening up other professions to mature women.

Miss Traynor, assistant to director Marion V. Royce, is a commerce graduate of Sir George Williams University in Montreal. She was a youth counsellor with the National Employment Service in Montreal from 1944 to 1957 and, before taking her new job, she was in the economics and research branch of the labor department.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE



The engagement is announced of Edna Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Camille Brumsey, 63 Donald Street, to James Alfred Butler, son of Mrs. Bella Butler, Bonfield, and the late Mr. Samuel Butler. The marriage will take place on Saturday, August 15, at 10:30 a.m. at Holy Rosary Church, Belleville.

Mrs. Mabel Reid, Mrs. Clara Goodfellow, Mrs. Betty Osborne and Mrs. Martha Gray motored to Sault Ste. Marie last Sunday and returned home Tuesday. Mrs. Gray remained there where she will spend a month with Mrs. M. Parks.

On Monday evening Mrs. Maud Hepworth of Brussels street, Belleville opened her cottage on the bay shore for a surprise party for Elenor (Lena) Copeland, when 23 friends gathered to wish her a happy birthday. Games, cards and dancing were enjoyed before the guests sat down to a long table where a variety of good food was arranged, including a birthday cake made and decorated by Mildred Priddle. A presentation to the guest of honor was made by Mrs Palmer on behalf of the girls. Lena graciously expressed her thanks for the party and the gift.

SHE'S OFF TO BERMUDA — Miss Gail Gingras, a teacher at Holy Rosary School in Milton, is shown here as she contemplates a two-day visit to the World's Fair in New York and the 12-cruise to Bermuda which she won in a recent Bowling Festival. Miss Gingras bested her previous average by 78 to win an all-expense trip for two. Following her victory Gail immediately called her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Gingras, who reside at Bayside, to report the good news.

WEDDING

HILLS — TOWES

FRANKFORD — A lovely summer wedding was solemnized on Saturday, June 13th, at 2.30 p.m. in the Gospel Hall, Bancroft, when the officiating clergyman, Mr. A. B. McCorkey of Detroit, Michigan, united in marriage Donna Marie Towes, of Toronto, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil M. Towes of L'Amable, and Gerald James Hills, only son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Hills of Frankford. The church was decorated with baskets of spring bouquets.

The traditional wedding music was played by Mr. Maynard Schutt of Deloro, who accompanied the soloist, Miss Marlene Wannamaker of Deloro, cousin of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full length bridal gown, of white silk organza over taffeta. Seed pearls decorated the neckline and the full length chapel train. Her headpiece was a crown of seed pearls holding a waist length veil and she carried red Sweetheart roses on a white Bible.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Dianne Kelly of Whitby, who wore a blue silk organza dress with white accessories and carried white mums surrounding colorful carnations. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Bill Rushlow of Belleville, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Linda Connors of Oshawa, and Mrs. Wayne Nelson of Stockdale, sister of the bridegroom. All were identical dresses of white lace over blue taffeta with white accessories and carried white mums surrounding multi-color carnations.

Flower girl was little Miss Kathy Wannamaker, cousin of the bride, who wore a white chiffon dress and white accessories and carried a bouquet of mixed flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Barry Campbell Duguid, Belleville, are pictured following their recent marriage in Parkdale Baptist Church. The bride is the former Marilyn Joanne Rodgers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merven J. Rodgers, Bloomfield. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon S. Duguid, Belleville.

DUGUID — RODGERS

Parkdale Baptist Church, Belleville was the setting for a wedding ceremony on June 6 at 2 p.m., when Marilyn Joanne Rodgers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merven J. Rodgers, Bloomfield was united in holy matrimony to Barry Campbell Duguid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon S. Duguid, Belleville. The Rev. Michael A. Twilley, assisted by the Rev. Kenneth Cairns performed the double - ring ceremony before a background of pale blue and white mums and gladioli accented by arrangements of ferns.

The bride was escorted down the aisle on the arm of her father wearing a pure white taffeta bridal gown with a delicate floral design which featured a flowing chapel train of contrasting plain white taffeta. Her shoulder - length bouffant veil flowed from a headpiece of tiny white roses and she carried a bridal bouquet of pink roses.

Mrs. Beverley Foster, Canniton presided at the organ and accompanied the soloist Mr. Lamont Parks in two appropriate selections including a number which he had written and composed himself.

Miss Rhea Rutter, Toronto as maid of honor and the bridesmaids Miss Elizabeth Simpson, Brighton and Miss Margaret Rodgers, Toronto, sister of the bride were identically attired in floor length pastel blue gowns made of the same fabric as the bride's. These were highlighted with short sleeved waist length jackets and bell - shape skirts. Their headpieces were blue scalloped veils caught together by small roses of self fabric. They wore white accessories and carried cascade bouquets of white mums with flowing white ribbons.

Mr. Eugene Badgley, Corbyville, was groomsman, while Mr. Larry Soule and Mr. Robert Doogan, both of Belleville were the ushers.

The wedding reception was held outside at the Maple Inn, Bloomfield where the mother of the bride received the guests wearing a blue sheath dress of boucle with matching jacket and a corsage of yellow roses. She was assisted by the mother of the bridegroom who wore a mint green linen dress with a matching three - quarter lace coat and a corsage of yellow roses.

Immediately following the reception the parents of the bride entertained the guests, where the young couple departed for a wedding trip to New York and the World's Fair. The bride chose a navy blue linen sheath with white accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Previous to the marriage the bride was entertained at miscellaneous showers given by co-workers at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce; by friends held at the home of Mrs. Grace Ford and by members of the Parkdale Baptist Church at which time the couple was presented with a family Bible on behalf of the congregation.

Mr. and Mrs. Duguid are residing at 312 MacDonald Avenue, Belleville.

Ann Landers

Mother Cites the Dangers Of Leaving Tots Unattended

DEAR ANN LANDERS — A terrible tragedy occurred in our city recently. My husband was the physician who attended four little fire victims. They ranged from three years of age to ten.

The parents were "down the street" at a party when the house caught fire. They saw nothing wrong in leaving the youngsters alone. Three of the children died. The seventh child survived, but he is so broken-hearted and bitter that he refuses to speak to his parents.

What manner of madness seems to have gripped parents these days? You need only to read the newspapers to know how frequently youngsters are left alone, and burn to death. If the gay party is so important, isn't it worth the price of a sitter?

I am asking for your help, Ann Landers. You have the largest reading audience in the world. Please alert thoughtless parents to the fact that children under 12 need an adult in the house whether they are asleep or awake.

Most parents accept this responsibility gladly. If a tragedy does occur, they can face God and each other without guilt. — A MOTHER, TOO.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR MOTHER — Here it is for all mothers to see. I hope with you that they will heed the warning and not have to learn the ghastly lesson first hand.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I was deeply disappointed in your answer to "Oys-Gashpilt." The poor gal was sick and tired of carrying the financial load for husband and you gave her precious little comfort.

To begin with, I don't know if you speak German but "Oys-Gashpilt" means "played out." After 25 years of pulling that barge and toting that bale, it's not hard to understand how a wife could be plenty fed up.

You told her the guy had tried and financial failure is no reason to leave a husband. You then advised her to stick with the bummer because Cary Grant is not waiting for her.

Well, for your information Cary Grant recently celebrated his 60th birthday, so it just might be that he, too, is "Oys-Gashpilt." You flubbed it, Doll. Ten lashes with an unemployment compensation cheque for you. — ONE ADMIRER LESS.

DEAR ONE — I have no intention of discussing in print who is "Oys-Gashpilt" and who isn't.

Age is only a number, Baby.

I'm sorry if I let you down but it's impossible to be all things to all people every day — 365 days a year.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — For 12 years my husband has been having high school type romances. (He calls them "friendships.")

I have tried to be a sweetheart as well as a wife, but he doesn't seem to notice. Every new job and new location (he has had four) brings him new "friends."

I can't leave for three good reasons, so please don't suggest it. I've tried to talk to him about the problem but he insists it is purely friendship. Once he said, "If you don't stop making such ridiculous accusations, I'm going to live up to your low opinion of me." So you see he has me cornered.

I've tried smiling and pretending not to notice, but my stomach is tied up in knots. What can I do? — SMILING ME.

DEAR YOU — Unless you have solid evidence (you have none in your letter) assume that he is faithful.

If you have the goods on him, however, and you can't leave for "three very good reasons" then knock off the complaints, turn on the heat and hope he grows out of his adolescence and into manhood before his children get old enough to notice.

Do you lack self-confidence . . . have trouble making friends? If so, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Be Well-Liked," enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Mr., Mrs. Fred Campbell Happily Wed 50 Years

Congratulations on 50 years of married life were received Wednesday by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell, 5th concession Sidney, near Foxboro, as they were "at home" to more than 200 visitors on their golden wedding anniversary.

But after living at their farm for their entire married life, the 50-year-wed couple soon will move to Belleville and next week there will be another party.

This time the party will be a community farewell gathering, with residents of the area paying tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Campbell before they move to their new home.

ACTIVE CHURCH WORKERS

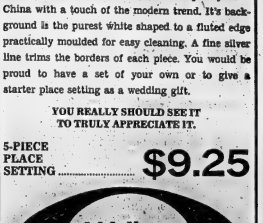
Mr. Campbell was born "across the road" from the farm on which he and Mrs. Campbell have spent their married life. Mrs. Campbell is the former Pearl Hollinger and was born at Moira.

Active church workers until they stepped down a year or so ago "to make room for the younger people," Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are member of the Marsh Hill United Church. Mr. Campbell sang in the choir there for over 50 years, while Mrs. Campbell played the organ, sang in the choir and acted as Sunday school teacher.

Wednesday the Marsh HUH church women in a small measure, repaid Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell, 5th concession Sidney, near Foxboro, as they were "at home" to more than 200 visitors on their golden wedding anniversary.

But after living at their farm for their entire married life, the 50-year-wed couple soon will move to Belleville and next week there will be another party.

FORMER COUNCIL MEMBER



Mr. Campbell has also been active in municipal affairs, serving on his township council for nine years, two of which were as reeve of the municipality. Mrs. Campbell held office in the local and district Women's Institute organizations.

They have one son, Professor Ralph Campbell, now acting as economist with the Jordanian government as member of the Ford Foundation.

Professor Campbell and his family are returning to Canada this summer. Starting in September he will lecture at Toronto University.

Organized Farm Women In World Do Fine Work

By JEAN SHARP

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP)—Work being done by organized farm women in the world ranges from exchanging cook books with women in Rajasthan to bringing observers from Fiji to international meetings, the triennial convention of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada was told Thursday.

Mrs. Keith Read of Port Williams, N.S., vice-president for Canada of the Associated Country Women of the World, was reporting to the five-day convention of Acadia University here on the activities and organization of the ACWW.

Mrs. Read told the 289 delegates at the women's institutes conference that "one of our greatest tasks is to give each and every member an awareness of the organization as it is today." A member of any women's group in the world is automatically a member of the Associated Country Women.

The association claims 7,000,000 members in 166 women's organizations, she said. The ACWW has consultative status with such United Nations organizations as UNESCO and UNICEF.

RIDICULE WOMEN

Through the group's Lady Aberdeen scholarships, women were being educated in their own countries and at universities in other lands.

Work with Indians, Eskimos and whites in Canada's northland has been growing steadily with the institutes.

There are 11 active institute branches in the north, 10 of them in the Mackenzie district and one in the Yukon. Five years ago there were none.

The ACWW has sent a field worker to the north for two months this summer to help give scholarships to northern Canadians as a centennial project.

Resolutions passed Thursday included a request for freer divorce laws.

URGES EXTENSION

The resolution urged "that grounds for which divorces can be granted in Canada be extended to include cruelty, incurable insanity and desertion. It will be presented to the federal government by the executive.

Another resolution suggested legislation to prohibit the sale of mineral-based detergents to "prevent the chemical companies from contaminating the water supplies of Canada—and so endangering the health of our citizens."

Mrs. Philip Matheson of Oyster Bay Bridge, P.E.I., was elected to a three-year term as national president to succeed Kingston.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LAWES

WHAT'S YOUR R. S. V. P.

Are you the type of hostess who manages to keep a cool head when entertaining in hot weather? Here's a test:

1. Do you send out invitations well in advance? This is particularly important during the summer, when so many people are away on vacation and substitutions have to be made. Mail early to avoid a last minute smart up.

2. Do you consider ventilating and plant problems before guests arrive? Sunny windows should be shaded so the room won't get overheated and, of course, the room should be well ventilated so it doesn't become too close from the crush.

3. Do you plan a menu that's on the light side and can be kept slightly warmed in case dinner is delayed, or service is planned for the lawn or patio?

4. Do you plan your menu well in advance, so you're not shopping early in the week, to avoid having to rush around on the day of the party?

5. Do you do the necessary cleaning and polishing a day or two before, so you can be cool and collected at guest-time?

6. Do you get to bed early on the morning of a party day, and leave only the slightest chores — the minor tidy salad or garnishing the main dish — for the last moment?

7. Do you arrange to have everything done a few hours before the party is to start, to give you time for a refreshing shower and a leisurely make-up job? Perhaps, even, a short rest in a dark room or bed, to calm down?

8. Are you ready to start receiving the minute the bell rings? When you're dressed and coiffed a half-hour before guests are expected, you can then quietly check every detail of the arrangements without a bit of worry.

9. Have you started a good friendly chat you might need a helping-hand in case details gang up on you and you need help in clearing in order to avoid delay in service? If not, get your helper lined up before sitting down to eat.

10 Do you plan entertainment of the relaxing kind that doesn't require a lot of activity on hot evening? Talking or listening to music is pleasant summer fare. Bridge and other frantic games may be fine and full of fun in the winter, but in the summer they are too exhausting. Make more sedentary amusements part of your warm weather plans, so everyone will manage to keep a cool head.

The thought-provoking question "If our Bibles were confiscated banned" for future use what would each treasure first and foremost?" and various answers were given. A prayer of thankfulness was offered by Mrs. Swan, for those writers, authors and publishers who make the reading of the Bible possible.

RESUME OF VISIT

Mrs. Mabel Treverton gave a resume of her visit to the Covenant College and Mrs. Swan gave a short talk on the work and progress of the Victor Home.

The July meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Yorke on July 1st, instead of regular day with Mrs. Grills and Mrs. Hayes conveners.

The hostess, with co-hostess Mrs. Lyle Martin, served dainty refreshments.

Readers' Friday Column

by Mary Moore

QUESTION: I wish you could help me with the summer meals. I'd like a good recipe for potato salad, macaroni salad, scalloped potatoes. I came from the old country and I am afraid I just don't seem to make them the same as here so if you would be so kind I would be very happy. — Anxious.

ANSWER: Would you mind always in future giving me your name and address on a stamp ed envelope? You see these recipes have appeared in this column before and space is at a premium for giving new recipes as often as possible. All measurements in the following recipes are level.

FRIDAY

Dinner Menu

Batter Fried Haddock; Lemon Wedges; Buttered Rice; Creamed Broccoli; Endive and Shredded Cauli-flower Salad with Roquefort Dressing; Butter Tarts; White Cream Cheese; Coffee.

POTATO SALAD

2 cups diced cooked potatoes
2 tablespoons diced onion
½ teaspoon salt
few grains pepper
¼ cup French dressing
¾ cup mayonnaise (or less)
3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped lettuce and tomato wedges for garnish.

Combine potatoes, onions and seasonings. Add French dressing and mix lightly. Chill for 2 hours. Add mayonnaise and toss lightly. Blend in chopped eggs. Serve on lettuce and garnish with tomato wedges. Serves 6.

FAVORITE MACARONI SALAD (serves 6 to 8)

1 lb. tiny macaroni shells or bows
1 green pepper
1 cup chopped tender inner celery
6 radishes
¾ mild Spanish onion
10 ripe or green olives, stoned and chopped
¼ cup chopped blanched almonds
1 to 1¼ cups mayonnaise
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper (preferably white)

Cook the macaroni shells or bows in a very large amount of boiling water until tender, then drain well and chill. Slice or shred all of the vegetables and combine in the macaroni with the nuts, mayonnaise and seasonings. Chill. This is lovely in a tossed green salad garnished with tomato wedges and sliced stuffed olives, or as a filling for scooped-out tomatoes.

SCALLOPED POTATOES

6 medium-sized potatoes salt pepper
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter milk
1 teaspoon grated onion (optional)

Pare raw potatoes and slice very thin. Place in a deep baking dish a layer of the potatoes 1" deep, season with salt (about 1 teaspoon in all) and pepper and onion, if used. Sprinkle a portion of the flour over each layer, add a part of the butter in bits. Repeat and continue until all are used. Add milk until it can be seen between the slices of potato, cover (see note) and bake at 350 to 400 deg. Fahr. until potatoes are tender when pierced with a fork, 1 to 1½ hours. Remove the cover during the last 15 minutes to brown top. Serve from the baking dish. Serves 5 or 6. Note: Since the dish should be covered it must be deep or milk will boil over in oven. For small family of 2 or 3 make only half of this recipe.

U.C.W. Meeting

STONE CHURCH U.C.W.

4TH SIDNEY—The regular meeting of Stone United Church was held recently in the church hall with an average attendance. The president, Mrs. E. Demorest, opened the meeting with a read..

Business was dealt with and a bake sale was formed to make plans to cater for an approaching wedding; the packing of a bale and gifts for poor unfortunate children to be included; a Sunday School picnic to be held July 8 at Presqu'ile Point, and the Mission Band children will put on a program at the school with the U.C.W. to serve lunch.

Mrs. Miles Benedict as program convener read and explained the Scripture. Mrs. O. Chisholm gave a full report of her three-day visit to Five Oaks at Paris in which she stressed the need for all to do their share in church work and said in part, "Respond willingly with a friendly attitude, a little bit of goodness may mean so much to others. Don't let the world around you pour into a poor mould. We should all set aside time for Bible study and personal religion." A humorous reading was given and a well enacted skit was put on by Mrs. O. Chisholm, Mrs. E. Demorest with narration by Mrs. J. Cooper, while Miss Joan Chisholm presided at the piano.

All enjoyed refreshments served by Mrs. A. Vermilyea and Mrs. H. Gray.

Wood Replacing Snow as Arctic Home-Building Material

The cold wind whistled along the snowy streets of Apex Hill, at Frobisher Bay on Baffin Island. From the windows of a few of neat wooden houses, bright lights cheered the dark winter afternoon.

Inside one of the houses, a young Eskimo carpenter, or truck-driver, looking around his home, might have reflected on the changes that had taken place in his way of living. Not too long ago he was living off the land, using skills that had been handed down for generations. Home for him then had been hacked down for generations using new skills, recently acquired, and living in a well-built home that was warm when even the coldest winds blew. The house was a far cry from the spiralled blocks of the snow house, and he was proud to have had a part in building it.

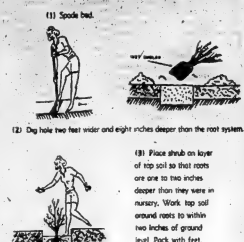
Like most of the low-cost houses in Apex Hill, it was a shade of grassed-skin panels sheathed on both sides with plywood; the wood frame of the panel was packed with glass fibre to prevent heat loss, and the panels were made to such a way that they could be easily joined. When all the prefabricated units were assembled there was a compact house measuring 12 feet by 24 feet. Basically a one-room house, a small entrance hall prevented loss of heat and provided a place to store outer garments. A small washroom was equipped with bathtub and chemical toilet, while the kitchen area contained sink, water storage tank and cupboards. The oil cook stove heated the small house, which was also wired for electricity.

This house is just one of a growing number that are being provided in a housing program, initiated by the Department of Northern Affairs, to improve the Eskimo living standards. In 1963, during the short shipping season, 150 units similar to this one were delivered to Arctic communities in many areas of the north.

To keep costs to a minimum, the pre-fab units are ordered in quantity and the double plywood panels are usually produced by Canadian wood-working companies during the winter months when outdoor work falls off. Price, including freight costs, ranges from $1600 to $2500 depending on how far materials have to be shipped. The purchaser erects his own house with technical assistance where necessary. A subsidy of $1000 covers part of the cost, and the home-owner may borrow the balance from the Eskimo Loan Fund. The loan is paid back by cash payments.

The pre-fabricated units being used now are the successors to models introduced in 1960. The experimental models, using rigid plywood frames, proved fairly successful, but adaptations have been made to improve the design. The advantages of prefabricated plywood panels is that they can be easily erected in bad weather. As elsewhere in Canada, the use of pre-fab units can save time and money. Units are easily shipped; little waste is involved and no great number of skilled workmen are needed up to the houses.

In addition to low-cost Eskimo homes, plywood-faced panels and other wood products are used in standard northern housing, and in construction of schools in the smaller communities. These schools range from one to three classrooms and, like the houses, are shipped north as complete units.



In a continuing effort to improve the design of low-cost housing units, blueprints for one, two and three-bedroom homes are being purchased for an Eskimo Co-operative at Frobisher Bay and will be built there this Fall. By using pre-fab construction, these houses can be easily enlarged, to meet the needs of a growing Eskimo family.

Many changes are coming about in Canada's developing northland. Better housing is one of the most important. Patient experiment, allied to engineering resourcefulness, is gradually overcoming the formidable problems that are an accepted part of Arctic construction. Wood, and many wood by-products, are doing much to support the work of engineers and community planners and make for a somewhat less rigorous way of life for those who live in the north, including Eskimo home-owners and their families.

House Design

Choosing a house design would be a simple operation if there were not so many good ideas to choose from. Each particular design usually has a number of features that the architect or designer considers essential in a well planned house. Unfortunately, we cannot always agree as to which features should get priority. What is particularly appreciated by one family may not exactly suit the next. Some will insist on the solid dignity of a two-storey house. Others prefer the economical one-and-a-half storey house or bungalow. Some favour the low-slung elegance of the basement-less house, while yet others feel that a house without a basement is only half a house. It has often been said that the final decision hangs on a minor feature such as the type of front door knob or the shape and color of the kitchen sink. But to the credit of the buyer these incidentals usually take on importance only after more or less firm decision has been reached regarding the basic style of house that is wanted.

How to Plant Shrubs

Shrubs are planted according to the general instructions above. Remove plants from paper, plastic or metal container before planting, unless otherwise instructed, says the Canadian Nursery Trades Association. If the tree arrives with a BALL OF EARTH wrapped in burlap around roots, place the whole burlap-wrapped ball into the hole, and untie it at the top. Then take a sharp knife and make long slits in the burlap in five or six places so the roots won't be confined and will grow outward easily. Leave the burlap in the hole, cover with soil and soak heavily with water after you finish planting, and twice weekly for a month. Thereafter soak soil with water when the plant becomes dry.

Converted House Can Provide Security for Retirement Years

There are numerous ways of supplementing income for retirement years, but one of the best seems to be the conversion of an older, roomier, two-storey house into a duplex, or, if very large, into small apartments. This is a recent statement made by a Canadian Bank official. Many homeowners are known to have converted older dwellings of nine, ten or more rooms with extremely satisfactory results. With families raised and gone to make their own homes, many older couples have found an economical way of living, a provider of extra income and an added interest for many who have reached the retirement age.

The Canadian Institute of Plumbing and Heating agrees with this Bank official. Not so long ago, the Institute received a letter from a middle-aged couple who, after marrying off their children, found themselves with too much living space in their 2-storey house. They have converted it into a duplex, adding a substantial sum to their income each month.

According to the Institute, such a conversion project is not necessarily a complicated problem. Some careful planning is needed, of course. But with an average amount of ingenuity plus some practical advice on the technical aspects from a well qualified Plumbing and Heating contractor it will surprise most people what can be done.

Converting a one family dwelling into a duplex merely means adding a kitchen upstairs. The most economical way to do this is place them in such a way as to make use of existing feed and waste pipes. In most older houses there is a dining room which can be partitioned into a bedroom and bathroom on the ground floor. In planning this type of conversion, there are a few main factors to keep in mind. First, the upper floor kitchen should be located when possible directly above the lower kitchen. This makes for easy installations by extending the present water, drainage and electricity or gas facilities directly to the upper floor.

In choosing fixtures for the upper kitchen, particular attention should be paid to the selection of the right type of sink. A combination laundry-tub and sink unit with built-in drain board will probably be most suitable. Consider the location of the lower floor bathroom should be as near as possible directly below the main bathroom for the same reason as the suggested arrangement of the kitchens.

Modern bathroom equipment is so designed that excellent arrangements of fixtures have often been made in a space as small as 5' by 7'. Bathtubs are now made in a variety of shapes and sizes to make the job of the conversion planner easy. Tubs will be found to fit into almost any shape or room, even very narrow ones.

The provision of the best in bathroom and kitchen facilities increases the value of the converted space for rental purposes.

But, says the Canadian Institute of Plumbing and Heating, there is no limit to the number of layouts. And operating his own apartment building adds materially to the income of any householder. For the man of retirement age, as the Bank official said, it provides a continuing business interest and the extra revenue is now an added bonus for the far-sighted homeowner.

Properly Built Chimney Will Last Life of House

In a well-designed house the chimney should harmonize with the rest of the structure. Wherever possible it should actually enhance the general appearance of the building but its main purpose is functional, rather than decorative.

There are three things basic to a good chimney. First, it must be able to draw off all gases and smoke resulting from the combustion of fuels. Its efficiency in this respect will depend on the size of the flue, the height of the chimney, and the air pressure within the stack, though this factor is sometimes difficult to control. Second, it must be fire-proof. A poorly constructed chimney is a constant fire hazard, especially if solid fuels are used. Third, the chimney must be built to last. Acids produced by combustion have a corrosive effect and cause certain types of masonry to disintegrate more rapidly than others. These acids can also be harmful to metals.

When quality materials are used, and the chimney is put up by competent tradesmen, it can be expected to give satisfactory service throughout the life of the house. A poorly built chimney, on the other hand, may require repairs every few years. In the long run, it will prove expensive.

There are a number of good prefabricated chimneys on the market which are acceptable for use in NHA financed houses. If the manufacturer's instructions are followed carefully these chimneys will fulfill their task efficiently.

In many instances a chimney has two flues, one for the fireplace and one for the central heating unit. Since this type of chimney is more massive than a single-flue chimney, it can be made to blend more easily with the general appearance of the house.

A chimney can be built either inside or outside the building, or within the house itself. There are advantages in having the chimney enclosed within the structure, since some of the heat that would otherwise be lost is radiated through the living area. Moreover, an inside chimney is not subject to as large a variation of temperature between top and bottom, and condensation which releases destructive acids is less likely to do damage.

Both exterior and interior masonry chimneys are built in basically the same fashion. The exposed portion of the chimney above the roof should not be more than four times the diameter of the chimney, unless bracing is provided. In any case, the chimney should project at least three feet above its highest point of contact with the roof. If it is within ten feet of the ridge or roof peak, the chimney top must be at least two feet higher than the ridge for proper performance.

Masonry chimneys are heavy and their footings have to support a greater load per square foot than footings for any other part of the house. For outside chimneys the footing can be poured as one unit with the foundation footing. For interior chimneys, however, a separate footing is required. It is unsound to have a basement column and a chimney share the same footing, unless it has been designed by an engineer.

A masonry chimney with a flue lining needs only one row of brick, but two rows are required if the flue is not lined. Chimney lining is usually made of vitreous clay tile. For a furnace flue the minimum inside diameter of the lining is seven inches, but a fireplace flue needs a larger cross - section. Each heating unit should have its own flue, except for gas-fired appliances which may share a common flue if special automatic shut-offs are provided for each connected appliance. For example, the stove, the furnace and the water heater, all using gas as fuel, may be connected to the one chimney flue.

To reduce the fire hazard joints between chimney bricks should be completely filled with mortar. This applies both to the vertical and horizontal joints. When the mortar has begun to set the joints should be "pointed", including joints in that section of the chimney to be concealed within the walls. Pointing hardens the surface. When the excess mortar squeezed out of a joint is left hanging along the edge, it dries out too rapidly and crumbles away. The greater bulk the joint is sometimes affected as well.

Joints in the flue lining should be filled horizontally with joints in the brick-work encasing the flue. At times it is difficult to avoid doing this but joints should be staggered as much as possible.

Where a chimney passes through a floor or through the roof, two inches of air space should be left between it and the surrounding wood framing. These openings are later blocked off with metal or other fire-resistant material.

Building a good fireplace takes both skill and experience.

WHERE THE SMOKE GOES — A well-built chimney, carried to a sufficient height, is necessary to the best operation of the heating unit. A poorly built chimney with mortar joints that are not properly filled with mortar can become a fire hazard.

(CMHC Photo)

Its height and depth, as well as the shape of the apron above the opening, the location of the damper, the size of the smoke shelf, and the diameter of the flue, all have a bearing on its efficiency.

Firebricks used in building the fire chamber should be bedded with mortar specially made to resist high temperatures. The thickness of the fire chamber wall should never be less than the thickness specified in the book "Housing Standards". These standards which are prescribed for all housing financed under NHA, also give details on the depth of the hearth, the minimum distance which should be allowed between the sides and the top of the fireplace opening, and the minimum distance between the fire chamber and combustible materials.

Although a single chimney may serve both a fireplace and a heating unit the chimney must have two flues. Flues should be separated by masonry not less than four inches thick, unless all joints in the flue linings are staggered. In the lower section of the chimney the flues are often set farther apart to allow the furnace flue to bypass the fireplace. Where the bend in the flue occurs the angle should not exceed thirty degrees, otherwise the chimney's ability to draw may be affected.

When a fireplace is included, the base of an outside chimney often an extension of the basement foundation wall. The chimney shaft will require a flue lining if the concrete on any side is less than eight inches thick.

The wooden form used in framing the shaft should be of sufficient size for easy removal, once the concrete has had time to set properly. It should not be burned out if it can be avoided. Until the concrete is sufficiently cured burning out the forms can cause the concrete to crack, especially if fuels that generate intense heat, such as gasoline, are used.

Building Costs

If you plan on building on your own lot rather than buying from a builder the number of designs from which you can select are practically unlimited. This does not make the task any easier but it is perhaps more satisfying to know that the house you are going to live in was of your own selection. Plans are usually drawn on a quarter inch scale, that is, a quarter inch on the drawing equals one foot of the actual house. It may take a little time for those looking at plans for the first time to picture the sketch as a full size building. It often helps if paper cut-outs of your furniture, drawn on the same quarter inch scale, are placed in the respective rooms on the drawings. This will give you a more accurate idea of the space provided in a given house design. Keep in mind that normally the larger the house the greater the cost. A rough figure for the construction cost of a house is between 10 and 14 dollars per square foot for a bungalow, depending quite on the type and quality of materials involved; between eight and nine dollars per square foot for floor area for a two-storey house. For a one-and-a half storey house the cost is between nine and ten dollars, while the split level house will run a little higher.

How to Plan for Planting

What do people think when they see your home, either in passing, or in visiting it? Often the home may be judged by neighbors and friends on the basis of its landscaping and the pleasing effect landscaping imparts to the property. The value and saleability of a home depends to considerable extent on the first impression of the property as a whole, with good landscaping enhancing the value.

Primary points for good landscaping include excellence of design, according to the American Association of Nurserymen. A well-designed planting takes advantage of the topography of the site to create a beautiful picture from any vantage point — on the street side, in the rear yard, on the terrace, or looking at the side borders of the property.

It capitalizes on good views and screens off unsightly views. It ties the house to the ground in such a way that it delights the eye, as living plants, sun, earth and sky and house become part of one composition.

Adequate shade should be provided at the time of day you want it and exactly where you want it. Flowers and foliages, roses and perennials are placed for enjoyment in just looking, or so the blooms can be cut to brighten up the indoors.

Proper landscaping today takes into consideration garden or outdoor living that has become increasingly popular in the past few years. The garden living area is planned with both outdoor entertainment and recreational features.

Privacy of course is necessary, and this can be provided either by hedges or informal groupings of plants. Sometimes just one or two evergreen or flowering shrubs, or trees, will create the desired effect.

For those who enjoy fresh fruits, and who doesn't there can be fruit-bearing trees, and small fruits like strawberries, raspberries or asparagus and rhubarb.

"I like seafood and steak with mushrooms, but I'll eat anything," he said after 44 years as a chef.

Exterior Finishes

Some buyers will attach more importance to the way a house looks from the outside than to the interior advantages since the exterior reflects to a certain degree the status of the family within. Architectural design of the house, its location on the lot and with respect to neighbouring houses, the materials used, the added embellishments, and of course the quality of workmanship all affect the exterior appearance of the house. The amount of care spent on the exterior of a home can also be taken as a measure of the excellence of the interior of the building. In Canada, a wide variety of exterior finishing materials is employed, varying in popularity with different regions of the country. In central Canada brick veneer or solid brick would appear to be the dominant type of exterior finish while in the western provinces the prevalence of wood and stucco finishes is noticeable. In the Atlantic provinces wood clapboard is used extensively. There are other useful and attractive exterior surfacing materials such as asbestos shingle, and aluminum or steel siding; the traditional stone masonry wall is still a symbol of prestige and elegance. These materials have been tried and tested over the years and can provide an attractive finish when they are applied by skilled workmen. If a combination of materials is used it should be done with taste, avoiding that mismatched, artificial look.

The Project House

Selecting a suitable house to meet the family's needs is usually a process of elimination. Given the means and the opportunity, our choice would undoubtedly be a mansion on the hill. But we are, most of us, limited by circumstances and our ideal of a home must be accessible if it is to have any concrete meaning. About two and one half times the annual income has been mentioned as a realistic maximum that anyone can afford for a home. Attempting to buy beyond your means can mean the first step to disaster. Once you have established the price range that you can afford, you can then begin thinking of the actual style of house you want. If you are planning to have a house built on your own lot you will obviously have a greater choice of designs than if you purchased from a builder. Still, builders' homes offer a surprising amount of variety both in exterior and interior design. The merchant builder's product — the project house — provides a suitable answer to the mass demand for new homes. A custom-built house may be more satisfying in certain respects, but buying from a builder means by - passing numerous time-consuming steps involved in the construction of a new home.

Tiny Toda Tribe Encouraged to Have Babies

NEW DELHI (Reuters) While India is trying to persuade her people to limit the size of their families, anthropologists are encouraging the tiny Toda tribe to have more babies.

They fear that the tribe may become extinct.

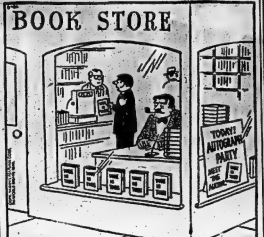
Living in the picturesque pastureland of the Blue Mountains of south India, the tall, Blue-eyed Todas are a mystery race. Their origin is still the subject of controversy. Their strange customs, habits and attire mark them apart from the rest of the dark - skinned inhabitants of South India.

Complete isolation from the rest of the country and an official indifference to their fate threatens their extinction. Their number — 1,615 — recorded through disease, infanticide and the practice whereby one woman had several husbands — polyandry. In 1881, there were 675 Todas; in 1921, 640, and by 1961, only 615. It was then that the Madras state government decided to step in to prevent the Todas from dying out altogether.

Careful nursing of the tribe in the last 10 years has helped to swell the number of Todas to 700. Mobile medical units moved into the Toda villages to campaign against venereal and other diseases prevalent among the tribe. Social workers went in to persuade the Todas from indulging in infanticide and to wean them from polyandry.

LOOK LIKE ROMANS

The men of the Todas are tall, sturdy, with Roman noses, finely chiselled features and piercing blue eyes a rare phenomenon among the dark-eyed inhabitants of southern India.



They wear flowing Roman-type togas.

In their manner of worship, the tribe differs radically from the rest of their countrymen. The Todas worship the female buffalo. A male buffalo is not considered sacred.

Anthropologists have a variety of theories about the Todas' ancestry.

Some believe that they are the remnants of an ancient colony of Romans because of their Roman appearance and togs dress. Others say they are descendants of a lost tribe of Hebrews.

One theory suggests the Todas might be the descendants of the Scythians from central Asia who invaded India in the 2nd century BC.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1964

CLEANING UP the new Mormon chapel on Palmer Road before the opening this morning are Belleville Branch President Alfred T. Willis, with a floor polisher and Mrs. C. Ladoucier, cleaning the inside of the baptismal font.

Latter Day Saints Open New Chapel This Morning

Fifty weeks of work and a year and a half of planning were justified today, when the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints opened its Belleville Chapel. The opening of the new Mormon chapel however, completes only "phase one" of a three - phase project.

The present building contains a general purpose room, (which will be used as the chapel proper for the time being), a large baptismal font, (Mormons baptize by immersion), class-rooms and kitchen. Ground for this phase was broken July 12 of 1962. Phase two will add a full - sized chapel proper to the north of the present building and phase three will add a gymnasium (convertible to an auditorium) and more class-roo s. The project will be built from standardized plans supplied by the church. No target date has been set for completion of phase three, but work on phase two may begin next year.

LABOR VOLUNTEERED

Construction of phases two and three will be mostly by volunteer labor, as was construction of phase one. Branches of the Mormon Church can start building any one of the three phases of a chapel when they have ten per cent or more of the cost, in cash. Land for the project is purchased locally by the church and by the branch, (the local branch pays 30 per cent of the cost of the land), the church supplies the materials, a building supervisor and some labor, and the branch supplies the rest of the labor. Masonry, paving, grading and part of the heating installation of the new chapel were paid-labor jobs in Belleville, with the Branch picking up the tab.

Construction supervisor of the new chapel was Orval Tuttlan, of St. Thomas. The church also supplied five "church builders", (young men who have volunteered to spend a year or more helping build chapels around the continent), from New Brunswick, Massechusetts and Alberta. About forty volunteers, from an area roughly bounded by Madoc, Picton, Desoronto and Carrying Place, contributed part - time labor.

This morning's service was an official opening of phase one of the chapel. President Frank H. Pitcher of the Canadian Mission presided. Speakers included Alfred T. Willis, president of the Belleville Branch; R. Orval Tuttlan, construction superintendent; president Harold I. Sutherland of the Ontario District; Carlets A. Harris, area supervisor, Caroline R. Pitcher, supervisor of Wor.en's Auxiliaries, Canadian Mission; and President Pitcher. Opened today, the new chapel will not be dedicated for about six weeks, because of a church regulation. The M o r m o n Church does not permit the use of property not paid for, so the new chapel cannot be dedicated until all bills are in and have been paid. The chapel can be opened, however, because money is on hand to pay all the bills.

WILL BE BUSY

Open, the new chapel will be in use most days of the week. Monday evenings will be devoted to primary religious classes and to genealogy classes. (For various reasons, Mormons may find it desirable to trace their ancestry. The genealogy classes are to teach them how to do it). Tuesday the Relief Society, a womens' charitable, welfare and study group, meets. Wednesday the Mutual Improvement Association, a fellowship-and-study group for teen-agers and adults, has use of the building.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday are regularly booked, but the chapel facilities will be available if members planning special activities and sports facilities on the property may be in use. Sundays will be devoted to weekly study functions for the 180 members of the congregation.

This morning's service was just the start of the first round of activities at the new chapel. Tomorrow night there is a by-invitation-only musical hour and buffet supper, and Sunday evening a special evening service of thanksgiving is planned.

President Frank Pitcher will preside at the service, President Alfred T. Willis will conduct, invocation will be by President Frederick L. Holt and the Sacrament will be administered by Terry Willis and Arthur Murray. Speakers will be George S. Murray, President J. H. Lane of Trenton branch, William Manley Nobles and President Frank Pitcher, and the benediction will be by Raymond H. Sheppard.

Self-Styled Separatists Are Charged

MONTREAL (CP) — Five self-styled separatists, two of them women, were charged Thursday with disturbing the peace by chanting slogans and carrying placards insulting to Governor-General Vanier during the St. Jean Baptiste Day parade Wednesday night.

A sixth was charged in a flag-grabbing incident.

They received a tongue-lashing from municipal court Judge Jacques Trahan.

81-Year-Old Paints Flag Similar to One Considered

OTTAWA (CP) — Among the 5,000 - odd - flag designs submitted to the government is one from A. Y. Jackson, whose colour-conscious eyes were peering out at the Canadian landscape from behind an easel before most members of Parliament were born.

His suggestion for a distinctive Canadian flag, p a i n t e d about three years ago, is similar to that now being proposed in Parliament by the government.

The design of the 81-year-old painter, one of Canada's famed Group of Seven artists, has three red maple leaves joined on a single stem on a white background. But where the government's design has a vertical blue bar at each side of the flag, Mr. Jackson proposes a wavy horizontal blue bar at the top and the bottom.

This, to him, makes a big difference.

"You see," he said Thursday in his apartment-studio here, "it was the rivers that opened up Canada. Every province has rivers, and all were explored that way. These wavy lines indicate that history."

WORKS ON DESIGN

Mr. Jackson has been "fooling around" with flag designs for years. About three years ago he turned out the design that was recently submitted to the government by a friend.

The copies went to the prime minister's office and to State Secretary Lamontagne. The government has carefully avoided commenting on individual designs, but Mr. Pearson has indicated he would like to talk to Mr. Jackson about his flag.

"I don't really want to push my design," said the artist. "The government has appar-ently decided on a flag—although it's not a very good one." Besides the vertical bars, Mr. Jackson doesn't like the stylized maple leaves.

"They look like they were cut out of leather, and a stylized maple leaf is not a maple leaf at all. I don't like the stems either; they are just like tree trunks.

But he's all in favor of the maple leaf motif.

"We had to decide either on an emblem or an abstract design such as a tri-color, and there's so many of those it's hard to get a distinctive flag. We have no animal—the beaver looks like a rat—and so the maple leaf seems best.

"Having decided that, the government should have called for suggestions, and then made up some of the designs in full-sized flags and flown them in various parts of the country.

"You have to think how a flag will look through a telescope from three or four miles away. One maple leaf, from that distance, might look like a circle or something and the flag would not be distinctive. The three leaves would make it distinctive."

He said he would actually prefer green leaves to red on the grounds that a combination of green and blue would be more distinctive than red and blue, and "when leaves turn red they are ready to fall."

"But I don't think there is any chance of that being accepted."

Seaman's Issue To Be Probed By Pearson

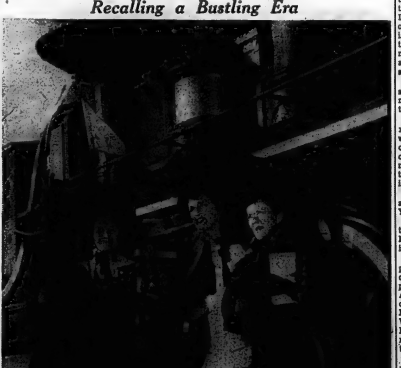
OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Thursday he will personally investigate a seamen's dispute on the West Coast which Opposition spokesmen said could swell into a major shipping disruption.

NDP Leader Douglas raised the issue, saying the American-owned freighter Alaska is under severe pressure from the Seafarers' International Union of North America to employ SIU engineers, masters and mates at Vancouver.

He asked whether the SIU action had been taken with the "co-operation and consent" of the government-appointed board of Trustees that is running Canadian maritime unions.

Health Minister Judy LaMarsh, acting in the absence of Labor Minister MacEachen, said she would take it up with the labor department.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker asked if the "arrogance and overbearing measures" taken by American SIU Chief Paul Hall, asked Mr. Pearson to look into the matter. The prime minister agreed.



Mr. Diefenbaker said the one-vessel dispute is creating serious repercussions on the coast and there is a threat that it will spread.

Pleads Guilty To Murder, Given Life

TORONTO (CP)—A 20-year-old youth was sentenced to life imprisonment Thursday when he pleaded guilty to non-capital murder in the Jan. 19 stabbing death of Richard Spence, 18, of Toronto.

Neil Collins of Toronto smiled as Mr. Justice Charles D. Stewart of the Ontario Supreme Court told him: "You understand I have no alternative but to impose this sentence."

Tuesday, Thomas Elley, 21, also of Toronto, was given a similar sentence.

New Citizens Welcomed At Court House Ceremony

Native sons sometimes take the privileges of citizenship for granted, a group of New Canadians were told yesterday.

Lieut Colonel Joe Black, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment, made the comment after 35 former immigrants received Canadian citizenship certificates from Judge J. C. Anderson.

"I sometimes think that native - born Canadians seem to take citizenship for granted. It's a pity all of us haven't the opportunity of witnessing what is taking place today — I don't think they would take it so much for granted, but would appreciate it the way you do," said the colonel.

The appreciative notes were struck in impromptu speeches made in the court by two of the new citizens.

Biggest single national group represented in the ceremony were Dutch. Some nine natives of the Netherlands took the oath of allegiance, while the next largest ethnic representation was from Greece — six in all.

Others were from Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Germany, Italy, Yugoslavia, China and France.

The new citizens were introduced to the ceremony by Mrs. Marjorie McCaw, new citizenship clerk.

A welcoming delegation representing the community included Rev. R. W. Coleman, president, Belleville Ministerial Association; Rev. Rufus Debono, Holy Rosary Church; W. E. Sandercock, M.L.A Hastings West; county warden, Tom Burnside; A. Stark, Department Citizenship and Immigration.

Bibles and New Testaments were presented b ythe Argyll and St. Julien Chapters of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire.

Among the spectators was a small band of girl guides — taking in the proceedings as part of an exercise to gain their citizenship badges.

Those becoming new citizens were:

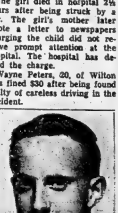
SENTENCES FOUR POLICE

SAIGON (AP)—A South Korean government tribunal has found four policemen of the Diem regime guilty of secretly arresting and torturing political opponents. The court sentenced Duong Van Hieu, former assistant chief of the national police; Nguyen Tu Thai, his deputy, and Nguyen Thien Dzai, former secret police officer, to life imprisonment. Police agent Phan Khanh was sentenced to 10 years.



Order Inquest In Girl's Death At Kingston

KINGSTON (CP)—An inquest will be held Monday into the death of Nazish Ahmed, a seven-year-old Pakistani girl killed in a car accident June 7, Coroner D. M. Boucher said Thursday.

Dr. H. B. Cotnam, supervising coroner for Ontario, ordered the inquest after a request from the girl's parents, Major and Mrs. Amis Ahmed, was forwarded by Dr. Boucher.

The girl died in hospital 2¼ hours after being struck by a car. The girl's mother later wrote a letter to newspapers charging the child did not receive prompt attention at the hospital. The hospital has denied the charge.

Wayne Peters, 20, of Wilton was fined $30 after being found guilty of careless driving in the accident.

Michael Reddick of Rossmore, member of the Belleville Collegiate Key Club, will spend the next two weeks in Dallas, Texas, attending the International Key Club convention.

With 40 others from this part of Canada, Michael will leave by bus Sunday morning from Burlington for the long trip south.

The tw oweeks' stay in Dallas will be divided between convention sessions and sight seeing.

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

We have received many letters asking when it is desirable to use savings either for down payments or to reduce mortgages. The factors involved in this decision are outlined in the reply to the following letter from Mr. R. W. N.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am a small businessman. My wife and I have worked hard all our lives and have a nice savings account and some U.S. Government Savings Bonds. We have always lived in an apartment, but now are buying a house, it is our first house and we have no experience in these matters.

Could you tell us if it's better to use most of our savings and make a big down payment, or to make a smaller down payment and take a larger mortgage? — R. W. N.

Answer: The decision depends on three factors: (1) the interest rate on your mortgage; (2) the interest rate return on your savings; (3) the value you place on keeping your savings liquid — that is, more readily available to you than if it were tied up in the equity in your house.

Although this varies with individual circumstances, as a general rule, the "liquidity" factor can be figured at one per cent. On this basis, therefore, if the interest you receive on your savings averages four per cent. and your mortgage interest rate is 5 per cent, it would be prudent to use your savings to make a large down payment. If, however, your savings return an average of 3 percent interest (only one-half percent less than the mortgage interest rate) it would be advisable to keep most of your savings in liquid form and carry a larger mortgage.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Keep your advice to yourself! I was convinced my assessment was too high, and spurred on by your statement that assessments should be based on equality of values, I fought in the courts to have mine changed. By the time I was finished I had hired a consulting civil engineer, appraisers, and two lawyers (mine called in a real estate specialist). It cost me $1,800 and the five day's pay I lost sitting in court. I won.

At least they said I won, but I'm not so sure. My taxes were reduced $40 a year. It will take me 45 years just to break even, and I don't think I will live that long. I am 55 years old now and no one in my family ever lived beyond 82 years. — J. B. T.

Answer: Having a strong set of principles and sticking to them is often uncomfortable — and can get downright expensive. I once fought a $10 traffic ticket. I, too, "won." It cost me $300.

Seriously my advice regarding assessments wasn't wrong. However, once you start to fight no one can predict the result of such a lawsuit.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We are happy parents. Our daughter is marrying our neighbor's son this summer and unlike most newlyweds these days, they want to live near us. We own a nice home — at least we will in about three years when the mortgage is paid off. It is on a big lot (more than an acre) and we plan to give our daughter enough of this ground to build on.

Can we just deed this to them ourselves, or must we discuss it with the bank that holds our mortgage? — H. T. K.

Answer: The bank's security for the mortgage is based on the entire property and in order to convey a part of the property you must have the bank's permission.

It will be necessary for you to get the bank's release from the lien of the mortgage for the portion of the lot you are going to convey to your daughter. As your mortgage is almost paid off, the remaining portion of your property should provide ample security for the mortgage balance. It has been my experience that in situations like this, mortgage lenders are usually very cooperative and will accommodate the borrower.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Since you were willing to give straightforward answers in your column, and let the chips fall where they may, perhaps you can help me.

We are considering installing a swimming pool this summer and want to know if it is a sensible investment. Unwilling to take the salesman's word, we have asked our bank, realtors — almost everyone in sight. Their answers fill me with many reservations and qualifications that we know less now than when we started.

Our house is worth about $18,000 and the pool will cost $4,500. If we build the pool, will our house be worth at least $4,500 more, or would this be a poor investment? — F. V. S.

Answer: There are exceptions but a $4,500 swimming pool normally will not increase the value of an $18,000 house by $4,500. The amount that it will increase the value depends on the geographic location, and neighborhood. For example, in areas with long warm seasons (such as Southern California) investment in a swimming pool will increase values more than it would in areas with shorter pool-use seasons (such as New England).

A swimming pool is essentially an amenity-type investment, and it cannot be valued only in terms of dollars and cents. There are many important investment returns from a swimming pool investment. They are in the form of pleasure, exercise, and the savings in time, money and traffic nerves — for all those times you won't have to get ready and drive down to the old swimming hole.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

Pilot With One Leg Off May Again Be at Controls

By ED WALTERS

DARTMOUTH, N.S. — (CP) — Ian McLennan, a navy lieutenant, likes to fly and is determined the loss of a leg in an automobile accident four years ago won't keep him out of the pilot's seat.

And a recent decision by navy doctors suggests the 30-year-old native of Brandon, Man., may soon be piloting a Tracker aircraft out of the navy's air station at nearby Shearwater where he is stationed.

Lieut. McLennan's last medical examination resulted in a classification as "normal". This means he will probably be able to regain his status as a full-fledged naval pilot.

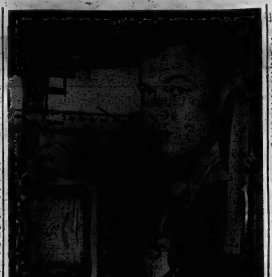
Lieut. McLennan, a husky six-foot-six, 215-pounder, began his navy career in 1952 and by early 1960 had won his pilot's wings. The wings were clipped in May of the same year when his small car crashed into a bridge near Montreal. Both his legs were broken above the knee.

The left leg became twisted while he was being extricated from the wreckage. The flow of blood was cut off and gangrene set in. The leg was amputated just below the knee.

The navy asked him if he wanted to leave the service. He said no, seeing little opportunity for a career outside.

SENT TO OTTAWA

Fitted with a 12-pound wooden leg which has since been replaced by a lightweight fibre-glass limb, he came out of hospital five months after the accident. The navy sent him to Ottawa where he was taught air traffic control. He was posted to the control tower at Shearwater in May, 1961, and in time became senior air traffic control officer.



Meanwhile, the determination to return to flying was growing. The navy was undecided, never having faced a similar decision. But there were several things in Lieut. McLennan's favor. He still had the use of his left knee, there was no distracting discomfort and he already had been a pilot.

Eventually he was allowed to fly as co-pilot. Then the navy set a precedent by giving him a medical classification as "normal. "Goose," as he is known, immediately began pressing harder for return of his pilot's status. Approval could come any time.

Lieut. McLennan's mobility appears little reduced by the loss of the leg. He walks with a barely noticeable limp and drives his own car, a standard shift model. He frequently goes dancing with his wife Jean, also from Brandon. They were married in 1958 and have two children, Gordon, 4, and Donna, 2.

ORANGE TREES IN U.K.

The first orange trees were planted in England in 1595, and all died 150 years later because of the severe frosts.

BACK IN THE "SADDLE"—Lieut. Ian McLennan sits at the controls of a Tracker aircraft again after being grounded by an accident four years ago. Lieut. McLennan, traffic control officer at Shearwater naval air base, lost a leg in an automobile accident shortly after he won his pilot's wings in 1960. Soon after the navy set a precedent by giving him a medical classification of normal, he began pressing for return of his pilot's status. Approval could come any time. (CP Photo)

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Some of the nicest people in the world are parents.

And the nicest are those whose offspring are young athletes.

At least that is what I discovered the other night when a guest at a reception in the lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. John Fosstry at Macdonvale.

Unless, of course, the parents of the champion all-star hockey squirts of Lionel Scully and Al Adamson are different to those of youngsters not so fortunate championship-wise.

I found out how remarkable it is for parents of ten-year-olds to be so young.

A lot of B—unch—was born of parental pride.

And you couldn't very well blame the Duffys, Reids, Cones (not Cohn's), Meaghers, Lapinskies and other dads and mothers for sticking their chests out.

Their youngsters coached by McFarland Lionel Scully and as capably managed by Ed Adamson were champions in more ways than one.

After all hockey youngsters are supposed to concentrate their minds and activities on the game itself. To win is their target—to lose accept gratefully.

But not these younkers.

The young se-nad-en's took it into their own hands to do a spot of fund-raising. It was not easy. What to do?

Lack of sufficient long green could prevent their participation in the big tournament at Brampton. They had already backed away the "A" and Grand championships at Napanee and added a "B" title to the municipal decorations.

However, as matters turned out—and as their coach told them at their big night, they were a trifle overconfident after their Napanee-Peterborough successes—and this did not do them any good.

But they had made up their minds to attend and also to help in their own way to finance the transportation costs.

No doubt they were assisted by moms and dads but the youngsters took on a big chore, that of selling some 224 dozen chocolate bars.

They took the selling bit in their mouths, so to speak, and by the time tournament time rolled around they had enough money in the bank to furnish the transportation.

Not only that but the surplus was enough to finance the purchase of new crested jackets and partially finance the wind-up banquet. The parents took care of the rest of the food-tabs enabling the youngsters to come out all even.

Some may think it hardly fair to single out the squirt all-star youngsters' club as a model of minor hockey sportsmanship and ability as there are other young fellers' clubs in the city who will come up with splendid efforts—as did their parents—and will probably emerge champions and all-stars of the future.

However, there are not too many teams of boys this age who will doff their coats, roll up their sleeves and go out to work to finance their own club.

But to give credit where credit is due, the boys did not do it alone. Club officials and parents lent willing hands and a three-way team effort, was responsible for the success of the funds-raising venture.

Besides, as Coach Body said, "there are not too many squirt teams in the district or province who brought home three tournament championship trophies."

Barber Clips Yanks In Birds' Sweep

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dust off the first chair, boys —Baltimore's loudest Barber is back in business!

Steve Barber, who boosted the Orioles' pitching corps a year ago with a 20-13 mark, can count his 1966 victories on one hand. But the three-hit, nine-strikeout trim job he did on New York Thursday night in a 3-1 verdict over the Yankees had all the earmarks of a return to 1963 form.

The southpaw's effort, coupled with home runs by Boog Powell and Brooks Robinson, gave the Orioles a sweep of the three-game series and stretched their American League lead over the Yanks to 3½ games. A month ago, Barber was still looking for his first victory. He had started five games, finished two and was laboring with a sore arm and a 6.23 earned run average.

Now he's 4-4 with two complete games in his last three starts and a 3.70 ERA.

ANGELS WIN NINTH

While the Orioles were misfreating New York for the third straight time, the red-hot Los Angeles Angels captured their ninth in a row, nipping Kansas City 4-3, and climbed into a sixth-place tie with idle Boston. Cleveland overpowered Minnesota 8-1 in the only other AL game scheduled.

St. Louis trapped Houston 4-2. Pittsburgh beat the New York Mets 8-1 and San Francisco whipped Los Angeles 2-1 in innings in National League activity.

Barber's scissors slipped once against the Yanks. Joe Pepitone led off the third inning with his fourth homer.

Bob Rodgers' sixth inning single scored Bob Perry, snapping a 2-3 deadlock at Los Angeles and extending the longest winning streak in Angel history. Fred Newman recorded his fourth straight victory with the aid of Dan Osinski's scoreless three-inning relief stint.

PIERSALL HELPS

Veterans Jim Piersall and Vic Power each delivered runs in the Angels' three-run third inning. Bill Bryan hit a solo homer for the A's, who scored twice in the top of the sixth, to tie it.

Max Alvis crashed his third homer in two games and Jack Kralick won his eighth game in 10 decisions as the Indians cuffed former teammate Mudcat Grant. Kralick collected three hits and combined with reliever Don McMahon for a three-hitter.

Larry Brown also homered for Cleveland and Dick Howser went 3-for-3. The Twins' Bob Allison collected his hitting string to 15 games with a fourth inning double.

Weslock Shoots Blistering 65

TORONTO (CP) — Nick Weslock of Toronto, Canadian amateur champion, capitalized on chip shots and superb putting for a blistering seven-under-par 65 in the opening round of the Ontario Open golf championship Thursday.

Weslock, 47, was one stroke off the Islington course record and took a two-stroke lead over a field of about 150 shooting for the $1,200 first-prize money.

Coming in with the late finishers, Weslock staged a sparkling duel with Alvie Thompson of Toronto, current Canadian professional match-play champion and 1963 Canadian PGA champion.

Thompson was four under on the front nine, one better than Weslock, but his putter stopped working on the back nine and he came home in 36. Weslock was four under on the back nine. He shot seven birdies under ideal weather conditions.

The second round of the 54-hole tournament for $5,000 in prize money continues today with the final 18 holes scheduled for Saturday.

In addition to the $1,200 first-place money, the tournament also qualifies three professionals for the $200,000 World Open championship at Detroit Aug. 27-30.

The four low amateurs in the current tournament and the Ontario amateur championship here July 23-25 will make up Ontario's Willingdon Cup team.

TWO TIED AT 67

Gary Fawcett, 32, of Toronto and Frank Wrabley, 37, of Kitchener, tied for second place with 67s. Fawcett, who held the lead throug most of the day, covered the 36-36 course in 33-34. Wrabley did it in 34-33.

Ernie Spooner of Toronto, Gary Cowan of Kitchener, last years runner-up and current world amateur champion, and Thompson were grouped in fourth place with 68s.

Thompson three - putted the 18th to go one overpar and miss a chance at taking sole possession of fourth spot.

Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., the only Canadian money-winner in the United States open last week, shot a 70 to tie with the final 14

Crandall Spoils Koufax Whiff Mark

Giants Win 2-1

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sandy Koufax set his record but the 28,630 Candlestick Park fans who saw him do it probably will remember Del Crandall's performance a lot longer.

Koufax has struck out 10 or more batters in a game 54 times before, but how many times has Crandall had four hits in a game?

It was the veteran catcher's fourth safety of the night that broke up a 13-inning oldtime classic - Dodger downbrook Thursday night and gave San Francisco a 2-1 squeaker over Los Angeles.

Crandall, acquired from Milwaukee Braves last winter, delivered the key blow in the final inning after hits by Willie Mays and Orlando Cepeda and an intentional walk to Jim Ray Hart had loaded the bases.

Crandall, batting .186 going into the game, cracked his game-ending hit off Nate Oliver's glove as Cepeda scampered across with the winning run.

Four innings earlier, Koufax had broken Cobb's mark he shared with Rube Waddell and Bob Feller, by reaching the 10-or-more strikeout plateau for the 55th time in his career.

In other National League games, Pittsburgh Pirates whipped New York Mets for the 11th time in 13 meetings, 8-1, and St. Louis Cardinals rallied for three runs in the eighth inning to whip Houston Colts 4-3.

Jerry Lynch hammered two homers and Bill Mazeroski added one as the Pirates piled up an early lead against the Mets. The 13-hit attack made it easy for Joe Gibbon, who fired a four-hitter.

Ron Hunt had two hits for the Mets and scored their only run of the game.

It was New York's fifth straight loss and 13th in the last 14 games.

Ken Boyer and Dick Groat each drove in single doubles to drive in the three Cardinal runs as St. Louis rallied to beat Bob Bruce. Boyer's two - run shot came after Curt Flood walked and Bill White singled. Groat's hit added the insurance run.

Bob Aspromonte drove in both Houston runs with a pop fly double in the second inning and a homer in the sixth.

The Trots

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The largest daily double of the current meet was posted at the Western Fair Raceway Thursday paying off $433.30 with only 12 tickets sold on the combination of Braden Volo in the first race and Vicky Todd in the second.

Braden Volo, an 11-year-old gelding, trotted the mile in 2:11 1-5 to pay $14.70. In the second, Vicky Todd paid $20.70 after pacing the mile in 2:13 3-5.

Feature event of the 10-race card went to Telegram which paced the mile in a rapid 2.07 2-5 for a $600 purse. His time was the fastest of the night and he paid $3.80.

'COMEBACK ROPES ENDED

MONTREAL (CP) — Comeback hoper of linebacker Carl Heisinger has ended. The 29-year-old former Ottawa Rough Rider football player has had both his legs amputated following an auto accident last Saturday. Heisinger retired in 1962 after his wife died, but had planned to try a comeback with Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference this season.

Politics Hit Wimbledon

Russian Refuses To Play South African

WIMBLEDON (AP) — Officials at aristocratic Wimbledon, which prides itself on being the world's best - run tournament, were wondering today just what to do if any more Communist players refuse to play with South Africans because of apartheid.

Politics hit Wimbledon tennis for the first time in its 78 years Thursday when Russia's No. 2 player, Alex Metreveli, was scratched from the men's singles after refusing to meet South African Abe Segal in a third round match because of South Africa's racial policies.

This shock withdrawal was closely followed by Hungarian Istvan Gulyas pulling out of the men's doubles in which he was to have partnered Segal.

Now Wimbledon officials are wondering if another player, Mrs. Sue Kormoczy of Hungary, will withdraw from the double first round match in which she is scheduled to play with Christiane Mercelis of Belgium against Segal's wife, Heather, and Carol Prosen of Orlando, Fla.

One Wimbledon official said: "To keep political propaganda out of Wimbledon in the future we should insist that a player can only withdraw if he produces a valid medical certificate."

Arthur Ashe Jr., first Negro male to play in Wimbledon, commented on the situation without a said politics should be kept out of sport.

"This no doubt is some sort of political strategy on the part of the Russians," said the 20-year-old policeman's son from Richmond, Va.

Ashe said he could see no value in Metreveli's refusal to go against Segal.

"I am a Negro and apartheid (racial separation) objectively concerns me. But I would play Segal any time," said Ashe.

"I have to look at Segal as an individual."

Politics apart, Thursday saw the exit of the first seed in the women's bracket — seventh-ranked Jan Lehane of Australia. Norma Baylon, the young Argentine star, beat her 6-3, 2-6, 7-5.

Otherwise, all of the seeds, both men and women, who took the courts Thursday came through — though several had some uneasy moments.

Chuck McKinley, of San Antonio, Tex., was taken to four sets by Denmark's bearded Torben Ulrich, 7-5, 6-3, 2-6, 7-5.

Montreal-born Mike Belkin, 18, in his new time out of Miami, Fla., was the last of three Canadians eliminated from the first round. Australian Bob Hewitt downed him 6-4, 6-0, 6-1.

Belkin had reached Thursday after together South Africa's No. 1 player, Cliff Drysdale, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

The other Canadians were defeated in the second round. Francoise Dufour of Waterloo, Que., bowed to Jorgen Ulrich of Denmark, 2-6, 6-4, 8-6, 6-3. Keith Carpenter of Montreal lost to C. Kuhnke of West Germany 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

CAN'T AGREE

STOCKHOLM (AP) — American heavyweights Floyd Patterson and Eddie Machen, who will meet at nearby Rasunda in a 10-round bout July 5, have been unable to agree on a referee, Swedish promoter Edwin Ahlqvist said Thursday. Winner of the fight may get a shot at champion Cassius Clay for the world's title, once held by Patterson.

Suns Thump Wings 10-3, Up Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With Toronto Maple Leafs idle, Jacksonville Suns had a chance to firm up their position atop the International League standings Thursday night.

They made sure of it.

The Suns unleashed a 14-hit attack and thumped Syracuse Chiefs 10-3 to nail down a two-game league lead. Rochester Red Wings moved into a tie for third place in the standings by edging Atlanta Crackers 5-4 as Buffalo Bisons, locked with the Red Wings three games back of Jacksonville, were whitewashed 4-0 by Columbus Jets in the other game Thursday.

Joe Morgan tagged Paul Foytack for a grand slam homer in the first inning at Syracuse and that would have been enough to do it for the Suns. But Jim Northrup got into the act with a two-run homer in the fifth and Ray Oyler got a solo blast in the ninth to help run up the tally.

Lou Jackson got his third home run in as many nights for Rochester to help Nelson Chitwood to his pitching record to 6-3. The victory gave the Red Wings a split in their six-game series with the Crackers.

Don Cardwell hurled a five-hitter to give the Bisons their first whitewashing before a hometown crowd this season.

Cleveland Open

Geisberger's 64 Tops

CLEVELAND (AP) — Al Geiberger birdied six of the last 10 holes Thursday for a 34-30—64 to take the first-round lead in the $100,000 Cleveland Open golf tournament.

Despite the fast his card had 10 threes, Geiberger gained only a one-stroke lead.

Tony Lema and George Bayer came in with 65 to share the runner-up spot.

Geiberger's blazing putter gave him the edge. He threeputted from 35 feet on the eighth hole for his only overpar hole, but sank birdie putts ranging from 2½ to 40 feet.

More than 50 of the field were under par.

Billy Casper, George Archer, Ray Floyd and Harold Kneece were tied at 66. Defending champion Arnold Palmer was in an eight-way tie at 67, and Jack Nicklaus was in a 10-way tie at 68.

Carmel Hits Nine Homers In 32-8 Win

Carmel went on a home-run hitting spree last night to defeat Corbyville 32-8 in South Hastings Little League game.

Registering their eighth straight victory, the Carmel youngsters pounded out nine home runs in their hitting explosion.

Horton was the big gun with three four-baggers, Musclow, Richardson and Brownlee each hitting a pair.

Amo and Harrisson each had two hits for Corbyville.

Burt hurled the win for Carmel with Amo taking the loss for Cannifton.

Centreville Shades Cannifton

Centreville scored all their runs in the fifth inning and turned back Cannifton's late victory bids here last night to record a 5-4 Eastern Ontario Senior Baseball League decision.

The Centreville club was accepted into the league, on a part-time basis, this week and last night's win over Cannifton was the club's initial start.

The teams battled through four scoreless innings at the Belleville Fairgrounds before Centreville netted the five in the fifth. Three walks, one hit and a pair of costly Cannifton errors did the damage.

Harold Griffin's boys picked up two in the sixth, on a walk and three hits, and made it tight with two more in the seventh, mainly with the aid of walks. The losers loaded the bases with one out in the bottom of the ninth but two infield pops ended the threat.

Centreville turned in an errorless performance and got eight-hit pitching from veteran Keith Weese and a reliefer in the late innings. Weese, well known in Ontario baseball circles, got the win, going until the seventh. They struck out 16 Cannifton batters but walked nine.

Gerald Hill was the loser, with help from Bill Hill in the ninth. They allowed only five base hits, struck out ten and passed four.

Jim McDonald slammed a triple and single and Paul McGill a double and single to pace the victors' attack. Doug Gustvale got the other safety.

Don Forsythe, Butch Clapp punched a pair of Cannifton hits. Rod Hill, Ross Empey, Ron Urch and Ross Parks got the other hits. All were singles.

Centreville 000 050 000—5 5 0
Cannifton 000 002 200—4 8 3

CADET CONVICTED

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Robert Graham, 19, a police cadet in this town, 20 miles northwest of Peterborough, was convicted of impaired driving Thursday and his case provided evidence to convict a woman bootlegger. Graham, who has been suspended from the force, was fined $150; He told the court he had bought two bottles of wine from Eva Harford, who was fined $25 for keeping liquor for sale.

Minor Baseball Results

Park Dale scored three runs in the bottom of the seventh to steal a 7-6 Bantam baseball victory from the Jaycees last night.

The winners actually scored another run when it was thought the score was tied 6-6 but this mistake was later corrected.

It was also announced that tomorrow's (Saturday's) scheduled Tyke and Peewee games have been postponed. The Tyke game will be played at the CNE Park on July 3, at 6.15 and the Peewee game at the Alemite Field on July 10, also at 6.15. Tomorrow afternoon's Bantam game will be played as scheduled.

Park Dale was trailed all the way last night before the final-frame eruption. Johnny Noakes batted five-bit ball for the winners, striking out six and walking seven. S. Tebworth and T. Shaw shared the catching.

Paul Goodfellow baffled the winners in the early frames, while allowing ten hits in all for the losers. He struck out six and walked five.

Gary "Red" Burnette, Ted Shaw and Larry Moore had two hits apiece for the winners. Barry Burnette doubled and other hits went to Noakes, Wayne Fudge and Kevin Allen.

Thornton, the Jaycee catcher, had two of his club's hits with C. Scott, Leo Baker and A. Lupanette getting the others.

Defeat Belvedere, City Hotel Wins
Barriages Blast Seven Homers

A fantastic 21-bit output, including seven home runs, permitted Barriage Landscapers to outlast Belvedere Hotel 26-12, while City Hotel was clubbing Black Diagmond Cheese 10-3 in a pair of Commercial Softball League games last night.

It was strictly a night for the hitters in the Barriage-Belvedere battle as the losers collected 14 hits. Leveque pitched for the winners and Casson for the losers.

Joe Harvey clouted two Landscaper homers, Gerry Gereaux, Lawrence Leveque hit a homer and two singles apiece, Don Wood homered and doubled, Gordie Duff homered and singled and Jim Sopha added the other circuit blast. Tom Coolen contributed five singles, Gary Wood two and Rod Turner one.

For Belvedere, G. Perry hit a home run and double and Clapp a homer and single. McLeod, Ryan, Lucas and Casson each got two hits, Bryant and Benn one apiece.

Ten errors and five walks added to the confusion.

Meanwhile, City Hotel got big games from Doug Moreau, who drew in five runs, and Doug Hull, who knocked in four. Hull had three hits, including a home run, a triple, while Moreau hit safely twice and one of these was a home run. E. Donovan also bagged three hits as the trio of players accounted for all the City Hotel safeties.

D. Young pitched a three-hitter on the winners' mound, fanning two and walking four. Loser Jack Douglas fanned six and passed seven.

Douglas also had two of the Black Diamond hits while N. Clapp got the other one.

A spectacular catch by Frank Donovan in the second inning helped the winners keep the lead that Hull's first-frame homer had built.

'64 Comet – for people who have more fun than money

Fun is the excitement of a fishing excursion. (Part of the fun is organizing it . . . but a lot of the fun is getting there, in your eager-to-get-going Comet.)

Fun is in the 'sing' of a line over water, the flash of a lure in the sunlight. (Like the muted 'hum' of a Comet cruising a highway, casting highlights from its glimmering body.)

Fun is tying into a real scrapper and playing him with finesse. (You never have to fight Comet's easy-going ways, and it's always ready to tackle the toughest, most tortuous roads.)

Fun is the end of a perfect day, a satisfying day. (That's when you appreciate Comet most—the relaxing welcome of its comfortable seats, the smoothly considerate ride, as you wend your weary way home . . . contented.)

Fun is a visit to your Mercury dealer (to discover how economical all this fun can be.)

Colorful Sports Figure

Leo Dandurand, 75, Dead

MONTREAL (CP)—Leo Dandurand, 75, a dynamic figure in Canadian sports promotion who struck it rich in the golden era of the 1920s, died early today.

Dandurand who shrewdly foresaw that sport's golden era was in the making after the First World War, was associated with many of Canada's greatest teams.

In partnership he also built a horse-racing empire that spread from Quebec to Louisiana.

At various times he headed the direction of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference, then known as the Big Four, and Montreal Royals of baseball's International League.

RUNS RESTAURANT

In his later years he ran one of the city's most successful downtown restaurants.

Dandurand was a native of Bourbonnais, Ill., who came to Canada as a youth to attend Montreal's French - language Ste. Marie College and stayed.

He severed his active sports direction several years ago, selling his race track interests and then his interest in the football Alouettes.

Perhaps his greatest success was made with the Canadiens hockey organization.

With partners Joe Cattarinich and Louis Letourneux, he bought the team after the First World War for $11,000, built it into the fabulous Flying Frenchmen and sold it 16 years later for $165,000.

The partnership triumvirate operated all the while without a written contract.

Featuring such greats as Howie Morenz, Aurel Joliat, Pit Lepine and Johnny Gagnon, the club won consecutive Stanley Cups from 1930 to 1931.

While the hockey club developed, the three men started dabbling in horse racing, operating small tracks here and across the St. Lawrence River at Laprairie, Que.

When the club and racing interests went up for sale at Cattaraniche's death in 1934, their network embraced 12 tracks in Montreal, Ottawa, New York, Ohio, Delaware, Illinois, Utah and Louisiana.

Their Arlington track in Illinois drew the first $1,000,000 handle ever to go through the parimutuels in one day. They were also credited with innovating the starting gate and features such as the daily double.

Later Dandurand moved back into the horse racing business in the harness racing field in Montreal, selling out a few years ago to concentrate on other businesses.

Leo's sports interests later extended to football and baseball. He played football here as a money-making proposition after the Second World War as president of the Montreal Alouettes.

He played hockey, lacrosse and baseball at college but even then showed more bent toward promotion than participation.

His start came after he joined the Montreal Real Estate Exchange and got the job of secretary-treasurer of the old Montreal City Hockey League.

Smythe Pulls Denver Out Of Colorado

DENVER (AP) — Stafford Smythe, president of Toronto Maple Leafs, announced Thursday that he is pulling Denver Invaders of the Western Hockey League out of the Colorado capital.

Toronto is the majority stockholder in the Denver club, now engaged in a drive to sell 2,000 season tickets under an ultimatum from the league.

Sponsors of the drive said it had reached the 1,500 mark when Smythe announced he is moving the club.

Smythe did not say where the club would go—but it was thought to be Victoria.

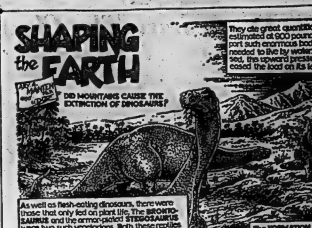
Smythe said that as far as he is concerned the deadline for meeting the 2,000 ticket sale extended June 19. Coach Rudy Pilous and Don Bolger, president of the Denver team, said they had been assured the deadline was June 30.

During their only season in Denver the Invaders made it a runaway. They won 44, lost 22 and tied three for 91 points.

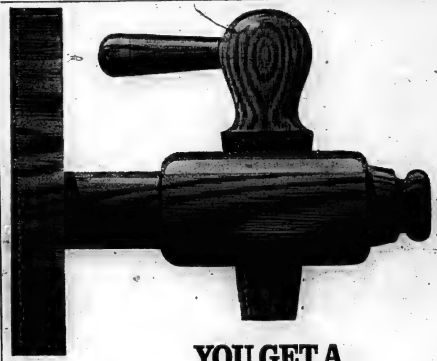
Handicapped by injuries, the Invaders lost to Los Angeles Blades in six games in the playoffs.

FIGHT THREATENED

Legal fight was threatened to keep the Invaders in Denver.

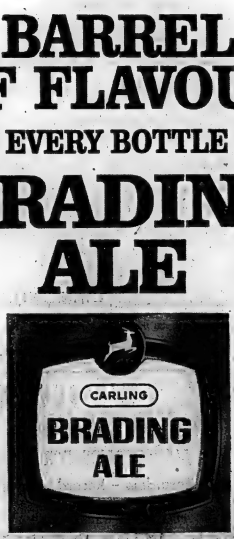


Bolger termed Smythe's action "a low blow, not only by the Toronto club, but by the Western Hockey League."



Other teams in the league were reported interested in getting rid of Denver and cutting travel expenses. The Vancouver WHL entry claimed it cost the club $30,000 additional travel expense. Seattle and Portland pegged the figure at between $20,000 and $25,000.

Bolger said the Invaders will finish getting the 2,000 pledges promised to keep the franchise in Denver. He said he had a verbal agreement that the deadline was June 30.



He said he would look into all aspects is seeking redress through legal action.

Bolger is a leading stockholder in the Denver group which owns about 36 per cent of the Invader Corporation. He admitted it would be impossible to operate except as a farm club of Toronto.

Age-Old Hunt For Fabled Fish of Canada's North

SAPOTIT - Where The Char Run Big

Eskimo hunter Ireemangnak, holding his fish spear constructed of musk-ox horn prongs bound onto a wooden handle with sealskin thongs, is delighted at his catch.

As the sky-circling sun of the arctic summer skims ever-lower during its midnight arc across the northern horizon, families of Canadian Eskimos head inland. With the sun's long, drawn out, day-by-day farewell giving warning of yet another far-off winter to be provided against, the hunters, living in the ways of their forefathers, make for the ice-cold rivers where the big fish gather. As glistening, sleek, fat-bellied arctic char leave ocean feeding grounds to shoal in the river waters, the Eskimos build stone walls in the icy current to trap the succulent fish. For days men toil waist deep in the frigid pools, piling rocks against the river's flow. When all is ready and the fish are trapped, hunters take their spears, wade among them in great excitement. Small fish and agile fish are lucky. Through holes in the weirs and by leaping the stones they break free to continue up-river. Numbed by the water's chill, the hunters drag their catch ashore for cleaning, set aside tasty fish bellies for future feasts, eat a few fish raw as they work away. Later, placed in piles and covered by rocks, the fabled fish of the north—a staple food in times of want—is cached for the winter sustenance of man and dog.

A dozen miles upstream from salt water, near Pelly Bay, 100 miles inside the Arctic Circle, Eskimos spear fish at a Sapotit—fishing site. Stone walls of trap must be rebuilt each year in icy water.

Ireemangnak, his wife Panneesk and their son pull catch to river bank for cleaning.

NATIONAL FILM BOARD PHOTOSTORY

As char runs increase in size, catches of fish mount up in front of Eskimos' seal and caribou skin tents. Fish are cached under rock piles to await winter's need.

One of the women, with child on her back, at work spearing arctic char — a succulent fish of the salmon family that vies with its Atlantic cousin as a delicacy.

Aftermath for Space Hero

John Glenn After Mishap: 'A Moving Sight to Behold'

By SAUL PETT

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — He walks slowly and uncertainly now, leaning stiffly from the hips like an old man after surgery, hands reaching for the nearest table top or chair, moving cautiously, making slow, awkward turns, as if his head were locked to his shoulders—this man whose body never failed him on a football field or in a war plane or a space capsule.

This is a temporary condition which is improving and will disappear in time but, remembering who he is and where he has been, it is a moving sight to behold, even temporarily.

While he is aware that people feel sorry for him, John Glenn, ex-astronaut, ex-candidate for the U.S. Senate, resists the temptation to slide into a bath of self-pity.

"I'll be all right," he says. "As the man said, your outlook on life can be determined by the way you look at a glass of water. Is it half empty or half full? I have to regard it as half full and tell myself it will be completely full one of these days."

OUT OF POLITICS

One of these days is late summer or fall when John Glenn hopes to be completely recovered from the bathroom accident that gave him a brain concussion, knocked him out of politics on the eve of his first campaign, and left him in debt. Will he one day try politics again or return to the space program?

"All I'm thinking about now is being able to turn my head a few more inches without getting nauseous and dizzy," said this man, who on Feb. 20, 1962, flew around the earth in 90 minutes, the first American to orbit the globe.

The irony of his accident is never lost on him.

"The whole thing is completely incongruous. I had never been in a hospital before, except for checks, never been injured. When I think of all the crazy things I've been through —all the sports, two wars, 149 combat missions, getting my plane hit 12 different times by ack-ack, all the training for the space flight, and the three orbits themselves. In all that, the worst, I ever got was a knuckle skinned getting out of my Friendship 7 capsule. And now this."

TWINKLE DIMMED

With his weight back to normal after losing 17 pounds, John Glenn looks pretty much like the man we remember, blue - eyed, freckled, sandy-haired, his twinkle somewhat dimmed, his humor just a bit less frequent but still there.

Until his recovery is complete, he is pretty much confined to home, an attractive ranch house outside of Houston, next door to his space buddy, Scott Carpenter. There he spends his time resting, reading of world events, trying, with the help of Annie, his wife, to catch up with the thousands of letters from well-wishers.

In the months that followed his orbital flight, he turned down many business offers, some of which would have made him a millionaire. Because of his age (now 42) it became unlikely that he might eventually take part in a lunar landing. He resigned from the space program and on Jan. 17 this year announced he would run for the Democratic nomination for the Senate in Ohio.

On Feb. 26, a bathroom rug slipped under him in an Ohio apartment, and John Glenn fell, his head striking the tub. The concussion affected his inner ear balance. Doctors barred active campaigning. John Glenn withdrew from the senate race. It would be unfair, he said, to ask people to vote only for a "name," without knowing his views.

"I had given strict orders about not running up bills," he says, "but we still had more than we expected. Now I've got a good sized debt in Ohio, several thousand dollars."

When he quit the space program, Glenn gave up $16,000 a year as his share of the sale of the astronauts' magazine rights and $2,000 a year in flight pay. He is still on the Marine Corps payroll, drawing $10,000 a year as a lieutenant-colonel. Thus, the Glenn treasury faces a squeeze, what with the Ohio debt and the fact that his son, David, starts college next fall, and his daughter, Lyn, a year later.

Charlottetown — The Fathers of Confederation Memorial Buildings comprising a theatre, library, art gallery, museum and convention centre opened this year as part of the island's said.

observance of the centenary of the 1864 pre-confederation Charlottetown conference.

Fredericton — Refurbishing part of the old legislature building into a provincial archives, made possible by moving government offices into a new $5,000,000 office building nearing completion, to which the Ottawa contribution is being diverted.

ARCHITECTS' COMPLAINT

Quebec—a Place des Arts, similar to the Charlottetown complex, originally intended to mark the 1864 Quebec conference of the Fathers of Confederation. Construction is not likely to start until late this year after a contest for architect plans.

Toronto — No decision by the provincial government. It has been considering a science and technology museum but latest reports are that it may come up with a new idea in view of possible duplication with long-range Ottawa plans for a similar museum.

Winnipeg—an $11,000,000 arts centre to be built across Main Street from a new $7,000,000 city hall. The centre will house an auditorium, art gallery and museum.

Regina—Probably a new auditorium, though final decision has been delayed by the recent change of government. The former CCF government wanted auditoriums in Regina and Saskatoon and a 500 at Moose Jaw, but the idea of splitting the grant among three communities was not welcomed by Ottawa.

Edmonton—The first step of a new provincial archives and museum which the province would expand in the years ahead as new exhibits are obtained and staff developed to operate it.

Victoria—A provincial museum, archives building complex completing a cross-country chain of centenary memorial projects dedicated to arts and letters.

NO FEDERAL VETO

Below the level of the federal and provincial capitals, the competition of centenary projects for municipalities and rural districts is left largely in local hands. Under the grants program, Ottawa will be contributing up to one-third of the cost, and so has no veto over the locally inspired ideas.

Attorney-General R. A. Donahoe of Nova Scotia, chairman of his province's centennial committee, said it does not intend to have a project in every town in the province.

"We are aiming for a representative memorial in each general area, and in this way spread the money around," he said.

A mines museum has been proposed for Glace Bay, a recreation centre for Windsor, a museum for Bridgewater, and a park for Liverpool.

Education Minister Henry Irwin of New Brunswick said his province is trying to encourage local authorities to go beyond the local expenditure contemplated in the formula by which Ottawa will put up $1 per capita for regional projects if the province and locality raises at least $2.

Some of New Brunswick's plans include restoration of historic buildings, reconstruction of historic ships, and redevelopment of historic transportation facilities.

St. AUDITORIUMS

Quebec's provincial secretary, Bona Arsenault, and his staff have developed an ambitious program of projects, and a more than one local auditoriums.

In addition, there are proposals for Quebec Region to build a number of parks at their power sites, including Montmorency Falls east of Quebec, and Carillon on the Ottawa River.

The major centennial event in Quebec province, however, will be Expo 67, the world's fair being developed at Montreal, Ontario, though final decision has been delayed by the recent change of government. The former CCF government wanted auditoriums in Regina and Saskatoon and a 500 at Moose Jaw, but the idea of splitting the grant among three communities was not welcomed by Ottawa.

Cross-Canada Survey
Communities Launching Projects To Celebrate 1967 Centennial

By JAMES NELSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A bandstand for the village park in Miscouche, P.E.I., a marker for the graves and daughters of Bruce County in Ontario, a lounge for senior citizens of Bowness, Alta.

These are some of the many projects being planned at the local community level in thousands of towns, villages and counties across Canada to mark the 100th anniversary of Confederation in 1967.

They are the little-heard-of projects, overshadowed by the $100,000,000 the federal treasury is pouring into centennial projects in Ottawa and the big cities.

The Yarmouth County Historical Society, for instance, has suggested a regional marine museum for Yarmouth, N.S. The Brooks Bulletin, an Alberta weekly, suggests something be done in honor of Sir Charles Saunders, developer of Marquis wheat. And the Yarrow Water-works District has recommended that a library be built in Yarrow, B.C.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press found that with the centenary 26 years away there are plenty of plans for marking it but few final decisions on what is to be done. In all provinces have set deadlines for this summer and fall for submission of plans by local authorities seeking provincial and federal help.

LACK IMAGINATION

Concern was growing in Ottawa that the local projects being suggested are too utilitarian and lacking in festive imagination for a birthday party. In a recent speech, Centennial Commissioner Hon. Guy Favreau said too many local authorities seem to be intent on using centenary funds to build police stations and fire halls, the kind of thing that would have to be done even if there were no centenary to celebrate.

Ottawa's $100,000,000 is to be divided this way: $35,000,000 for a new library, museum and theatre complex in the national capital; $50,000,000 for grants of $2,500,000 each for major projects of a similar nature in the 10 provincial capitals; $20,000,000 in grants through the provinces to local and regional projects of a lasting nature, and $20,000,000 for miscellaneous projects.

Among the miscellaneous federal projects is a Confederation train and caravan similar to the train to tour Canada in 1957 taking historical and cultural exhibits to the Arctic; a 25-mile trail-blazing searchlight tatoo, a massive program of youth travel, and possibly a big international performing arts festival.

ARTS CENTRES POPULAR

The $2,500,000 grants for major cultural projects in provincial capitals, which are to be at least matched by provincial treasuries, are destined to build at least five new performing arts centres and three provincial archives buildings in addition to the theatre and museum planned for Ottawa. There may be more.

The plans by provincial capitals are being developed around St. John's, Nfld.—an arts centre, which has raised some jealousy in Corner Brook which claims it is entitled to some equal treatment.

Halifax—a new medical centre for Dalhousie University, to be named after Sir Charles Tupper, a Nova Scotia doctor and one of the Fathers of Confederation, later was a prime minister of Canada.

Charlottetown — The Fathers of Confederation Memorial Buildings comprising a theatre, library, art gallery, museum and convention centre opened this year as part of the island's said.

Sales Talks Not Remembered By Many, Viewers Report

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Advertising agencies are turning out television commercials at a rate of 40,000 a year, most of which reach the air. And if some housewife last year had dedicated herself to watching her set 18 hours a day, seven days a week, she would have been exposed to 2,190 sales pitches a year.

These statistics were gathered by an aggressive executive, Jerry Lambert, for a speech (commercials), there are the awful lot of them she isn't going to get at, having looked at, can't remember."

He said a recent survey of a thousand men — long program which carried eight commercials found that 21 per cent of a sampling of viewers could not remember any of the commercials; 10 per cent, only one and 69 per cent, several.

What was most disturbing to advertisers was the large number of viewers who couldn't remember a single sales message on the show.

Television columnists like other tillers of the vineyard take vacations, and this worker is about to start one. This includes a fortnight out of the year's files. I find among the items saved one inside-TV story which should not be consigned to the wastebasket:

A well-known producer recently attended a staff "creative meeting" called to find an unusual occupation for the hero of a proposed action-adventure series.

"We mentioned just about every job we could think of that had not been done to death in TV series," reported the producer. "Then a network executive who was—statuswise, of course—the most important person around up top for the first time.

"I'm surprised," he said, "that in all your talk no one has come up with what is the only really right occupation, of course, he has to be a private detective."

Worst of all, the producer added, most of the people around the table nodded enthusiastically and two were heard to say, "marvellous idea."

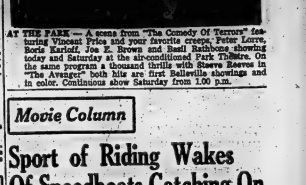
Sport of Riding Wakes Of Speedboats Catching On

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bruce Brown, who produced Slippery When Wet, Barefoot Adventure and Wasted Summer, premiered his latest film, The Endless Summer this week.

Haven't heard of Bruce Brown or those films? You must be an earthbound square, man, say bodeggers (surfing fans) knowing that Bruce Brown is to surfing what Michelangelo was to ceiling painters.

The Endless Summer has sold out four nights this week at the Encore Theatre, where audiences of tanned, taffy-haired young people and a few elderly types have cheered surfers skidding down Matterhorn - like waves on foam-and-fibre glass boards.



Brown, 26 and blonde, has been riding the crest of a surfing craze that has become a religion for thousands of California teen-agers. Through surfing music and magazines, the fad has spread toother parts of the country where the sight of white water comes out of seltzer bottles.

SPORT CATCHING ON

"The surfboard companies are getting lots of orders from the midwest," Brown said. "The sport of riding the wakes of speedboats is catching on. But some people buy the boards to float in swimming pools, or just for show. I once saw a sports car that had a board bolted on the top—obviously a status symbol."

Brown intends to spread the surfing gospel eastward. He leaves on Monday with a crew of champion surfers to show

AT THE BELLE — Natalie Wood stars in "Love With The Proper Stranger," that falls in love with Steve McQueen in "Love With The Proper Stranger," opening a three-day engagement tonight at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

AT THE PARK — A scene from "The Comedy Of Terrors" featuring Vincent Price and your favorite creeps, Peter Lorre, Boris Karloff, Joe E. Brown and Basil Rathbone showing today and Saturday at the air-conditioned Park Theatre. On the same program a thousand thrills with Steve Reeves in "The Avenger" both hits are first Belleville showings and in color. Continuous show Saturday from 1.00 p.m.

Ross Thatcher

Saskatchewan Leader a Political Firebrand

By BOB TREMBLE

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan's ninth premier is a political firebrand who has been ordered removed from the provincial legislature during a debate and once tried to kick open its doors.

Controversy pushed Ross Thatcher to the brink of political oblivion. It propelled him into his present office.

It is unlikely the new Liberal premier will avoid controversy in the future and Saskatchewan voters have settled back to wait for the fireworks after giving his party 33 seats in the 59-seat legislature in the April 22 election.

A fall session of the House has been promised and there Mr. Thatcher will clash for the first time since the election with the CCF, once his own party, now his chief foe. The CCF, turned out of office by the Thatcher Liberals after 20 years as government, won 25 seats in April and a Conservative took one.

But in the meantime the 47-year-old premier has been facing a few political ends and he could have a full fire blazing by the time the legislature meets.

He says the defeated CCF's inefficiency pushed the current budget 10 per cent higher than it need be and promises to cut away "fat and waste."

TO SCRAP JOBS

Some civil servants have departed. Mr. Thatcher has called a halt to hiring and says some jobs will be scrapped.

The premier, a heavy - set man with receding hair and a youthful grin, multiplied his own responsibilities by taking on the tough treasury portfolio and set to work on a schedule that includes 18-hour days.

"For 21 years I've been on the destructive side of government," he says in reference to his opposition role both as a CCF member of Parliament and as a Liberal provincially. "Now I have a chance to be on the constructive side."

He sums up his construction aims: "I want to make this an opportunity state rather than a welfare state."

Preparing to accomplish his future aims means living down part of his past. He made a conscious effort in this direction during the election campaign.

CHANGED PARTIES

The man who has switched party loyalties twice, whose vitriolic oratory got him ordered from the legislature last year, whose impetuosity caused him to kick the doors of the closed provincial parliament during the 1962 medical care crisis now is determined to show himself as a responsible leader who can create as well as criticize.

He says that during the pressure of the April campaign he was often tempted to hit back at detractors in the old free-wheeling fashion, but purposefully didn't. The next test will be to see if the restraint stands up to the pressure of debating crossfire in the legislature.

But the former hardware merchant and spare - time rancher is shrewd enough not to reject the entire past and admits freely that he borrows liberally from the ideas of his erstwhile colleagues in the CCF.

Despite his avowed enmity—"I am opposed to socialism and all it stands for"—he has no intention of turning back the clock significantly on such social measures as the CCF's universal, comprehensive medical care program. On the contrary, his long-term aim is to extend coverage to dentistry, drugs and optical treatment.

NEVER BELONGED

Mr. Thatcher, a graduate in commerce of Queen's University in Kingston who is independently wealthy from running an inherited hardware business, suggests now that he never really belonged in the CCF party.

He returned to his home in Moose Jaw from university and joined the Liberal party—his family was Liberal—and was provincial secretary of the party in the late 1930s.

But the miseries of the Depression, especially hard in Saskatchewan, brought disillusionment with the Liberals.

"I joined the CCF in 1941 for the same reasons hundreds of thousands of others joined—as a protest against unemployment and because of the promise of a better future which Mr. Douglas (T. C. Douglas, former premier of Saskatchewan, now national leader of the CCF's successor, the New Democratic Party) so convincingly offered."

But, Mr. Thatcher adds, "I was never a real CCFer, even in the early days," which saw him elected a Moose Jaw alderman from 1942 to 1944.

OPPOSED COLLEAGUES

"When I was elected to Parliament in 1944 as a CCF member I often spoke against ideas expressed by my colleagues. But those first four years were relatively happy years for me in Parliament.

"Later, when a few radical left wingers from British Columbia joined us in the House of Commons, my position became unbearable. That's why I left the party in 1955. Perhaps I made a mistake in not moving sooner. I crossed the floor because I believed in Liberal principles. . . ."

Mr. Thatcher rejoined the Liberal party but was defeated in two federal elections by Hazen Argue, his former CCF deskmate in Ottawa. Ironically, Mr. Argue later followed Mr. Thatcher in defecting to the Liberals.

Mr. Thatcher, who had sold his business to devote full time to "my first love," politics, appeared to be finished politically. But the very maverick qualities which seemed to doom him at the same time brought about an opportunity which he saw now as the beginning of his present success.

MET DOUGLAS

Both before and after his departure from the CCF, Mr. Thatcher fired some salvoes against Saskatchewan's CCF government, aiming particularly at its operation of Crown corporations.

Mr. Douglas challenged Mr. Thatcher to a public debate, a challenge that appeared to offer the prospect of political annihilation rather than an opportunity for advancement.

"Tommy Douglas was, and still is, one of the best political debaters in Canada," Mr. Thatcher says. "I stalled him for six months . . . but he persisted and I eventually no longer could refuse him and still remain in politics."

But he survived intact—"I didn't get murdered as most people thought I would"—the public debate at Mossbank May 21, 1957, before a crowded meeting and a province-wide radio audience.

"The fact I came out of the debate with my whole skin was so unexpected that it proved to be the turning point in my political career. I'm sure it had a bearing on the Liberals' decision to ask me to be their leader (in 1959)."

Within a year Mr. Thatcher faced a general election and only 17 Liberals, including the leader, were elected.

HAD TO REBUILD

The new leader decided to rebuild, borrowing a Douglas idea that a party with 25,000 members could almost be assured of electoral victory in Saskatchewan.

In the process of rebuilding from the grass roots, Mr. Thatcher trod on many sensitive Liberal toes, both federally and provincially, and rumblings about sharp differences between the Saskatchewan leader and the federal hierarchy persist to the present.

"We had our differences," Mr. Thatcher confesses. "But this was a healthy sign of renewed interest in party affairs."

On his relations with the national party, Mr. Thatcher is pledged to "no - operate fully with the federal people, but we don't want anyone from Ottawa coming out and saying 'You do this or you do that.'"

With the aid of reorganization, advice from public relations men, hard-sell radio and television advertising and campaign meetings featuring non-political entertainment, the Thatcher party toppled the government.

Critics question Mr. Thatcher's ability to hold the party together now that it has power. His strong streak of independence might antagonize colleagues unwilling to reduce subordinates to yes-men.

"I know I have many shortcomings," he responds, "but if I am good at anything in politics I believe it is in administration.

"I believe all my experience, in private and public life, has centred upon administration and makes this my strongest point."

Premier Moro's Cabinet Quits Creating Crisis

Italy's Economic Solutions in Danger

ROME (AP)—President Antonio Segni began talks with political leaders today, seeking an end to Italy's 20th government crisis since the Second World War.

The crisis imperiled a solution to Italy's economic problems, including a long siege of inflation and unrest.

Premier Aldo Moro's centre-left cabinet resigned Friday night in a doctrinal split between the Roman Catholic Christian Democrats and their Socialist partners over increased aid to church schools.

Segni asked Moro to stay on as premier and consults with other political figures on finding someone to form a new cabinet. There was speculation Segni would ask Moro to try again.

The resignation caught the country by surprise, since the additional aid sought by Moro's Christian Democrats and Socialist Democratic Socialist and Republican cabinet partners abolished, while the Communists, Monarchists and Fascists voted against the proposal.

BOLT FROM PARTY

A few Christian Democrats bolted from the government in the secret vote, showing growing dissatisfaction within the party since Moro formed a coalition with the Socialists last Dec. 21. It was the first cabinet in 17 years in which the Christian Democrats and Socialists were allied.

The government did not have to resign, since no question of confidence was involved. But after a meeting Friday night the cabinet decided to quit to provide a political "clarification."

The resignation caught Moro's party off guard. Posters had been slated to go up all over Rome announcing the start of the Christian Democrat national campaign July 1. Friday night party leaders decided on a postponement.

Some Christian Democrats are eager for new elections, confident that Italy's troubles in the past few months would encourage a "reopening to the centre"—a Christian Democratic majority. Most observers say it would enable them to rule without the Socialists.

But the political leaders are wary of an election. The Communists gained 1,000,000 votes and the Christian Democrats lost 750,000 in the general election last year.

Film Said Not For Sale At $30,000

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC has rejected a $30,000 offer for its discarded TV documentary about a day in the life of Prime Minister Pearson. A member of Parliament wants to know why.

The offer for the film—which cost the CBC $33,000 originally—came early Friday from 10 private TV stations.

Alphonse Ouimet, CBC president, replied curtly by telegram:

"Your offer received. The film is not for sale."

ASKS OF OFFER

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Bow River) asked later in the Commons whether a $30,000 offer had been made to the CBC for the film, entitled Mr. Pearson.

State Secretary Lamontagne, who reports to Parliament for the CBC, replied: "Not to my knowledge . . . but I will inquire and answer on Monday."

Douglas Fisher MDP—Port Arthur) quickly supplied the Commons with the name of the offer, and its rejection, adding that he wanted an "explanation as to why the CBC has prepared to give someone else the opportunity to show this film which does not meet the CBC's very high standards."

Mr. Lamontagne readily agreed to ask the CBC to provide such an explanation.

ANY ASSISTANT?

Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) then wanted to know whether any CBC personnel had resigned because of the film controversy.

"The answer is in the negative," Mr. Lamontagne said.

Friday's developments kept alive a political issue which has been cropping up in the Commons since May 30, the day the CBC announced it was ditching the film because it did not meet BC standards.

Opposition spokesmen have been having a field day with the issue, charging that the government pressured the CBC into such a decision.

DENIED CLAIMS

Mr. Pearson and members of his cabinet have denied the charge. The CBC board of directors said Thursday it had found no evidence of political pressure.

The candid film was made over a period of about last September and October under the direction of Richard Ballentine, a private Toronto film producer under contract to the CBC for the assignment.

Recess Causes Argument

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons hogged down Friday—the 92nd sitting day of the 1964 session—in an acrimonious, name-calling wrangle about its working hours, hired help and supply holidays.

Tempers flared in all directions as MPs spent two hours debating whether to add 5½ hours to their sittings each week until the government calls a summer recess. In the end they agreed unanimously.

Justice Minister Favreau said the government hopes the recess can start by the end of July. But several opposition MPs predicted the House will continue in session the entire summer because of what they called bad organization of Commons business by the government.

Prime Minister Pearson called for a meeting of party House leaders on Monday to discuss the possibility of limiting debate on each measure by pre - arrangement among parties.

"Closure," shouted an unidentified Conservative MP angrily.

TOKENS ISSUE

He was referring to the rarely-used Commons rule that permits a majority vote to cut off debate on any measure. The rule was last invoked—disastrously—by the Diefenbaker government during the 1956 pipeline crisis.

Mr. Favreau argued that "allocation of time" for debate on each piece of legislation by agreement of all parties is the opposite of closure.

The MPs then spent two hours talking about secretaries.

Privy Council President George McIlraith said in answer to questions that 19 private secretaries or special assistants to various ministers are stationed in the capital, respective constituencies or home cities.

NDP Leader Douglas and some of his colleagues charged that the secretaries' main function is merely is to control political patronage on behalf of their minister.

DENIED IT

Mr. McIlraith and Health Minister Judy LaMarsh denied this. They said the secretaries handle correspondence and local problems of special attention to the ministers.

Mr. McIlraith questioned the legality of the practice and challenged Mr. McIlraith to table by July 1 legal opinions supporting the allegation. He replied that it is not customary to table legal opinions in Parliament.

"What I have asked for . . . is a study of the economic interrelationships in parts of our country," he said.

He added that he hoped the committee, in an exploratory stage in his own office and the Privy Council office — would be able to "encourage and assist" French-speaking Canadians are so close together that to even contemplate a new secession would be "utter disaster."

The evening that led to the surprise statement from the prime minister's office began in the Commons 20 days ago—May 26—when Social Credit MP Thomas Danforth asked whether the government would undertake a study of the economic, social and political effects of Quebec's separation from Canada.

At that time, Mr. Pearson refused to consider the idea, but he said any such study would be entirely academic because no such separation is go-cheese factory.

Khrushchev Prompts Swedes On Potential Giant Market

By BRACK CURRY

STOCKHOLM (AP)—Premier Khrushchev spurred Swedish interest this week in helping the Soviet Union speed its economic growth.

After this five-day visit here, Khrushchev has prompted leaders of government and industry and influential newspapers to talk about the "potential giant market" for Swedish products and the keen interest of industry in moving into this market on a big scale.

Sweden, one of Europe's leading industrial nations, can make a substantial contribution toward Khrushchev's efforts to increase the rate of economic growth in the Soviet Union. That, in the view of Swedish experts in Russia, was his primary objective in coming here.

He achieved concrete results aside from wheeling the Swedes' interest in the potential Soviet market.

The joint Swedish - Soviet communique issued Friday after Khrushchev and Prime Minister Tage Erlander agreed that Sweden and the Soviet Union (of Swedish-Soviet trade) was a mutual wish."

Sweden and Russia will start negotiating later this year a five or six year trade pact, the communique said. It added:

"The parties were further agreed on the desirability of the greatest possible increase of import to Sweden of Soviet Union oil. Soviet products, as well as of the import into the Soviet Union of Swedish products.

The Soviet representatives explained that the Soviet Union was prepared to place new orders in Sweden for steel pipes, tubes for oil and gas pipe-

Govt. Launches Economic Study on Inter-Relations

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has launched a study of a "economic inter-relations" between the "parts" of Canada as a tool to help keep the country if Quebec pulled out of Confederation.

These and points emerged late Friday following off-the-cuff answers by Prime Minister Pearson in the Commons and an extraordinary press statement five hours later clarifying his earlier remarks.

Mr. Pearson said flatly in his special statement that he has not initiated a broad study of the study based on the possibility of Quebec's separation from the rest of Canada.

"What I have asked for . . . is a study of the economic interrelationships in parts of our country," he said.

He added that he hoped the committee — in an exploratory stage in his own office and the Privy Council office — would be able to "encourage and assist" French-speaking Canadians are so close together that to even contemplate a new secession would be "utter disaster."

The evening that led to the surprise statement from the prime minister's office began in the Commons 20 days ago—May 26—when Social Credit MP Thomas Danforth asked whether the government would undertake a study of the economic, social and political effects of Quebec's separation from Canada.

Gale Blew 80-Pound Dog Around House

BROOKLIN, Ont. (CP) — "Jack, the Java temple birds have escaped."

"Huh!"

"The wind blew their big cage across the room and ruptured the philodendrons."

This was Brooklin's Big Blow of 1964.

Before I could investigate my wife's complaint, an avalanche of sound from our big enclosed porch brought me racing from the kitchen. The wind—the nearby Oshawa airport estimated it at 100 miles an hour—burst in an open casement porch windows and slammed Mike, our Labrador-cross, into the polished floor.

A gale that can throw around an 80-pound dog bears thinking about. I thought about it as trees outside snapped like toothpicks in the teeth of gorillas, hydro lines crackled like giant sparklers and I fought my way down the rain-lashed floor to bolt the window.

Then the porch the rain came down with a sound of enraged kettle-drums.

"Oh, dear," said my wife as she watched an 80-foot maple crack and fall, "this will hurt our geraniums."

(Actually the flowers came through o.k.)

But around the village dozens of trees snapped off and lay across roads. The hydro lines gained 40 feet for four hours, from about 7:20 p.m. to 11. Chimneys blew down, television aerials bent suddenly, roofs were damaged, signs were ripped loose. The Java temple birds? Their beaks can crack nuts and leave bumps on thumbs that numb. I dropped paper bags over their heads. When they flew up into the bags they thought they had captured them.

Benson Named Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—A new cabinet minister—tax collector for Canada—will join the Liberal front bench next week, a reliable source reports.

E. J. Benson, Liberal MP for Kingston, Ont., will be sworn into the cabinet Monday as minister of national revenue, filling the vacancy created by the death last March of John Garland.

The appointment — widely forecast after the death of Mr. Garland — was delayed until after the result of a byelection in Saskatoon.

Prime Minister Pearson had promised a cabinet post to Sidney Buckwold, former mayor of Saskatoon. But Mr. Buckwold failed to make it to Ottawa in last Monday's Saskatoon byelection.

This opened the door for Mr. Benson's name when the parliamentary secretaryship to Finance Minister Gordon into the post.

As right-hand man for the finance minister in Parliament, Mr. Benson gained experience in the job for his new post. A chartered accountant first elected to Parliament in 1962, he was on the front line in steering most of the Gordon's budget legislation through the Commons.

MADE IT SIMPLE

He quickly displayed a rare knack for reducing abstruse tax measures into simple words—a skill many MPs grew to appreciate.

The revenue ministry takes the tax law drafted by the finance department and passed by Parliament and applies them. Mr. Benson would be Canada's top tax collector.

Mr. Garland gained a reputation as a "friendly" tax collector. He was skilled in how to make tax payments as painless as possible, even suggesting that people take out insurance to cover early tax reports.

Along with the revenue portfolio, Mr. Garland was responsible for the National Housing Act and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Since his death, housing tasks have gone to Maurice "Chubby" Lamontagne, Liberal MP for Beauharnois. He is expected to keep them even when Mr. Benson joins the cabinet.

Will Stand Trial on Perjury Charge

MONTREAL (CP) — Joseph Bonanno was ordered Friday to stand trial on one perjury charge and two conspiracy and perjury statement on another.

Judge Marcel Gaboury released on a defence motion and ordered the dapper, 59-year-old accused, described by the United States as one of the top underworld leaders, in trial Monday on a charge of lying when he said he had no criminal record.

The other case, in which the Crown said Bonanno lied in his motion of habeas corpus aimed at preventing his deportation, is scheduled to resume Monday.

Bonanno came to Canada in May and applied for status as a landed immigrant May 25, saying he had bought into a

Quebec Farmers Demand Relief From Govt.

QUEBEC (CP) — Crowds of farmers from all parts of the province thronged the provincial police at 10,000 gathered on the grounds of the legislature building Friday to demand tax relief and were told of two steps planned by the government.

The march on Quebec was organized by the Catholic Union of Farmers, who claim farmers pay twice as much in municipal and school taxes as any other class of taxpayers.

Earlier their leaders were told by Premier Jean Lesage that there will be a 25-per-cent reduction in school taxes, and from Labor Minister Alcide Courcy came word that a 20-cent increase in the price of 100 pounds of milk would be recommended to the agriculture marketing board.

Thunder, Hail 100 MPH Winds Cause Damage

Oshawa, Georgian Bay Catch Full Impact

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two violent thunderstorms, one unscheduled and the other partly complying with weather predictions, struck parts of Ontario and Quebec Friday night.

Not for the amount of disturbance the storms kicked up, casualties were few.

At Stittsville, near Ottawa, an Ottawa woman and a 13-year-old Hamilton girl were killed in a head-on highway collision during a heavy cloudburst from a storm front shadowing both sides of the Ontario - Quebec border.

Numerous minor accidents occurred on highways between Georgian Bay and Oshawa when an unexpected thunder and hail storm packing 100-mile-an-hour winds swept across the area leaving a trail of destruction.

No one was seriously injured in the storm, which left behind shattered windows, power blackouts, uprooted trees and congested highways.

BREAKS UP PARTY

A final celebration attended by more than 100,000 persons at St. Helen's Island near Montreal in honor of St. Jean Baptiste was abruptly ended by a sudden burst of marble - sized hailstones.

The 400,000 island party climaxed week-long festivities for French Canada's patron saint. Fireworks ended the party and lightning, rain and hailstones finished it an hour later. Crowds scampered for cover under canvas shelters and picnic tables.

The show was cancelled and police had their hands full with traffic jams and a number of people who fainted or were injured in the run for cover.

In the blow between Georgian Bay and Oshawa, a 125-mile stretch, hail lashed wheat crops. Oshawa caught the storm's full impact before it pushed on into Lake Ontario.

The storm literally washed out the city for about 30 minutes and accompanying hurricane-force winds did extensive damage.

Power was off for an hour from 7:30 p.m. and police had a cordon off the city's downtown area where winds had snapped electrical wires and left them dangling from hydro poles.

Several small fires broke out, one of them in a hydro substation. It was quickly extinguished.

At the city airport, a light model aircraft was being swept

Candidates Give Views At Meeting

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — J. J. Greene, member of Parliament for Renfrew South, said Friday night that if he became Ontario leader of the Liberal party he would avoid provincialism and embrace Prime Minister Pearsons' concept of "cooperative federalism."

Mr. Greene, who says he will not definitely announce his candidacy for the party leadership until after the current session of Parliament ends, spoke to the annual meeting of the Niagara riding Liberal Association.

Also speaking to the meeting were the five declared candidates: Robert Nixon, member of the Ontario legislature for Brant; Charles Templeton, former evangelist and newspaper executive; Andrew Thompson, legislature member for Toronto Dovercourt; Joseph Gould, legislature member for Ottawa Braeondale; and Eddie Sargent, mayor of Owen Sound and provincial member for Grey North.

Mr. Greene, the most loudly applauded of the speakers, also said the provincial Liberal party has failed to provide for expanding university enrolment.

CLAIMS RETREAT

Mr. Nixon said bill 99, the so-called police-state bill, the Canada pension plans and medical insurance were examples of how the provincial government introduces legislation and then backed off under opposition prodding or pressure from federal Liberals.

Mr. Templeton said the government could not be defeated in its record.

Even the tarnish of the police bill was being polished up by a royal commission, he said, and in time would be forgotten. He called for the Liberals to promote legislation "excitingly new and daringly different."

Mr. Thompson said the Liberals must offer voters a "better package" than the Conservatives.

Mr. Gould proposed a government-sponsored consumer price index and that it be set up in neighborhood stores to enable them to compete with shopping plazas.

Military and Church Services Will Highlight the Celebrations

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians will celebrate the 97th birthday of the country with ceremonies ranging from military parades and services to picnics, concerts, regattas and folk dances.

Many areas across the country have reduced or eliminated celebrations because this year's Dominion Day falls on a Wednesday. The Canadian Highway Safety Council is hoping the accident toll for the mid - week holiday will be light.

Two Nova Scotia holiday highlights will be the annual fishermen's regatta and gathering of the clans at Pugwash, a village of 800 that gets as many as 15,000 visitors on Dominion Day.

In Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, along with Ontario and Quebec, were responsible for framing the British North America Act, given royal assent in March, 1867, making Confederation a reality.

Newfoundland, which did not join Confederation until 1949, traditionally remembers the day with church and military services to honor her men who died during the July 1, 1916, battle of Beaumot Hamel, a part of the battle of the Somme. Of the 800 men in the Royal Newfoundland Regiment only 68 escaped unhurt.

TRANSFER SITE

Montreal has chosen Dominion Day ceremonies to hand over a St. Helen's Island site to the Canadian Corporation for the 1967 world's fair.

Shortly after midnight lights will be dimmed in the city and the island will be set ablaze with bright lights and fireworks. Documents transferring the site of 800 that gets as many as 15,000 visitors on Dominion Day.

Ottawa will mark the holiday with the changing of the guard on Parliament hill, given a big-hour bell concert a the afternoon, followed by a concert of

Two US Flyers Shot Down, Killed By South Viet Nam Guerrillas

SAIGON (CP) — Two U.S. Army fliers were killed when their helicopter was shot down in the South Viet Nam region of Vinh Binh, government forces on the ground were reported today. They joined forty-six other Communist guerrillas and a training battle that followed.

The downed U.S. helicopter was flying support for a three-company Ranger operation aimed at the mouth of the Mekong River, capital of Tra Vinh, when it was hit by guerrilla groundfire.

The South Vietnamese Army observer aboard the plane was killed along with the American pilot. The U.S. gunners were wounded, one of them seriously.

Ground forces soon moved up on the guerrilla positions from where the groundfire had come. U.S. advisers here said the Viet Cong fled south of the city they fought a brisk battle with defending Viet Cong.

FORCES BATTLE

Sixteen government troops were killed and eighteen wounded in the battle.

The Saigon government also claimed that 91 Viet Cong were killed by regional and provincial combatant youth in Quang Ngai province that Wednesday.

South Vietnamese armored carriers slashed into a Viet Cong force in Binh Dinh province near earlier in a major battle near Bau Co, 60 miles northwest of Saigon and left possibly 100 enemy dead, American advisers reported.

The first reports of the war against the Viet Cong heightened in the field, Lt.-Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in Viet Nam, narrowly escaped a bomb blast at Saigon airport Thursday night. Two other blasts occurred in Saigon, one next to the home of Premier Nguyen Khanh.

Investigate 'Loose Ends' Of Tractor-Trailer Blast

MARSHALLS CREEK, Pa. (AP) — Investigators of explosions were under way today into the explosion of a tractor-trailer carrying dynamite that leveled several buildings, causing damage estimated at more than $500,000.

District Attorney James F. Marsh in this mountain resort area said his office is first investigating because there are "lots and lots of loose ends." He didn't elaborate.

The pre-dawn blast blew out windows as far as 10 miles away.

Soldiers guarded damaged homes against looting while others pressed a hunt for poisonous snakes that escaped when the explosion wrecked a roadside reptile farm.

The big tractor-trailer, bound from Pottsville, Pa., to Forestdale N.Y., was loaded with 15 tons of dynamite and explosive chemicals used for quarry blasting. It rolled to a stop on the parking lot of the reptile farm, a tourist attraction, after two of its rear tires blew out.

TRUCK BLEW UP

Firemen from this tiny community were reaching for chemical foam to fight a fire in the wheels when the truck became wrapped in flames and exploded.

Three firemen were killed. Also dead were three persons who had come to watch firemen in action. Ten were injured.

Police questioned the truck driver, Albert Koda, 31, of Port Cargon, Pa., for many hours. Koda told police he took over and drove the tractor to a service station where he telephoned his boss to report the trouble. police said he denied the tires were burning when he drove off or that he summoned firemen.

No one seemed to know who did. Fire Chief Ralph Miller, whose brother Earl was among the victims, said he believed it was a truck driver who made the call. It brought three engines, all destroyed, to the scene.

The snakes caused some worry for a time but residents expressed little concern.

Most of the 150 snakes kept in glass and wire cages had been accounted for long before nightfall Friday. Most were nonpoisonous. The bulk of the dangerous ones—a cobra, box constrictor and rattlers — were caught and killed or found dead.

Shastri Confined To Bed From 'Overstrain'

NEW DELHI (AP)—The exhausting job of leading vast and troubled India failed Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri today and he was confined to bed with what physicians termed "overstrain."

A short medical bulletin issued by the government made no reference to whether the 59-year-old Shastri had suffered a recurrence of the heart trouble he suffered in 1959 but a member of his household staff said there had been no sign of a relapse.

The bulletin said the prime minister was suffering a slight rise in temperature and that he had been ordered to take a complete rest. All engagements were cancelled.

Shastri's illness threw a scare into the government, which was just beginning to recover from the shock of the late prime minister Nehru from a heart attack May 27.

Shastri, seven in June 9, had been working night and day to fill the void left by Nehru's death. He had been reported in good health since his heart attack five years ago but the strain of leadership had been showing in recent weeks.

The program was introduced by Mr. T. K. Franklin, registrar of Albert College, who welcomed the parents and friends of the performers. Vases of peonies, provided through the kindness of Mrs. L. Phillips, made a floral decoration for the platform with its two pianos.

By way of contrast from the piano numbers, the vocal selections of Marjorie Hales were greatly enjoyed. Her "Pale Yaller Dog" being of particular interest to the younger performers.

Miss Hales made a floral group was of a sacred nature with the second number "Forward to Christ," being particularly charlenging.

Lettuce sold slowly at prices ranging from 10-30 cents for loose heads, according to quality and 25 cents for leaf.

A medium offering of peas-in-the-pod brought 30 cents a quart, $1.25 for six quarts.

Murney Hill Sanded to Protect Horses

No, the city public works department didn't suddenly go off the beam.

Neither was it expecting a sudden and unseasonable return of winter weather and ice conditions.

But the works department nevertheless did have its winter maintenance equipment out this morning and it did sand Murney Hill on West Bridge Street.

It was a matter of precaution to guard against an accident during the noon-day parade of horses being driven to the horse show at the fair grounds.

It seems parade sponsors felt there was a possibility of some of the horses becoming slick as proceeded down the hill and the works department was asked to spread a little sand to give them traction.

"We are hoping that a big wind comes up and blows the sand away, so we won't have to sweep it up," stated City Engineer Wilbur Purcell.

Trenton News

Old Newspaper Found in Ancient House

TRENTON — While the people in the busy city ripping old paper off the walls at 168 Marmora St., this week, the owner of the century old home, Mrs. J. Farrer and her son, William, found an old newspaper. The Leader, published in Trenton . . . the date? March 17, 1874.

The Leader was published three times daily. If you were an avid news fan, you paid three cents for the morning edition. If you were still interested in what was going on in the world, but could wait till noon to find out for sure, you paid two cents. If you didn't give a hoot, but wanted something to wrap the garbage in, you could get the evening edition for one cent.

The front page of the newspaper, as was the case in contemporary papers, was filled with advertisements. The owner of a "fine sable-colored horse, standing 15 hands high" was so anxious to get the animal back he had offered a $20. reward.

Leader readers were invited to purchase a booklet, published in the newspaper office, which would, in effect, outline for you how the then Prime Minister, Sir John A. Macdonald, George Brown and "his brother" meant to sell the country down the river to the Yankees.

Finance companies aren't new. In 1874 you were beset with ads . . . "money to loan" but one company (optimistic) was offering $10,000 for other any transactions were made.

Of interest to Trenton readers, was the fact that on the 14th. inst., Alexander Macauley Esq., of Trenton, collector of the Her Majesty Customs had passed away at the age of 74."

Belleville news was a few days more up to date, for we find recorded in the yellowed pages, "this morning, around Foster's, a fire broke out in the Royal Brewery on Front St., destroying part of the machinery, together with a quantity of grain. Loss, about $4,000."

Three Support U. S. Policy In S. E. Asia

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Martin, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson Friday voiced support in the Commons for United States policy in Southeast Asia.

T. C. Douglas, the New Democratic Party leader, and Deputy Creditiste Leader Gilles Gregoire expressed disapproval.

Mr. Martin, reporting on the Canada - U.S. cabinet defence committee meeting in Washington Thursday, said the U.S. objective is simply the proper execution of the 1954 and 1962 Geneva agreements in Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia.

"If the Communist powers . . . would observe those agreements" the U.S., which seeks no permanent bases or special position in either Laos or South Viet Nam, would no longer find it necessary to take special measures to support the governments of those two countries," the minister said.

Communist China and North Viet Nam were attempting to extend their influence through interference in the affairs of Laos and South Viet Nam. If the Communists continued their subversive activities, "a serious situation could develop."

Mr. Diefenbaker said "we should not do anything which would have the effect of giving to the Chinese or other Communists operating there the idea that we are not in unity with any action which the U.S. must take, short of war, to preserve and maintain the integrity of those countries."

Mr. Douglas said Mr. Diefenbaker's statement was "brinkmanship of the worst kind."

U.S. action in Southeast Asia "would seem to be predicated very largely upon its own vested interests."

The seriousness of the situation had been contributed to substantially by American officials who had stated the U.S. was prepared, if necessary, to risk war with China.

Mr. Thompson said it is easy to stand up and condemn the U.S. "and lose sight of the fact that if it was not for the Americans assuming some of these responsibilities the world would be in a much graver state than it is at the present time."

Mr. Gregoire said Canada should stay away from the Southeast Asia problem. The U.S. was imposing its ideas by force in the area.

Mr. Martin said the Washington meeting discussed "the changing nature of the threat to the North American continent and measures to meet that threat." He did not elaborate.

Motorcycle Races Partly Rained Out at Fairgrounds

The Railway Week motorcycle races were rained out at the Belleville fair grounds last night to the disappointment of some 1,600 fans.

However, before the final downpour a good display of sportsmanship and motorcycle handling was displayed in four of the scheduled five races.

Only one spill was reported during the races. A rider lost control of his machine on the southwest corner during the junior 500cc. The driver was not injured.

There were nine riders in the senior 500cc class with Yvon Genereux of Scarborough, Ont., placing first. A Waterloo driver, Harold Fritz, took first place honors in the 200cc class.

The big event of the evening was the expert 500cc. Five drivers competed in this race with the top honors going to Yvon DuHamel of Montreal, known as the best 500cc expert.

The final event, because of the rain, the junior 500cc class, was won by J. Vander Eyken of Oakville, Ont.

Heavy rain prevented the 250cc class from being held.

St. John Ambulance Brigade members as well as two ambulances were on hand in case of emergency. A truck from the Belleville Fire Department also stood by.

The races were sponsored by the Pision Pishers Club of Belleville and sanctioned by the Canadian Motorcycle Association. The club will present the one-half-mile dirt track Ontario Championship during the Belleville fair on August 17.

Defends Role Of Pope Pius In Second War

VATICAN CITY (AP) — As Vatican weekly magazine has devoted a special 80-page issue in defence of the Second Holy War role played by Pope Pius I. It said he faced Nazi death threats.

L'Osservatore Deli Domenica, weekend edition of L'Osservatore Romano, published what amounted to an unofficial white paper in the current controversy over the late Roman Catholic ruler.

"Today a posthumous trial is being carried out of Pius XII," the magazine said in an introductory editorial. "But too many persons have forgotten that Pius XII had fought with all his strength to avoid a world conflict."

"History crushes lies and errors without pity," said a second editorial. "It leaves only truth, and truth now puts and will put a halo of glory around Pius XII."

The special issue — containing articles by Catholics and non-Catholics as well as photographic copies of previously unpublished documents — appeared amid growing public discussion of Pius' war role resulting from Rolf Hochhuth's controversial play The Deputy and a number of recent books and articles.

One published statement Friday came from Albrecht von Kessel, a wartime member of the German Embassy staff at The Vatican, who is mentioned in the Hochhuth play.

Von Kessel wrote:

"Hitler was capable of any outburst and crime. He always aired the possibility of making the pope a prisoner and deporting him to the Reich . . . had the pope opposed such a measure, there even existed the possibility that he might have been shot whilst attempting to escape."

The Deputy suggests "Pius might have done more to halt Nazi persecution of Jews. Vatican officials have maintained he did all he could.

A number of cardinals, prelates, priests and non - Catholics wrote articles for the special issue, reporting on their personal wartime experiences. They generally declared Pius was deeply concerned about the fate of mankind and the suffering of the Jews.

Governor Makes Appeal for Aid in Search

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (AP) With a personal appeal from the governor to people of this hill country "to search your own premises," the search continued today for three civil rights workers who mysteriously vanished six days ago.

Take a few hours of your own time to search for clues," Governor Paul B. Johnson said in a broadcast from a local radio station.

Johnson came to Philadelphia late Friday as state and federal officers—joined by 100 sailors—again fought off snakes and insects while wading through swamps in their fruitless search for the trio.

Earlier, Allen Dulles, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, had recommended to President Johnson that the FBI's role against "terroristic activity" in Mississippi be expanded.

Dulles met Friday with the president to report on his two day mission to Mississippi. The president and Dulles conferred by telephone with governor Johnson during the meeting.

Company Will Hold Talks With Union

BRADFORD (CP) — United Farms Limited, one of three strikebound vegetable processing plants here, is scheduled to hold talks with union representatives Monday in an effort to settle a three-day walkout.

Meanwhile, the International brotherhood of Teamsters (Ind.) and the two other companies, Federal Farms and Holland River Gardens, have temporarily shelved a compromise union offer.

Some 300 workers are affected by the strike, called to support demands for wage increases.

Federal is the only one of the three plants still operating. The size of its work force depends on the number of casual workers it can hire and get past picket lines.

PICKETS MARCH

Picketing continued at the plants Friday but it was limited to three strikers at each entrance. There were no incidents.

Three persons charged in connection with outbreaks of violence earlier this week appeared in court Friday in this community 25 miles north of Toronto.

Guglierma Panetta, 34, and Mario Dancio, 30, both of Bradford, were remanded to July 3 on charges of wilful damage. They were arrested by police after strikers threw stones at a truck leaving United Farms Wednesday.

Hank Nyhuis, 28, was remanded to July 28 on a charge of threatening a worker who left Federal Farms Thursday.

CORNERSTONE UNVEILED — Cornerstone of new Ontario Business College at 54 Victoria Avenue is seen being unveiled by W. E. Sandercock, MLA for Hastings West as Mr. and Mrs. Clifford A. Brown look on. Mrs. Brown is principal at OBC.

Corner Stone of New OBC On Victoria Ave. Unveiled

Ontario Business College has occupied several sites in Belleville since it first began in 1888 and the latest move to 54 Victoria Avenue is hoped to be a permanent one.

In a special ceremony yesterday afternoon W. E. Sandercock, MLA for Hastings West, unveiled the corner stone of the new building. Following the unveiling by Mr. Sandercock, the new OBC was officially dedicated by Rev. Morgan G. McFarlane of Tabernacle United Church.

Ontario Business College was first founded in 1868 by Samuel G. Beatty and George Wallbridge.

In 1871 Mr. Wallbridge retired and Mr. Beatty was joined by W. B. Robinson who continued as one of the principals until 1904.

Mr. Beatty withdrew from his position at the college in 1877 at which time J. W. Johnson became co-principal to assist Mr. Robinson.

The college of principal was held by Mr. Robinson until 1919 when he was succeeded by I. L. Moore, thus completing 42 years as principal.

Mr. Moore was forced to retire from his position in 1956. Miss Ruth Nightingale then became principal of the college in 1958 and remained this post until 1963 when she returned to court reporting.

In 1963 Miss Nightingale was succeeded by Mrs. O. Anneta Brown, who was born in Belleville and has had business experience in many fields. She is the wife of Clifford A. Brown, an insurance representative.

Assisting Mrs. Brown at the college is Frank Leach, co-principal and business manager.

Students have attended and are still attending the college from the Maritimes to British Columbia, the British West Indies, Bermuda and many other countries.

Classes will begin in the new location on Monday and will continue throughout the year. OBC's new home is the former Emmanuel Episcopal Reformed Church and has been remodelled to make classrooms with a new addition at the rear for further classrooms and office space.

Mrs. Brown is past-president of both King George and Quinte Secondary School P.T.A. and was a Brownie leader.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown have three grown daughters.

Courageous Decision

The United Appeal objective has been set at $106,024.88.

This is some $13,000 more than the objective in any previous campaign.

And Belleville has never reached an objective in one of these annual United Appeal drives.

Does this mean that the board of directors have been unrealistic in setting this goal, that it is engaged in window-dressing?

We do not think so. On the contrary, we suggest that the board has been realistic, by making the goal fit the needs, rather than by trying to squeeze the needs into the limits suggested by past performances.

It took courage to do this.

We hope the directors show equal courage in another field.

This is with respect to provisions for allocation of gifts.

From the report of the directors' meeting, furnished by the United Appeal, it is evident that the allocation of gifts is viewed with disfavor. "The allocation of funds to a specific agency, while it may please the donor, defeats the object of a United way of giving," we are told.

Maybe that is it, maybe the fact remains that an emergency meeting endorsed such allocation and that donors will be offered the opportunity to deal with their gifts in this fashion. Therefore, it becomes imperative that the mechanics of the plan be spelled out in simple language all can understand.

Some similar campaigns have offered "allocation" privileges which are nothing but window dressing. While in theory they might affect the total received by each member organization, in practice these plans never do. Many donors know this. They need to be assured the same is not true of the procedure to be followed here. Otherwise, the United Appeal will suffer at least some of the disadvantages of allocation, while failing to reap all of the benefits which its advocates anticipate for such a system.

Nothing Decided

Leaders of the three main parties in federal politics are reported to be pleased with Monday's two by-elections.

On the face of it, somebody must be misinterpreting the results. Everybody cannot be a winner.

The truth of the matter seems to be that the results gave nobody any solid cause for rejoicing, while at the same time none had reason to despair.

If the riding of Nipissing had elected a Progressive Conservative, then the Liberals could have resigned themselves to the return to the Opposition. On the other hand, if the Progressive Conservatives had failed to hold Saskatoon, their stronghold on the prairies would obviously have been doomed to fall and their hopes of a return to power would have vanished. As for the New Democrats, their increased vote in Nipissing tells little or nothing about their chances for increasing their representation in the comparatively few ridings where they are real contenders.

If there are any conclusions to be drawn from these results, they fall in the negative classification. There appears to be no reason to believe that the performance of the Liberal Government has either earned overwhelming new support, or cost the party any major portion of the backing it enjoyed at the last election. The same is true of the performance by the Progressive Conservatives in the Opposition.

It even seems possible that the next election might produce another minority government, our third in a row. Horrible thought!

Questionable Strategy

Kari Ruehle is secretary of the Ontario Topless Bikini League—and for all we know the same Mr. Ruehle may be the League's only member.

Mr. Ruehle says that when bare bosoms are legal, men and women will have equal rights and that bare-bosom bathing suits are a key step in a social revolution that will lead to nude bathing being accepted on the beaches within 10 years.

Mr. Ruehle operates Sun Valley Nature Park near St. Catharines, Canada's largest nudist camp.

As such, he may imagine he has a vested interest in the promotion of nudity.

We cannot help wondering, though, whether he realizes that success for his crusade will put him out of business.

From the French-Canadian Viewpoint

This is a selection of editorials on current topics, translated from the French press of Canada:

Quebec Is Self-Governed

Quebec Is Self-Governed — In probably no other Canadian city has the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism been so badly welcomed as in Quebec. The fact that members of the commission themselves were bonded and that an organized group systematically interrupted persons who wanted to express themselves freely says enough for the Gestapo cruelty of the "republic" that certain of our separatist movements want to set up here.

The commissioners were not subjected to personal insults in any of the English provinces, as they were in Quebec. Yet, the Lauredeau-Dunton commission was created at the request of French Canadians to find a means of satisfying them.

The English Canadians were more reticent, indifferent. In fact, more silence might have been expected from them.

But the contrary happened. At Quebec we saw the sorry spectacle of organized separatists making the "welcome pets" for French - Canadians who seek energetically and discreetly the maintenance between the two languages and two cultures of this country. Happily the English might not reflect Quebec's thinking, as Mr. Lauredeau, the co-chairman, pointed out later. (June 15)

Le Devoir

Le Devoir — A group of separatists, making up perhaps one-quarter of the audience, invaded the hall (in Quebec City where the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism was meeting) and started rapidly spread out to the four corners, literally taking over the microphones in defiance of the rights of those who came to the meeting in good faith.

The phenomenon is classic. All movements that haven't got enough confidence in the persuasive forces of democratic discussion use it at some time or other. But this time the procedure is and causing odious about it and it must be denounced.

In using such tactics the supporters of separation show what troubled sources they feed on. What many of them seek is not to promote the choice they offer through normal discussion, but simply want to promote, under the specious pretext of a freedom that they don't invest them, a new policy of "believe it or", if you like, a new "believe it or don't, shut your mouth."—Claude Ryan. (June 19)

L'Action

Quebec L'Action — The Speaker of the House of Commons established a logical precedent in refusing, within the prime minister's double reaction on the flag. It was the act of a responsible Speaker who went (at least in appearance) against the decision of his political friends.

As proposed by the leader of the government, the resolution asked the House to pronounce itself simultaneously on the distinctive Canadian flag, and for or against the Union Jack as symbol of our loyalty to the Crown and to the Commonwealth. It would have been impossible either to approve the two or reject them.

Now that the Pearson resolution is split in two, the House will have to vote twice—first either for or against the distinctive flag, then for or against the flag of the United Kingdom as symbol of our allegiance.

It is already certain that Mr. Pearson will obtain a majority on the two resolutions. The first will be supported by the Liberal members, joined by the New Democratic Party, le Ralliement des Creditistes, the Quebec Conservatives and probably the Social Credit members. As for the second resolution, it will get the support of the Liberals and Conservatives, with the exception of the Quebec members. — Louis-Philippe Roy. (June 18)

Le Droit

Quebec Is Self-Governed — Le Droit, Ottawa — Premier Duplessis has announced he intends to run for a second seven-year term as president of the French republic.

He must serious opposition, then only one who has announced his intention to run against de Gaulle, is the mayor of Marseille, Gaston Defferre, a candidate of the Left. On his last trip to the United States and to France itself, Mr. Defferre's stand, notably in foreign affairs, has been open and enlightened.

He wants to reinforce Europe through closer co-operation by France with her Common Market partners on the economic, political and military levels. De Gaulle aims at a sort of French pre-eminence over her partners.

Certainly de Gaulle played an indispensable role at the head of France in May, 1958, when the country was on the verge of serious convulsions, perhaps civil war. At that moment of national crisis he was the only one capable of settling the Algerian conflict, of subsequently reforming the institutions of the Fourth Republic, of uniting the nation above factions and parties.

In this regard he was "heaven sent." But Heaven sent men often end up being cumbersome.

Compared with Defferre, the authoritarian rigidity and stubbornness of de Gaulle, seeded during the days of May, 1958, now can block the progress of France and of United Europe by creating needless quarrels. (June 13)

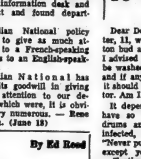
La Voix de l'Est

Granby La Voix de l'Est—Is Charles de Gaulle's reelection as president of France assured?

The president has adversaries but the people in general have kept their confidence in him. The French do not intend to return to the days of shortlived, weak, discredited governments. They want, as de Gaulle himself has said, "a state, a republic which is the first, continuous and impartial representation of the general interests of the nation."

After so many accomplishments which assure the power of France in all fields of activity, the French people would have difficulty supporting any other faction but General de Gaulle's. More than any other government, it has guided France towards her real destiny. (June 15)

Le Devoir



Moncton L'Evangeline — In the last year, Canadian National Railways' service has been reduced a bit hardly. It must be admitted that its president, Donald Gordon, has developed an almost efficient, profitable service.

The Gordon affair, which created such a furor in the country, and notably in Quebec, will be recalled no doubt. It was at this time that the CNR president realized that French - Canadians were determined to obtain the recognition of their rights.

A French service has been organized in the Canadian National, from public relations to the information desk and one lost all fond despatment.

Canadian National policy now is to give as much attention to a French-speaking client as to an English-speaking one.

Canadian National has shown its goodwill in giving special attention to our demands which were, it is obvious, very numerous. — Rene D'Anjou. (June 18)

Declaring that there are a number of tangible and intangible influences at work in the city that are adversely affecting development of boys, who in the main, are not under the influence of a church, school or Y.M.C.A., Principal W. S. Turner of the Belleville Collegiate Institute, "sharply criticized poolrooms as one of the most serious menaces to the safe living of a boy."

Speaking to the Rotary Club at its regular weekly luncheon, Principal Turner told the club men that he had appeared in court on various occasions as "defence counsel" for boys who had run foul of the law. Three of these boys were students of B.C.I. "I'm stated, "and after the culmination of their trials I interviewed them individually. One 15-year-old lad stated that he had frequented pool rooms frequently and had never been questioned by any adult. He stated he had seen gambling; played pea pool and learned how to use profane language."

Principal Turner went on, "another lad of 16, who had appeared in court, told me that he had been going to poolrooms for two years. No one had ever asked him his age, and now he could gamble, shoot crap, swear and even drink if he learned these things in the poolrooms from the boys, and it was in one of these games that all plans and details of the breaking and entering with which he had been charged, had been formulated." Principal Turner continued: this lad said, 'If boys you can do something about it, for it has been harmful to me and will affect my life.'"

Old Parties Are Warned

Ottawa Journal

The NDP increased its vote in Nipissing and Saskatoon.

It did not increase it in Nipissing because it has had a good record since the 1963 general election. It hasn't. It did this because the two main parties haven't had a good record either. A number of voters wished a plague on both the older houses.

The Liberals and Conservatives have been warned.

Sharp Objects Should Be Kept Out of Ears

By JOSEPH C. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Doctor: I have a daughter, 11, who likes to take a cotton bud and clean out her ears. I advised against it. They should be washed with soap and water and if any picking is necessary, it should be done only by a doctor. Am I right? — P. K.

It depends. People used to have so many problems with drums and scratches that got infected, that doctors advised, "Never put anything in your ear except your elbow."

Toothpicks, hairpins, and even nail files by the day to dig way out of their ears, or to scratch an itch in the ear, are dangerous.

As to the cotton buds, if they are pushed into the ear canal, I say no. The cotton may come loose and stay plugged in the ear. Or the stick, even padded with cotton, can do damage if pushed too far.

If on the other hand, the cotton is simply twirled in the ear then you can easily see and not pushed into the canal itself, that is, only the outer part, no cup-like places in the outer ear, all right.

The rule should be: Never go farther than the outer level of the face and the size of the hole. A kind of cleaning, of course, usually can be done just as well with soap and water.

In the same mail came a letter from a woman whose young-ster not long ago had written that "was lip - reading before we managed a system to get his ears cleaned out." She thought that the child didn't hear when somebody was talking behind him!

He was a child who had a great deal more wax than normal. It piled up in the ear canal and piled up into a compressed, dense mass.

Such hardened wax will cling to the tiny hairs and it can hurt no matter how gently a doctor tries to get it out. The boy became deaf.

Note to Dr. P. K.: I don't care for cutts or "natural remedy" proponents who maintain that some single food will cure anything, but certainly the ear is never seen any evidence that pumpkin seeds will prevent prostate trouble.

How to Go Swimmingly Down Diplomatic Row

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Don't let 'em kid you about there being any diplomatic stuffing in Paul Martin's shirt.

The veteran Windsor looks that way, at casual glance, simply because he's Secretary of State for External Affairs.

The Lakehead's politician-pundit, Douglas Fisher, the NDP star of platform, radio, TV and printed page, started the rumor about Gem Paul putting on diplomatic airs.

It was his nifty (if not so) crack about the "old pro Paul retreating into statesmanship" that did the trick.

Then Liberal MP Grant Deachman of Vancouver South-Vancouver seemed to confirm it with his even nastier nifty that old warrior Paul Martin had used to gloriously shell his enemies with his thundering 18-inch orthodical guns now was "softly stoning them to death with marshmallows."

The Old Smoothie may be long on flitting dignity since he took over at stuffy External Affairs. But putting on the diplomatic rite? Never. Not even with the teacup-and-saucer boys who man the foreign offices in his high and mighty Department.

In fact, he may be teaching them a thing or two in How-to-Win Friends-and-Influence-People.

SWIM OR SINK.

They still haven't recovered from the shock of discovering that the one sure way of doing business with their boss — of dragging often hard-to-get decisions out of him — is to take Oom Paul swimming.

The External Affairs Minister is a swimmer.

Almost a career swimmer, you might say, in all the 29 years he has graced the Capital scene.

Winters he swam at the Chateau Laurier.

(Now he has moved into one of those 20-storey high rise apartments with a pool and saunas, the closer to be a more convenient commute.)

Summers he strokes around Brantwood Beach, a suburban watering place.

Holidays he basks, beachside, at Colchester, down home in Essex County.

For the last three weeks — except for that cold snap — Oom Paul has been taking his noonday dip at Hartington Lake, sitting along some of the Bright Young Men from External, like the third a meteor.

Old Swimmer Martin, a handsome sunlamp brown, steamed out into the water, while the BYM, in turn, pale as mushrooms, churn along in his wake, straining to conserve gasps and gulps to discuss the current state of world affairs as they prepare to Canada's basis ass abroad.

Along about the fourth or fifth buoy out in the deep water, when Oom Paul, stroking strong as a young salmon, is all relaxed and feeling fit as a fiddle a latter day Johnny Weismuller, the BYM are beginning to pant for the difficult decisions.

IN THE SWIM

Like when are we going to increase the exchange and caviar allowance for our men in Ruritania, or can we fix the traffic ticket for Ambassador for Bogulooboovia picked up for joy-riding on the Mall?

Martin's answer, the day sunny and Oom Paul's feeling expansive, they can almost count on a hearty "Yes" to most anything you say" — provided they aren't swamped in the wake of the Martin breaststroke up and down the Rideau River.

It is an awful change of pace and scene for the Martin-Pauls-and-Morning-Coat set from External Affairs who have been used to doing their best thinking around a chamois-topped table in a thickly carpeted conference room, and not over their heads in the stuff they use to keep afloat in the rest of the daily cocktail sorees down Diplomatic Row.

But they'd better get used to it.

Because swimming suddenly is "in" at both Ottawa and Washington.

Here, you've arrived if Prime Minister Pearson and his wife Marvon ask you up for a picnic in Harrington Lake at their summerhouse in the pine-scented Gatineau Hills 20 miles north of the city.

In the other Capital, you're "in" when you get to swim with President Johnson in the White House pool.

To get anywhere in this Parliament, it isn't so much whether you can make a good speech or even a personable political appearance. It's whether your crawl kick makes you go like an outboard, or better still, whether you can do 50 non-stop lengths of the Chateau's Olympic-sized pool. (George Ross rules. But only)

Who's for Brantwood Beach, or Harrington Lake?

REFLECTIONS OF A TEACHER

(conclusion)

"No bubble is so iridescent or floats longer than that blown by the successful teacher." — Sir William Osler.

"I was only a youngster, yet to me, she was a wonderful person. She really was somebody whom I look up to, and I have striven to live up to her ideals and teaching all my life. I said an eighty-year old Bellewille lady the other day, in appreciation of a beloved childhood teacher.

This tribute came to mind again, as Miss Nellis Merry, a Belleville teacher, with whom we were speaking on aspects of teaching, said:

"Children respond to responsibility best through example. I recall an outstanding lady professor, many years ago, whose brilliant teaching failed to overshadow her drab and shoddy appearance in the mind of her most excellent pupil, who declined to follow a similar career because '. . .It would only be a matter of time before I'd look just like her, and I refuse to do so. . .' To succeed ally awaken in children a sense of confidence and responsibility, it is very necessary to be an ideal for them.

"The basis of the best relationship," Miss Merry said in conclusion, "between a teacher and pupils who always detect insincerity 'a thousand miles away' is that which each the teacher must strive for in his own way, namely, respect."

A young woman whom we met during World War II told of an experience she had in this respect:

"Before I was married I did research work in Biology after I received a degree from the University of London. I married a gentleman farmer from the Isle of Guernsey where we lived in a charming old house, well staffed with servants. We reared two sons.

"Then came the war!

"I was the last motor to step on the last boat that was to rescue mothers and children before the Trumans came. Through friends of my husband's I managed a passage with our children to Canada, while my husband joined the Armed Forces.

"Through welfare channels, I was offered a teaching post in a rural district in Western Canada. This meant that I could support and keep the two boys in boarding school.

"Though my husband's occupation dealt with land, I knew little if nothing about it. Now I was at a loss how to reach the hearts of honest forthright fine people who made up the community of so-called 'new Canadians' whose way of life was so drastically different from mine. I despaired of ever finishing out the year. I felt the people did not accept me, and had not so much been at stake, I would have resigned. I seemed aloof and apart from their activities, their problems, their life. It was so discouraging. Each night I prayed for enough fortitude to keep on for the end of the next day, the present term, the end of the year.

"One Saturday afternoon, my landlady was doing some baking. I sat and watched her manipulate the flour-shaker and the rolling pin with skill and ease as the rich dough fell into shape by the mere touch of her fingers. The thought struck me forcibly: 'All my life, I've buried myself in books. I don't do enough with my hands!' and I heard myself asking, 'Would you, could you, teach me how to bake?'

"And she kindly did so.

"I developed a passionate interest in it. I began to bake diligently and learned the deep satisfaction of turning out juicy, fragrant fruit and berry pies, and golden brown loaves of home made bread. For some reason I had a talent for coffee-cake, and imagine my winning the Coffee-Cake Prize at the Women's Institute Annual Fair in baking!

"Finally the end of the school year came, and it was with a heavy heart that I took a fresh light coffee-cake to the school picnic which closed the term, knowing I would not be back next year as their teacher, since I had not been asked to do so. With my professional integrity at stake, it seemed unbearable to be such a failure.

"I can't tell you what or how it came about, but the parents and children seemed so warm and friendly, and as they partook of my coffee-cake smiled in admiration as to its goodness, the chairman of the school board rose to say: 'We are all of one accord. We hope you will come back next year, not only to teach our children — but also so we may sample more of your coffee-cake. . .'

Later he told me: 'Your warmth and sincerity have touched the inarticulate hearts of these people. We're glad you are returning next year.'

"I may add, the second year was one of the best ever and I stayed on until it was possible for our family to be united again. But as I look back, it seems a miraculous thing that unwittingly I should have earned their respect and confidence, not scholastically, but through my earnest desire to learn to bake and make good coffee-cake."

When we expressed our thanks to Miss Merry for her enriching contribution to this column, she replied, "I've always been so glad I came to Belleville and do tell my pupils I love them all, each and every one."

WON'T BE LIFE MEMBER

LONDON (AP)—Sir Winston Churchill isn't going to become the first honorary life member of Parliament. Members of the House of Commons have abandoned a plan for the unique tribute to the 89-year-old statesman, who has announced he will not stand for re-election this fall. Traditions proved too strong to get the idea through.

CLEANING PEAS during the first production run at the Baxter Cannery in Bloomfield are Mrs. Leslie Bowerman, Mrs. Earl Thompson and Miss Edna Smith. Burned during the spring, the cannery was rebuilt in record time.

Baxter Cannery Is Ready As Pea Harvest Is Started

The pea canning season began yesterday, and the Baxter Cannery at Bloomfield was ready for it. About 16 weeks of intensive work rebuilt the cannery after it burned during the spring, and final tests on the pea canning equipment were completed Thursday night. Original estimates indicated the crop might be ready as early as two weeks ago and target dates for the construction were set according to the earlier date but, as cool weather delayed the crop, work on the installation of the machinery was allowed to slow to a normal pace.

About fifty acres of peas were harvested yesterday morning, from fields owned by Norman Leavitt, Borden Cleave and Ben Chapman, all of Prince Edward county. Six of the Baxter firm's 20 viners were used to vine the crop, and canning started about noon. Work was delayed slightly to allow time for a re-adjustment of the pea-cleaner's speed.

About fifty people worked yesterday, harvesting, vining and canning the peas to fill an initial order of 1,000 cases for rush delivery to Toronto. Full-scale production will begin Monday morning.

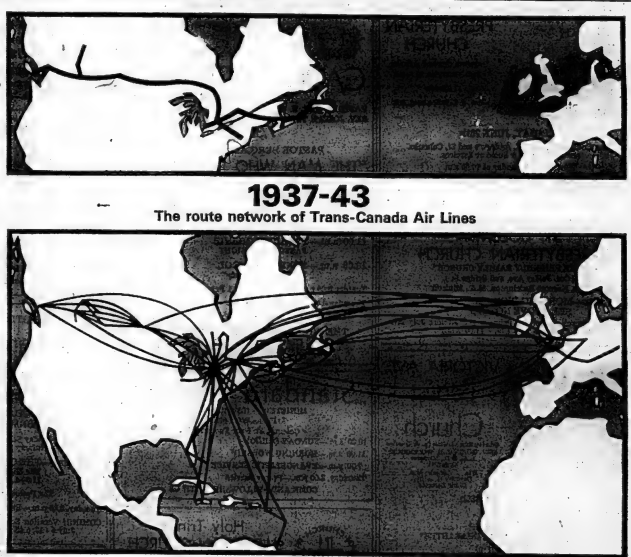
Kelly's Drug Store Collects Funds for Team



Local druggist, Paul Kelly, is extending a helping hand to the Canadian Olympic Fund Committee. A special collection box has been installed in his store to make it easy for residents of Belleville to provide direct financial support for our Olympic athletes. This action follows the recent appeal for financial support made by James Worrall, Q.C, President of the Canadian Olympic Association. Over 1400 other Rexall Drug stores throughout the country will also be acting as Official Olympic Fund Collection Centres.

While all levels of Government are supporting the Olympic athletes we are sending to Japan next October, Rexall's collection service will enable any citizen to become a "shareholder" in Canada's team, announced Mr. Worrall.

The collection box is in the form of a large size "Super Plenamins" bottle—the Vitamin product chosen for use by the Olympic athletes. Customers will be able to spot it easily, by its location near the cash register, and by the red and blue card reading: "Support your Olympic Team."

Those wishing to make major contributions to the fund may send their donations to: The Olympic Fund Committee, c/o Rexall Drug Company Ltd., Cooksville, Ont. Official receipts will be provided, on request, for income tax purposes.

In addition to providing this fund collection service on behalf of the Olympic Committee Kelly's Drug Store intends to participate in nationwide advertising support of the fund.

A Lift for Living

Finest Servants of Mankind Always Dare to Be Different

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

At his best, man is a maladjusted creature; chronically dissatisfied with things as they are. Because man had difficulty adjusting himself to cold air and cold food he invented the home fire for warmth and cooking. Because he was discontented with his legs as means of locomotion man invented the boat and the wheel and domesticated horses for riding purposes. Fretting over inadequate means of communication, man invented complex language so he could express his thoughts and feelings and went on to create writing, printing, the telephone, telegraph, radio and television. No other animals have done these things. None has felt a need for better things; they have been adjusted to things as they are.

We humans are adjusted to maladjustment. When life is somewhat difficult for us and we are "out of kilter" with our environment, we often prosper from the strain. When life is too easy for us, we suffer from excess comfort. Have you ever been sentenced to several weeks of bedrest? One would guess that such prolonged repose would strengthen a patient. However, while quietness and inactivity may be curative so far as the affliction is concerned, extended physical idleness raises problems of its own. It weakens the muscles until any mild exercise is exhausting. Muscles require opposition and struggle to keep their tone.

TOO MUCH ADJUSTMENT

One would think that walking over smooth, hard pavement would be easier than tramping over rough meadows, rolling hills or forest trails. City sidewalks and pavements were built especially for man's convenience, to make locomotion more comfortable. Nevertheless, few tasks are more tiring than a day's walk on concrete that has been laid for man's convenience. Concrete pavings are especially fitted to man, and supposedly man is adjusted to pavements. But his body responds to rough ground, to the harsher environment of the natural world. Too much adjustment is hard on man.

We need more and better maladjustments in human society. In the realms of morals and spirit, adjustment to things as they are is crippling to character, and it stifles progress. The welfare of humankind depends upon the courage of some members of society to be different from the rest. They must go boldly past the easy, comfortable morality of those around them. They are better than the law requires and better than man expects them to be, although being different will surely cause them trouble. In the fifth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles we learn of the ecclesiastical trial of Peter and John. This occurred in the early days of the Christian Era when Christianity had a youthful vitality and when it was dangerous to be a Christian. Then, as now, society tended to be in adjustment to one's social environment, to agree with the authorities, to respect one's own principles and practices with those of the secular world, to "blend in." "When in Rome, do as the Romans do" was safe advice for in those times the penalty for nonconformity was severe — frequently jail and sometimes death. Peter and John were wholeheartedly committed to Christ and the Christian Cause, and they had since discovered that dedication to the will of God often means maladjustment to the will of man. Taken before an ecclesiastical council, they were charged with preaching a new, unorthodox and revolutionary gospel. At the trial they were forbidden to teach the Christian message. To this demand they answered, "We must obey God rather than men." This enraged members of the council who wanted to kill the apostles, but Gamaliel, a great, honored teacher of the law, dissuaded the troubled officers, and the apostles were released after a severe beating. They returned to their preaching, still dangerously maladjusted to the world as they found it.

NEED MALADJUSTMENT

The best servants of mankind have always been maladjusted to their times. They dared to be different, to think differently, to act differently. Christ did and His apostles did or there would be no Christianity. Copernicus and Galileo and others did, or we would still believe in a puny universe. Inventors did, or we would still be ploughing fields with a stick and lighting our houses with torches or candles.

Mankind's most noble servants have refused to become adjusted to man's cruelty to man, to predatory economic practices, to the idea that disease is inevitable and useless to oppose, to dictatorships, to the persecution of minorities, to race prejudice, to narrow nationalism, to the war method of solving international differences. For conscience — for man's sake and for God's sake they lived daringly. They rejected the premium that others put on a safe conformity and they ventured to become uncommon men. They did not parrot the opinions of others but spoke their own clean, sharp words. They did not blend in, but stood out even when it was perilous to be "outstanding."

How about you? Do you tend to become conformed, blended with the masses, losing your God-given individuality?

Do you unthinkingly bow your knees to custom and tradition without examining their values?

Does "Everybody's doing it" seem adequate justification for almost any behavior? For common vulgarities? For heavy drinking? For laxity in matters of sex?

Do you have only impressions, opinions and theories that change with the shifting winds of public opinion and practice, or do you hold mighty convictions that give you steadiness and strength when others waver?

Are you a voice or merely an echo?

Would you rather be wrong and approved by others, or right and ridiculed?

Some years ago a telephone operator in a small Cape Cod town received daily calls from a man who asked for the exact time. This went on for many weeks. Finally the operator asked the caller why he called every day requesting the correct time. The man replied, "I must get the exact time, because I am the man responsible for blowing the town whistle precisely at noon each day." "Well, that's mighty odd" the operator replied, "because every day, exactly at noon, I set my clock by your whistle." A parable of life! We need to set our time, our moral standards, our principles from one another. Being adjusted to each other we become maladjusted to God.

Like Peter and John, we need to get our time from the heavens.

Readers Saturday Column

by Mary Moore

Question: A very long time ago I had a recipe for a mixture called "tutti-frutti" that was to be made at each Christmas time. I seem to remember it was made by placing each fruit in a layer along with sugar in a crock as it ripens. Now that my family is growing and I have more time I'd like to try this but I can't find any instructions or find anyone who has even heard of it. I wonder if you can help me . . . Joan M.

Answer: Yes, I know what you want.

SATURDAY

Dinner Menu

Platter of Cold Cuts: Sliced Cold Tongue, Salami, Liverwurst; Sweet Pickles; Macaroni Salad (see Friday); Sliced Tomatoes; Fruit Cup of Sliced Peaches, Bananas and Cubed Pineapple; Sponge Cake; Tea.

TUTTI-FRUITTI

Put one pint brandy into a stone crock or 3-qt. jar, add the various prepared fruits as they come into market: strawberries, black cherries, raspberries, currants, peaches. Pineapple may also be added. To each 4 cups of prepared fruit add 4 cups sugar and stir the mixture each morning until all the fruit has been added, then in refrigerator or very cool place.

Question: I'm sure it was in your column that I saw a recipe for baking powder babs, but I cannot find it. Would it be possible for you to print this again sometime? Also do you have a doughnut recipe — one for deep fat rather than frying and not using a biscuit mix as the base? I would very much appreciate these if you possibly can print them in the paper again. Your columns is most popular . . . Mrs. M. R.

Answer: I must ask you, Mrs. M. R., to include your name and address on stamped self-addressed envelope next time you write. The following is a repeat.

BAKED DOUGHNUTS

1½ cups scalded milk, 1-3 cup shortening, ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoons salt, 2 teaspoons nutmeg, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 1 cup bran (whole bran cereal), 2 cakes compressed or 2 packages granular yeast; ¼ cup lukewarm water; 2 eggs, slightly beaten; 4¼ cups sifted flour; 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted.

Pour hot milk over shortening, bran in sugar, salt, spices and nutmeg. Stir and cool. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water; add to bran mixture to which has been added unsifted flour. Add flour and mix thoroughly. Cover and let stand in warm place until doubled in bulk, about 2 hours. Turn dough on lightly floured board. Shape in a ball (dough will be very soft to handle). Roll out to ½" thickness.

Do not stretch dough. Cut out with floured 3" doughnut cutter. Place 2" apart on greased baking sheets. Brush with melted butter and let rise until light, about 45 minutes. Fry at 425 deg. Fahr. about 10 to 12 minutes. Cool and ice with thin confectioners' sugar icing. Makes about 3 doz. 3" in diameter.

NOTE: I did not give a recipe for baking powder babs, but I cannot find it. Would it be possible for you to print this again sometime? Also do you have a doughnut recipe — one for deep fat rather than frying and not using a biscuit mix as the base? I would very

WEDDING BELLS

There are four kinds of weddings and four kinds of wedding dresses.

The large formal wedding held in a church, hotel or home calls for a white or off-white, floor-length wedding dress with or without a train or sweep to the skirt. The veil may be long or short. The bridegroom wears morning suiting (cutaway coat) for the formal daytime wedding, or full evening dress (white tie) if the wedding is in the evening.

The less formal wedding still should only be worn for a cathedral wedding. The attendants should wear a floor - length gown.

The slightly less formal wedding calls for a floor - length dress, either in white or light pastel with a short veil. The groom wears an Oxford jacket with a grey vest and striped trousers or a dark blue suit in the daytime. In the evening, he wears a dinner jacket (black tie).

For the informal wedding, a white or pastel dress with matching veil or small hat are suitable. This is correct for a second wedding. In the latter case, the bride can wear a suit or daytime dress. Most prefer soft, dressy dresses.

If a full-length sleeve is worn, should the dress have three-quarter sleeves or short sleeves gloves should cover the exposed part of the arm. The ring finger of the glove should be split, although most of the shorter lengths will slip off easily.

SIMPLE JEWELRY WORN

All jewelry worn by the bride for a formal wedding should be simple — no rhinestones or flashing ornaments, please. Most brides choose one strand pearl bracelaces with no earrings or bracelets. Carry a handkerchief and a bouquet or prayer book.

The father of the bride and the father of the bridegroom, the best man and the ushers all wear a dress as the bridegroom. The dresses of the bride's attendants are chosen to complement the bridal dress. For small informal "animal game" teams were chosen and Mr. M. Patrick's team were the winners. "Number and Parcel Game" was won by Miss Sandra Purvis. The "article game" was won by Miss Lois Wright.

A mock wedding was enacted in full bridal colored costumes with preacher, Mrs. Gordon Taylor; bride, Mrs. Austin Watson; groom, Miss Linda Fisher; bridesmaid, Mrs. Eldon Sine; flower girl, Miss Brenda Fisher; bride's father, Mrs. Wayne Post. A wedding music duet (piano and accordion was played by Miss Beverley Ann Samaker and Miss Carolyn Reichert.

A poem was red by Mrs. M. Patrick, two poems were read by Mrs. E. Strome.

Mrs. P. Spring spoke a few words and Lois opened her lovely gifts and thanked her friends. A lunch made of colorful pompons was placed on her bridal. Mrs. G. Curry led in the games. Refreshments were served by the hostess, Miss Carolyn Reichert, and co-hostesses, Miss Sandra Purvis, Miss Linda Fisher, Mrs. E. Sine and Mrs. A. Watson.

Going Places

Dude Ranch Section of Texas 'Puts It on Good' for Visitors

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

BANDERA, Tex. — "Of" Smokey Wilson is 54, looks a bale like 34 and is proud of it.

"I'm just a natural-born old timer," he says. "Even when I was a kid I was always more interested in the past than anything else."

Smokey wears what looks like a 50-gallon hat, sports handlebars and shoots from the hip. Pistol Pete Wilson (no kin), one of the feared lawmen of the old west who killed 31 bad men and died in bed.

For years Smokey has been known around the southwest as the man who lived with his family in a letter-authentic covered wagon (drawn by team of oxen (he made the yokes himself), touring fairs and shopping centres-complex. He's settling down here now to become a feature of a new western town-tourist attraction.

The woods and hills northwest of San Antonio are full of non-characters like Smokey who like to wallow in the non - Old West. Among the dude ranch country of Texas are 30 places with names like Longhorn Ranch, Flying Barar, a couple of bunkhouses with modern plumbing but a lot of saddle Sorees.

When the tenderfoot(romantic-feet?) come to town from Chicago and Des Moines, they ain't disappointed. Each of them in his way of entertainment. Even hanging.

STRETCH 'EM UP"

A local group known as the Gunslingers stages a kind of rally when a large enough group is signed up. It's more like the stagecoach — er, bus — on a dark road outside of town, select a likely victim, hold him up, and string him up in full view of everyone.

The victim is always the same man, a young electrical engineer from Houston from San Antonio, who before any particular eyes danced on air for the benefit of the camera with an ingenious shoulder harness.

Like nearly everyone who hangs around dude ranch country, most of the Bandera band is a collection of city slickers who like to live the life of a cross of Twin Elms' Frank Anderjeaned character found leaning over the Purple Cow Bar in the New Frontier Hotel turned out to be the editorial cartoonist for a San Antonio newspaper who is establishing the Western town.

Oil Smokey will populate. Others will be members of professional men of various persuasions. Most of the ranch owners are local businessmen or folk, with the notable exception of Gen. Ely Elmo Kinard Kinard, who had spent a few years as foreman of a working ranch.

The legendary Old West really isn't too far removed from the present for many of us, though it's not always as obviously and cheerfully put on as at Bandera. The spirit of Texas" is still the only state going for which citizens are expected to salute the national anthem. And there is wild country and folklore wherever you go.

DAVY CROCKETT FOREST

Up in northeastern Texas, for example, on the edge of Davy Crockett National Forest (what else did you think they'd call it) sits the prosperous commercial and lumbering town of Lufkin. Except for a tale of the Old West, which is what happened only in Texas, Lufkin today might have the 200 population it had when it was founded at its present respectable 20,000.

It seems one E. P. Lufkin was surveying the area when he decided locate a depot in a town where his boys could be thrown in jail just for playing marbles. He moved his operation to Lufkin. Sir transit gloria Homer.

Just across the Neches from Lufkin, the oldest settlement in Texas and once a key trading post on the Royal Road, or Old Spanish Trail from Louisiana to San Antonio and Mexico. Here Sam Houston established his short-lived Republic of Frisco, and the old stone fort which was its capital still stands on the handsome campus of Stephen F. Austin College.

Towering pine forests and lake-filled woodlands surround Lufkin and every bubbly is the foliage not often associated with stereotypes of Texas.

BACK OIL FIELD

North of Nacogdoches (which you can pronounce all right if you forget the "g") is the town of Kilgore, in the heart of one of the richest oil fields in the world. There are more than 4,000 working oil wells in the city limits, many of them downtown. One family has five on its lot, and they just sit around on the porch all day watching themselves make money.

Texas food has come in for a lot of belaboring over the years, but if you take it without a grain of salt, you might develop a taste for barbecue and chili (which originated in San Antonio, not Mexico). Breakfast hams and sausages are as fine as any, and barbecue is not necessarily beef. Some of the charcoal-sautéed delicacies are javelina (wild boar) and venison. Both are excellent if properly prepared — and side dishes such as french - fried okra and hominy, which tastes like eggplant.

Anyway, it's not all barbecue. There is gratifying supply of Frenchmen and Swiss running around Texas' hostelries and restaurants. The Inn at Lakeway Inn at Lake Travis, managed by ex-Parisian Pierre Casels, has a reputation for its list and tournedos Rossini, among other things on the menu.

Our only bad moment with it came when our 10-year-old, Jonathan, asked the chef Casels and Pierre insisted he try the beef Stroganoff. "Tastes like it's made with sour cream," soured Jonathan.

Women's Institutes

WALLBRIDGE WI.

Mrs. E. B. Phillips opened her home for the June meeting of the Wallbridge Women's Institute with an attendance of 29 members and one visitor.

The roll call was answered by Canadian Industries and Vaggan Mills, Bay Drive, Belleville with choice for an industrial tour. Two guides showed the visitors around the plant where the use of all colors and styles of socks, designed by the firm, are stamped with their own brand name and packaged. On the second floor where the knitting machines are stored and also machines to unravel and wind yarn on spools ready for the sock machines. This plant which has expanded in the last five years was a worthwhile industry to tour.

Mrs. Chisholm presided at the meeting after the members returned to the home. Secretary Mrs. Hinchcliffe reported that a delegation will represent Sid Martin and family of Stirling.

A discussion took place on catering for meals at Belleville Fair, and on a request for a display of antiques from the Institute for ihe museum. Mrs. Spencer, Tweedsmuir curator gave a report.

PICNIC TO COBOURG

The leader and members of the Belleville club donated their collections to the Belleville Museum. A picnic lunch is planned by the Belleville Institute. A bus supplied at Cobourg to go to the museum and other points of interest. A sales catalogue from Belleville museum of old documents, maps, letters, etc. was on sale.

Mrs. N. Ketcheson reported from the C.A.C. bulletin on pesticides, and how they should be used with care. An example of an approved life jacket, vest style was demonstrated. Bright colors such as orange should be chosen to attract attention in time of disaster.

The draw was won by Mrs. Clapp. Thanks were expressed to the hostess, and the meeting closed with lunch served by the committee in charge.

Ann Landers

Woman Chronic Telephoner Unstable and a Tyrant

DEAR ANN LANDERS — What can I do about a chronic telephoner? She is a tyrant. She has terrorized my friends, my family and me. As many as three times a day?

I want to be kind to this woman because I know she is pathetically lonely. I do all I can for her, including bringing new friends to her home to fill her empty hours. But the more I give, the more she demands.

I find myself becoming increasingly resentful because this person called only if her mouth is open. Hints don't help.

Is there anything I can do to get her to cut her calls to one a day? She is a little unstable and I don't want to upset her. Thank you. — BUNION ON MY EAR LOBE.

DEAR BUNN — A woman who is so inconsiderate of your time that she would telephone you three times a day is more than "a little unstable" — she is a tyrant.

Telling her to limit herself to one call a day will not help. You will have to compose a cut-off sentence, write it out and have it handy by the phone. (Sample: "Sorry, I can't talk now. I'm running.") When she calls a second or third time, spiel it off in a breathless voice and run.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm 32, have never been married. Now I'm going with a woman I think I want to make my wife.

Greta (not her real name) is good-looking, a fine cook and housekeeper and she is crazy about me. The only thing holding me up is that Greta has three children by a previous marriage.

These kids are fairly well-behaved but sometimes they get on my nerves by just being around. There are times when I walk out of that house and say to myself, "I'm glad to be away from there." And then at other times I tell myself I will get to it.

I could write two more pages but you get the idea I'm sure. Do you have any advice for me? — UP A TREE.

DEAR UP — Get out of that tree and find a single woman or a widow who has no children. A 32-year-old bachelor who says "sometimes the kids get on my nerves by just being around" should not take on a ready-made family.

True, some fathers (and mothers as well) say to themselves when they leave their little brood after a trying day, "I'm glad to be away from there," but fundamentally they love their children and wouldn't trade them for all the tea in Ceylon, but this is not the case with you, Bud.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My mother raised me to believe I was beautiful, brilliant and talented. I should make a spectacular marriage. Somehow I changed signals on her and married the only man I ever loved. Of course he was the man she hated most.

We did not have the grand wedding mother had dreamed of because Dick's parents were not elegant enough and they might pick up the wrong fork at the wedding dinner. We were married in the minister's study and mother wept all through the service. After the ceremony she told me I had broken her heart by making such a poor marriage and that she didn't want to see us again. Dick and I moved out of town.

That was two years ago. Last night my sons called to tell me mother is not well. I asked if mother had asked her to call me. She replied, "No".

Dick is urging me to go home. Should I? — THE DISAPPOINTMENT.

DEAR FRIEND — Yes, you should go home. And soon.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: The daughter of a friend, who was married several months ago, has invited my husband and me to a house-warming at her new apartment. The party, I understand, is for friends of her parents who had been at the wedding. We sent the bride an expensive gift before her wedding. Now I wonder if we should bring something for the home when we go to the housewarming. Your help in this matter would be appreciated. — Mrs. C. H., Columbus, Ohio

Answer: A gift is not necessary, especially since you gave the couple a present for the house so recently. If you feel you must bring something because the party has been designated a "housewarming," then a small hostess gift would be appropriate.

Question: I used some pots of flowers on a tiered tray as decoration for a buffet table recently, and thought it looked attractive. However, a relative says that only cut flowers should be used for any dinner party, no matter how informal. Is this correct? — Mrs. F. F., Boston, Mass.

Answer: For as informal setting, even pots of chivas can be used long as the effect is charming and decorative. Some high-fashion decorators have even used wheat, cabbages, and other goodies from the garden and gotten away with it quite successfully. The secret is in the arrangement. If it's eye-catching and in keeping with the mood and theme, there is no reason to worry — it's sure to be in good taste.

reading after five straight days of debate and will come up for second reading Monday. Mr. Favreau said debate will resume on the government's resolution for a maple leaf flag as soon as the supply bill is passed.

The possibility of a snap election was on everyone's mind throughout this snarling exchanges. If the supply bill is not passed by both the Commons and Senate by July 13, the government will not be able to pay civil servants' salaries and will be virtually forced to call a general election, the third in as many years.

Conservative MPs accused the government of trying to club them into submission on the flag issue by refusing a summer recess until the flag resolution and other items are passed.

Creditiste MPs accused the Conservatives of trying to "buy" a flag that the majority of the people want and widen the split between the two major language groups.

Present-Day Policemen Have More Laws to Enforce Than Prevalent in 1840

By HARRY BULSHALL

If nothing else proves the old Victorian bromide that a policeman's lot is one happy one, it's an early Victorian poster republished yesterday in Belleville.

The poster originally was printed in 1840 as the "Police Regulations of the Town of Belleville." A copy of same has fallen into the hands of the Hastings County Historical Society and has been republished in a limited edition.

Yesterday, the limited edition came off the presses — a single cardboard sheet representing all the bygone Belleville's police force had to maintain 120 years ago.

As such it is a study in contrasts — and progress.

Since that time the town has become a city in the modern age. Its policemen have more than a single cardboard sheet of laws to enforce.

The original city bylaws calling for enforcement have now multiplied from the single sheet into multitudinous regulations. City Clerk Adam Stalker figures there are now about 1,000 bylaws to be enforced in this year of 1964.

Also, since 1840, Canada has become a nation, Ontario has become a province.

So, not only must the police enforce a lengthy list of municipal laws, they also are agents of such things as the Criminal Code — a legal giant in itself — the Highway Traffic Act and the Liquor Control Act.

DIDN'T WORK

Add to this the fringe codes of social behavior — such as the Indian Act — which the modern law officer should also be aware of, and it all adds up to a mighty lot of legislation.

Even the simple things were in those days of 1840 when the first edict of community by-laws was published.

The civic fathers of the time laid it on the line when it came to community behavior. They didn't wait for a fight to start before enforcing the law.

For instance (says the poster): "... any person who shall, within the said town, challenge another to fight, shall forever any offence forfeit and pay the sum of ten shillings."

And driving offences didn't start with the age of the automobile.

Warns the poster: " . . . any person who shall ride or drive in any street of the town, at an immoderate rate, or who shall ride or drive faster than a walk upon any Bridge across the River Moira . . . shall be liable to a penalty of not less than five shillings nor more than thirty."

Animal control was just as rigid as today.

For instance if you kept pigs and had one captured running at large, it had to be reclaimed in 24 hours. Otherwise it was sold at public auction after the same was advertised throughout the community for three days.

In an age in which the horse was practically the common denominator of communication, an interval of three days to reclaim a stray before it was auctioned.

CRYPTIC WARNING

However, it is possible our forefathers were made of more red-blooded stuff than most. For the same regulation also carried a by-law penalizing any attempt at rescue of impounded animals.

Whether they indulged in impure practices is a matter to conjure with. However, the same regulations also carried this cryptic warning:

"That if any person or persons shall at any time . . . keep a bawdy house or brothel or a house of ill fame, for the resort and commerce, of lewd and disolute people, or a house where lewdness, indecencies and other immoral and scandalous actions are permitted and allowed . . . he, she or they shall forfeit and pay a penalty of thirty shillings upon each and every conviction for any such offence."

It seems unlikely immorality was so well organized, or so much trouble.

However, while times change some practices apparently are still abhorred by the community and call for enforcement by today's policemen.

For instance, here's the kind of regulation — approved in 1840—that still might apply today:

"No person shall be allowed to fish on the River Moira by night with flambeau or torch, above the bar in the river opposite to Mrs. Wallbridge's, nor shall any one be allowed to fish on or near any wharf or other building with flambeau or torch under the penalty or from five shillings to 20 shillings."

Govt.

making that kind of investigation now."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker moved in quickly.

'UNUSUAL THING'

"The government of Canada has civil servants giving consideration to the effects of separatism, or the separation of our country," he said. "This is a most unusual thing, for the government of Canada to engage in such a procedure."

In the cut and thrust of the daily Commons question period, Mr. Pearson said the study was an "economic investigation of the inter-relation between Quebec and the rest of the country."

He said this is a "very proper subject" for an economic investigation.

A few hours later, Mr. Pearson's statement was distributed.

"My answer to these series of questions in the House of Commons . . . seems to have been misunderstood. I should like to remove any possibility of misunderstanding."

It was not a study of separatism and its economic effect, he declared.

IT'S 'UNTHINKABLE'

"I believe that this study will show how essential all parts of the country are to each other. I believe that it will show, to the satisfaction of all Canadians, that any separation within Canada is unthinkable."

Canadian unity was far too important to permit any distortion of the purpose of the study.

"My own dedication to that unity must stand on the record of my life and on, my determination since I have been prime minister to make co - operative federalism the foundation of national unity."

In the Commons, Mr. Pearson told Mr. Scott the study would probably not produce any significant results before the fall.

But he made no comment to a suggestion by Nicholas Mandyk (PC—Marquette) that the federal "government save the time of its civil servants by accepting the results of studies produced by Premier Lesage's Quebec government."

The Quebec legislature set up a special committee to deal with constitutional matters affecting all aspects of Quebec and Confederation, including secession. The committee met twice but has not gone into session since the Quebec legislature recessed July 19 for a two-week break.

Ontario Officially Adopts Minimum Wage on Monday

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario officially adopts a minimum wage for the whole of the province Monday.

From 15 per cent to 20 per cent of the province's working force may benefit from regulations designed to raise minimum wages to at least $1 an hour by the end of 1965.

As of Monday, minimum wage laws will apply to almost all workers in the province except for a few classifications such as domestics, tourist industry workers and job learners.

Farm laborers also are exempt.

Starting June 29, a minimum wage of $1 an hour for men will be required in all industrialized areas of the province—including almost all urban centres. Women in these areas will earn at least 85 cents an hour.

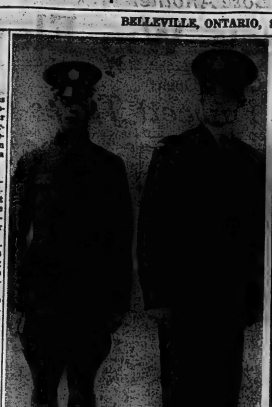
GOES TO 85

Throughout the rest of the province — the rural areas — a minimum wage for males of 85 cents an hour will be established. For women, the minimum will be 80 cents an hour.

But no matter at what levels the minimums start, all will rise gradually to make a $1-an-hour minimum uniform throughout Ontario by the end of 1965. For construction workers, the figure will be $1.25 an hour.

Zone 1, the industrialized area, consists mainly of southern and southwestern Ontario but also includes most urban areas in the east, north and northwest. For instance, Cornwall, Kingston, Brockville, Belleville, North Bay, Sudbury, Sault Ste. Marie, Fort William and Port Arthur all are included.

Zone 3 consists of those areas at the most at the new minimum wage orders take effect Monday. Waitresses, store clerks and supermarket checkout girls likely will find their salaries upgraded.



A survey by the labor department has shown that about 19 per cent of all persons working in small establishments—those with less than 15 employees—earn less than $1 an hour.

Workers not covered by the regulations include registered apprentices, camp counsellors or students employed in certain recreation programs, apartment house janitors living on the premises, real estate and insurance salesmen and other salesmen who determine their own hours.

A labor department official said he has any employer who fails to abide by the requirements of the minimum wage orders will be liable to prosecution and payment of wages in arrears.

NAME DIRECTORS

OTTAWA (CP) — C. T. W. Hyslop, 47, and C. M. Bolger, 41, have been made assistant directors of the northern affairs department's northern administration branch, it was announced Friday. Mr. Hyslop, a native of Hamilton, joined the department in 1962. Mr. Bolger, born in Renfrew, Ont., graduated from Queen's University and had been with the department since 1952.

RCAF HAS OWN UNIFORM — When the RCAF was formed in 1924, the uniform was basically the same as that worn by the army (left). Since then, the uniform has gradually changed into that worn today (right.) (CP Photo)

LITTLE CHANGE IN NAVY UNIFORM — The navy uniform of today (right) is basically the same as it was in 1910 (left) when the RCN was formed although it is a lot trimmer. The only major change is the disappearance of a broad-rimmed white hat resembling a floppy boater, which was worn during summer. (CP Photo)

Man With 'Yen for Change' New Manitoba Law Dean

WINNIPEG (CP)—A travelling man with a yen for change takes over Aug. 1 as dean of the Manitoba law school.

Clifford Edwards, 40, a dark-haired, wiry Englishman who has lived in four continents, has been said to favor a revolution in the system of training lawyers here.

"Perhaps revolution is too strong a word," he says, "but you can say I'm in favor of change."

Among possible changes he is pondering are higher entrance qualifications for law students, more fulltime teachers and an end to the system of combining practical experience in a law office with academic training.

But Prof. Edwards, who joined the faculty in 1958 and is now the school recorder, has no intention of adopting the new-broom approach when he takes over as dean.

Any changes must be gradual, he says, "so we carry the legal profession with us."

Prof. Edwards is used to change in his own life.

Born in India, the son of a British civil engineer, he studied law at King's College in the University of London, graduating in 1945. He practised privately in London until 1952 when, in reply to a newspaper advertisement, he took a job as legal adviser to a missionary society in Nigeria.

"I was impressed by the great need — spiritual, mental and social—of the people. I was very anxious to take the job.

"The only difficulty was had no theological training. But I took a correspondence course and they hired me."

He taught "every tropical disease going" in West Africa, but he loved working there. "The people are friendly and happy, and so anxious to learn."

In 1956 he switched jobs and countries again, taking a teaching post in law at the Kwame Nkrumah University in Ghana.

On life in Ghana and charges that the Nkrumah regime is dictatorial, Prof. Edwards says the new African nations need strong governments to prevent them from disintegrating into tribal groups.

"The Ghanian government has made great progress in the building of roads and schools and the education of its people. We should not be over-critical."

In Winnipeg since leaving Ghana in 1958, Prof. Edwards has come to believe that the present system of training lawyers is ripe for change. In Manitoba law students spend part of their time articling with a law firm for three of the four years of the law course.

Students can do justice to neither task while trying to combine them, Prof. Edwards wants a straight three-year academic course followed by 18 months of articling.

To raise standards, he suggests the school's entrance requirement should be three years of university instead of two. And although "a working lawyer is a valuable professor," he believes the school should have more fulltime teachers.

FAVORS CHANGE — Prof. Clifford Edwards is considering possible changes when he takes over as dean of the Manitoba law school. Among them are higher entrance standards for students and more full-time professors. Says UN Not Totally Responsible WINDSOR (CP) — External Affairs Minister Martin said Friday night the United Nations cannot be expected to survive by itself the whole responsibility for keeping world peace.

Speaking at the annual International Air Forces Night, Mr. Martin said limitations imposed on the UN, mainly by the attitudes of member states, prevent the organization from being fully effective as a peacekeeper.

The limitations resulted largely from the fact that the principle of collective responsibility was being ignored and some member nations were not fulfilling their financial obligations. The UN had been forced to rely on improvisation.

"It is unjustifiable that the peace-keeping role of the UN, with the significance which it has for world peace and international relations generally, should rest on a flimsy basis," Mr. Martin said.

Until the UN is fully able to keep the peace, Mr. Martin said, it is up to the member nations to take such steps to enable the UN to discharge its responsibility.

POLICEMEN GRADUATE

KYLEMES (CP) — The Ontario Police College graduated 156 police recruits and 36 sergeants Friday following 12 weeks of academic and physical training. Guest speaker T. Hilligan, chairman of the Ontario Police Commission, told the graduates "you must remember you are protectors, not destroyers, of personal rights and liberties."

New Types of Canadian Army Uniforms Has Emphasis on Utility, Comfort for Soldiers

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — New types of Canadian army uniforms seem to become progressively sloppier.

The reason: Emphasis is on utility and comfort for soldiers in the field, not on dress parade.

At the same time, Navy and RCAF uniforms don't change a great deal, mostly because sailors and airmen don't have to jump into muddy foxholes or fight their way through barbed wire.

A new type of combat clothing was issued to the Canadian infantry brigade in West Germany in June. It will be worn for operations and field training only. Battle dress will still be worn in garrison and by headquarters personnel.

The new Canadian - designed clothing was tested in the Arctic snows and desert sands and has been found suitable for operations under all weather conditions. It comprises a combat jacket, jacket liner, trousers, shirt-coat, cap and high boots.

The jacket has two large, diagonal breast pockets, each of which will hold a second rifle magazine. The two lower pockets of the jacket can carry rifle magazines or hand grenades.

HIGHER BOOTS

The new cap is like a beret but can be worn under a helmet or folded and put in a pocket. The eight-inch-high boots replace the old boot and pulltees.

The new clothing is the first change of army dress in 25 years. The last major change was adoption of the battle dress in 1936.

Battle dress was not a big change from the First World War uniform. The winding pulltees were eliminated, the jacket was shortened into a blouse and the tight collar disappeared.

Besides the First World War khaki, of course, there were colorful dress uniforms, mainly red and blue, in which the soldiers marched off to war.

The Boer War (1899-1902) uniform looked more Australian than Canadian because of the broad-brimmed hat. Pips-fours were worn with knee length pulltees as well as collar and tie under the jacket and bandolier.

BLOWSY, WITH COLOR

During the 1885 Northwest Rebellion, the Canadian militiamen looked somewhat blowsy—but colorful in red jacket and blue trousers. The jacket and trousers were loose-fitting and the cap resembled a London Bobby's hat of today.

The Navy's uniform is a lot trimmer today than it was in 1910 when the RCN was formed. But it has changed little basically except for disappearance of a broad - brimmed white hat which resembled a floppy boater.

Royal Flying corps aviators wore basically army uniforms during the First World War. The RCAF was formed in 1924. The officer's uniform has changed little since but the uniform for other ranks gradually got away from the Army type to what it is now. The big changes have been in flying gear — for instance, from the flop-eared leather helmet to the crash helmet of today.

HOLD TALKS

WARSAW (Reuters) — Yugoslavian President Josip Tito held secret talks with Polish officials Friday on the "China issue" and other matters of ideological and state interest. A brief communique merely listed the names of those who attended. Officials did not disclose any particulars of the talks.

EMPHASIS ON COMFORT — Changes in the Canadian Army uniform place more emphasis on comfort and utility, rather than appearance. During the Boer War (left), the uniform looked more Australian than Canadian because of the broad-brimmed hat. The hat was replaced by the cap in the First World War (centre) and the collar and tie disappeared. The newest combat uniform (right) was introduced in May. (CP Photo)

Learn to Recognize Your Rattlers

By BARBARA FROOM

TORONTO (CP) — The best way to avoid being bitten by rattlesnakes is to be able to recognize them, learn where they are most likely to be found, and leave them alone.

In all of Canada only the rattlesnakes are venomous. The Pacific rattle is found in the interior dry belt of southern British Columbia, the prairie rattler in parts of southern Alberta and Saskatchewan, and the small Massasauga in Ontario.

The larger timber rattlesnake, which many years ago was common in the Niagara area, now is believed extinct in Canada.

Rattlers are mottled in appearance, have triangular-shaped heads, elliptical eye pupils and pits between the eye and nostril which help them detect the presence of warm-blooded prey.

The tail, of course, terminates in a rattle. The sound of the rattle is made by the shaking of the loosely connected segments, and may resemble the buzzing of a bee, a cicada or a mechanized windup toy.

Rattlers don't always sound a warning prior to striking, nor is it necessary for them to coil in order to bite, which could be the case if they were accidentally stepped on.

SOMETIMES SWIM

The Massasauga is probably the best known since it is found in more accessible areas than the others. It is a small greyish or brownish mottled snake with a blunt nose, thin neck and stout body. It seldom attains a length more than 2½ feet.

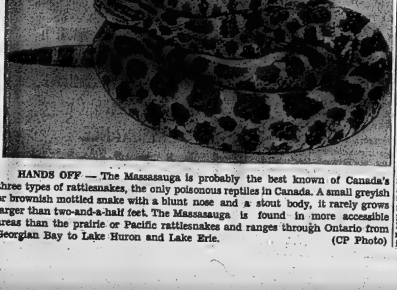
In addition to rocky areas, it is found in swampy areas, and it's not uncommon to find it swimming some distance from shore. It is found along the shores of Georgian Bay and as far inland as 20 to 30 miles in some places, on the island in the Bay, on the Bruce Peninsula, and some sections of the Lake Huron and Lake Erie shores, and in the Wainfleet Marsh in the Welland district.

A Massasauga bit 15-year-old Sandra Hewitt on the ankle June 11 at a remote part of the Georgian Bay shore. Two teen-age boys carried her to their motorboat and she was taken to Midland where antivenene was administered, all within little more than an hour. She has recovered from the experience.

Reports of Massasaugas far from their usual localities invariably turn out to be mottled water and milk snakes or heavy-bodied, hog-nosed snakes.

CARRY FLASHLIGHT

When in known rattlesnake territory wear protective clothing, feel about with a stick before gathering fuel or driftwood and always take a flashlight if out at night. If you hear a rattle, remain still, determine the direction of the sound, then walk quietly away.



If you have the misfortune to be bitten by a rattlesnake, get medical aid as quickly as possible. Antivenene is available in key centres in the rattler belt all across Canada. Carrying the victim, as in Sandra Hewitt's case, can prevent an increase in the blood circulation and spreading the venom. Cool compresses may be applied to the bitten area, but never heat or cauterizing. Alcoholic stimulants should not be given.

In most cases it's not difficult to tell if one has been bitten by a rattler even though the snake wasn't seen. The bitten area usually swells soon after the bite. Pain, nausea, chills and discoloration in the bitten area may also be present.

Although rattlers are not desirable around human habitation, they should be left alone in the wilds. Occasional snake hunts accomplish little other than the wanton killing of our most harmless and beneficial snakes. And inexperienced persons seeking rattlers may themselves be bitten, perhaps far from medical aid.

Rattlesnakes, especially the Massasauga, usually prefer retreat to attack, and have no more desire to encounter us than we them. And the chance of death as a result of a rattlesnake bite is very slight.

Barbara Froom is editor of the Canadian Amphibian Reptile Conservation Society.

HANDS OFF — The Massasauga is probably the best known of Canada's three types of rattlesnakes, the only poisonous reptiles in Canada. A small greyish or brownish mottled snake with a blunt nose and a stout body, it rarely grows larger than two-and-a-half feet. The Massasauga is found in more accessible areas than the prairie or Pacific rattlesnakes and ranges through Ontario from Georgian Bay to Lake Huron and Lake Erie. (CP Photo)

Plan Stocking Great Lakes With BC Salmon

SUDBURY (CP) — A plan to stock the Great Lakes with British Columbia salmon was announced Friday by Frank MacDougall, deputy minister of lands and forests for Ontario.

He said planting of sockeye salmon eggs in suitable streams leading into the Great Lakes will begin this year.

Mr. MacDougall said the first waters to be planted will be streams leading into Georgian Bay that have been surveyed to make sure the eggs have a chance of reaching maturity. It is expected 500,000 eggs will be planted in the Georgian Bay area this fall and another 500,000 in Lake Ontario.

The eggs being used in the experiment are from a landlocked species of salmon called a kokanee, a member of the sockeye family. The chief difference is that the sockeye is much larger and, although it spawns in fresh water, reaches maturity in the ocean.

The research chief for the department, Ken Loftus, said he would be happy if he gets a five - per - cent hatch from the kokanee eggs. The fish should mature and spawn in four to five years.

It is hoped the kokanee will grow to a length of between 15 and 17 inches.

Gov.-General Gives CBC Pat on Back

OTTAWA (CP) — While controversy over the film Mr. Pearson still swirled about it, the CBC got a warm pat on the back from Governor - General Vanier Friday night.

Calling the publicly owned corporation "one of the most important institutions of Canadian society," Gen. Vanier said it can present the image of Canada clearly "because of its freedom from commercial and political control."

He said it must aspire to a freedom of expression as broad as possible, "compatible with the truth and the rights of man." He made the remarks, partly in English and partly in French, while opening the CBC's new $3,000,000 head office building in south Ottawa.

Soaring Angels Win Eleven In Row

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Angels are having so much fun, you'd think they already were playing in Disneyland.

Their fun, however, isn't costing them anything. It's strictly at the expense of the rest of the American League.

The Angels extended their winning streak to 11 games Friday night, shutting out Kansas City Athletics 1-0 and 6-0 and moving into sixth place, just one-half game behind Cleveland Indians and two back of the fourth-place Minnesota Twins.

The streak is the longest in the majors since Los Angeles Dodgers picked up 13 in a row in May and June of 1963. This comes at a time when the Angels are reported to be considering a short move north from Los Angeles to nearby Anaheim, site of Disneyland.

If the planning were left to their opposition on the other teams might suggest a move a little farther south, say into the Gulf of Santa Catalina.

The shutouts Friday night gave Los Angeles Dallas Ike in the last five contests. Curiously enough, neither starting pitcher was around at the finish. Still, veteran Bo Belinsky earned his third victory in a brief while as rookie Bob Meyer recorded his first major league triumph.

Elsewhere in the AL, Minnesota blanked Chicago White Sox 2-0 before losing 9-4. Baltimore Orioles swept Washington Senators 9-4 in 13 innings, Detroit Tigers nipped New York Yankees 3-2 in 11, Boston Red Sox edge Cleveland 3-2.

FOUR STRAIGHT FOR BO

Belinsky, who has had four straight victories and a 6-3 record, scattered six singles and didn't allow a runner past second base. Bob Bailis choked after the last three batters after Bo gave up a single and a walk in the ninth.

Meyer gave up five hits in the nightcap before leaving for a pinch hitter in the sixth. Rod Lee held Kansas City hitless the rest of the way. Willie Smith, the pitcher turned outfielder, drove in two runs with a single and a base-loaded walk.

Twenty-three Gerry Arrigo had a no-hitter for eight innings, but Mike Hershberger led off the ninth with a line single to right field. Arrigo, 23-year-old left hander had allowed only four base runners until then. Harmon Killebrew gave Arrigo all the support he needed with a two-run homer.

Killebrew slammed his 29th homer in the second game, but the White Sox outslugged the Twins. Pete Ward clouted a three-run homer in the third while Floyd Robinson connected with one on in the fourth.

Baltimore erupted for five runs with two out in the 13th inning, the first two on Rookie Powell's 9th homer. Powell also singled in the tying run in the ninth and drove in another in the three-run effort.

Detroit nipped the Yankees on pinch hitter Billy Bruton's running single with two out in the 11th.

Dave Wickersham, who pitched the first 10 innings, won his 10th game against five defeats.

The Indians held a 2-1 lead when the Red Sox struck in the ninth. Felix Mantilla singled home the tying run and another out, scored on Russ Nixon's pinch-hit homer.

Pinch Hitting

By Garry Alexander

A couple of outside entries, Trenton Commercial Printers and Tweed Lumbacks, came to the rescue of the Belleville and District Softball League this spring.

Both entered the loop when it was tottering on the brink of elimination, providing the Belleville teams with a league in which to play. All entries have come up with good, crowd-pleasing teams, although the only place they can find parents to please are in Trenton and Tweed. And at that the Trenton crowds are down compared to previous years, although a break or two from the weatherman should remedy that situation.

The point is now, just who appreciates the fact that a good, evenly-matched four-team circuit has presented excellent ball for the past six weeks, before the Printers staged a typical finish, scoring two runs in the bottom of the ninth, to nip Tweed 2-1 in Trenton Wednesday night.

Any one of the four clubs could finish in first or last place or you could wind up with a four-way tie for the top, that's how close the teams are matched.

However, somebody's slip is showing, that of the pre-season favorites, Trudeau Motors. Trudeau started the season like a house afire, picking up talent from the defunct Joyce Realty and Bobcat clubs, and moving into an early lead.

Somewhere along the line, things began to go amiss and it is showing in the team's performances during the past two weeks. The club has been winless in that time. This fact alone means little, it's the manner in which the losses have come does mean something.

Only eight Trudeau players turned out for a postponed game in Tweed last Sunday night. Lombanks had the season's largest crowd there and permitted an assigned Trudeau coach to play, grounding out to pretzel, win, lose or draw, in order to have the game played. One Trudeau player told this reporter later that he cancelled a weekend trip to be home, for the game. He was never contacted about the Tweed trip and ended up sitting at home while those of his mates who did go absorbed a 9-2 loss. The player has no car and walks across town to the games at the CNRA most of the term. The team has three pitchers and none were in Tweed. Perhaps there was good reason for their absence, but the coach claims he had been told that two of them would be at the game.

An infielder pitched and coach Harold Reid, who later quit the team in disgust, had to play first base. Reid is a man of middle age, a star player of some years ago, who got out and did his best, saving the Tweed club a good gate and the Trudeau club the costs of officials, etc., if the team had forfeited.

Reid refused to join the club as coach when asked the first of this week and Trudeau were again short several key men in a 6-2 loss to Trenton Tuesday. It is a pity, at least to those who count on a good ball club such as Trudeau slip so badly. A couple of players indicated following Tuesday's game that they might be leaving the club unless things improved. "We a good ball club as this game as easily as not," said one, "but we just fooled it away."

The league as a whole and Trudeau in particular, can ill afford to lose men of Reid's calibre.

Ellis Juniors are another matter. The club is running into trouble with players attempting to play both softball and baseball. It's a old story and will likely get worse before it gets better.

The Juniors, when they stick to playing ball, can and have beaten all teams in the league.

There is talk now, and for the sake once again of the league and also of the players involved we hope it is just talk, that half a dozen players will be dropped in order to allow the club to enter Juvenile playdowns.

This hardly seems fair to fellows like Stu Muirhead, Mike Chatland, Stu Malley, Pete Wooten, Larry Soule and John McKibbon, who may be left without a club with which to play.

Such a move could do nothing but weaken the Ellis team. One or two of the younger players are said to be pressing for the switch to juvenile, despite the fact that they have been playing as well as their senior competitors.

Sometimes it does not pay to be the "big frog in a little puddle," especially at the expense of your own teammates.

Have some of the former players considered what could happen to the team as far as B. and D. League dues goes? Or do they feel there is no such thing as obligation to a league and a sponsor?

It is hoped cooler heads will make the right decision for all concerned.

Ontario Open
Fawcett Takes One-Stroke Lead

TORONTO (CP) — Today's final 18-hole round of the 54-hole Ontario Open Golf championship, which is supposed to separate the men from the boys, could wind up with a finalist of the younger set holding top money.

Gary Fawcett, 23-year-old host pro at the Islington Golf and Country Club is in a good position to take first prize of $1,200 in the $5,000 tournament. The former Vancouver pro celebrated his first bid at the Ontario title by grabbing a one-stroke lead after the second round.

He fired a three-under-par 69 to combine with his 67 first-round score for a 36-hole total of 136. This gave him the lead over 46-year-old Canadian amateur champion Nick Weslock of Toronto.

Weslock, four - time Ontario champion, encountered putting difficulties in his second round. He went over par on four holes and scored 73 to finish for an even-par 72. Coupled with his 65 in the opening round — one stroke off the tournament record — Weslock totalled 137.

Only 100 players with scores of 157 or less on the two rounds survived Friday's cutoff. Of this group, the three top pros will qualify for the $25,000-purse open championship at Detroit Aug. 27-30.

Fawcett, who looks like a sure thing to rank among the top three, wouldn't be eligible for the Detroit classic, however, not counting on being one of the top three with such formidable opposition as two-time Canadian champion Moe Norman of Toronto and current Canadian professional match play champion Alvie Thompson of Toronto, Fawcett did not fill out an entry form.

High winds took a toll Friday afternoon on many of the previous day's low scorers. Fawcett enjoyed ideal weather during morning play.

Frank Whitley, 27, of Kitchener was hampered by strong winds and had to settle for third place with 139 after shooting a 72.

TIES FOR FOURTH

Norman Inshaw of 60 to tie for fourth place with Bob Panasiuk of Windsor at 140.

Brian Brewer of Toronto, 27-year-old amateur, was the low scorer of the round with a 67, three under par. He was grouped with Brewer in a skirmish deadlock at 141. They were Ken Jacobs of Toronto, 26, and former Montreal pr Doug Dalziel of Williamsburg, Ont., 44.

Tied for 10th place at 142 were John Heinrick of Markham, Ont., Ken Thorpe, Toronto amateur, and Jean-Guy Perland of Boucherville, Que., a winning identical scores of 71-71 for the 36 at Inverlair. Joining them is Bruno Guarda of Toronto with a 69 to go with his earlier 73.

WEST NAMES TEAM

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Lawn Tennis Association Friday named Don McCormick of Victoria and Bob Osborne of Vancouver to the Western Canada tennis team. They join Reidel Getz, also of Vancouver on the squad that meets Eastern hopefuls in Canadian Davis Cup finals in Montreal next week. Two winners will join Francois Godbout of Waterloo, Que., and Keith Carpenter of Montreal.

Terry McCabe Shoots Hole-In-One

All in all, Friday, June 26 was quite a day for Roy of Quinte Golf Club senior member Terry McCabe.

And if you don't believe it just ask Abe Tobe.

Tobe was on the wrong end of the score when McCabe captured their club championship consolation event with a hole-in-one in the bargain.

McCabe used the 145-yard par-three ninth, sinking his tee shot with a nine iron.

That may have dazzled his fellow golfers, Tobe, slightly but not enough to keep him from staying on even terms. The match was all tied up at the end of the regulation 18 holes.

But not even Tobe was not through with his lucky magic just yet.

He promptly overshot the 190-yard, quick look at the situation and dropped a 3-iron just to wrap up the match.

Later club pro George Nolan said the ace was the second at the course registered at the Quinte Club.

Leafs Down Jets 11-9, Suns Lose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A combined extra-inning game cut Jacksonville Suns' International League lead in half Friday.

The Suns started the day with a two-game lead over Toronto Maple Leafs but dropped a 4-3 12-inning decision to Rochester Red Wings while the Leafs downed Columbus Jets 11-9 in 11 innings.

In the other games, Syracuse Chiefs edged Atlanta Crackers 10-9 while Richmond Virginians blasted Buffalo Bisons 6-2.

Rochester caught fire with three hits in the bottom of the 12th as Joe Durham supplied game-winning single. Earlier, Lou Jackson sent the game into extra innings with a home run in the bottom of the ninth after Jacksonville had taken a 3-1 lead in the fifth on Mike Shannon's homer.

SCORED FOUR RUNS

Leafs scored four times in the 11th inning at Columbus on two walks, two Columbus errors and two singles, and then had the Jets to a pair of runs in their half.

Leafs came up with another big inning earlier in the game when they rallied for five runs in the seventh on five walks and three singles after trailing the Jets 6-2.

At Richmond, Mel Stotlemeyer blanked the Bisons on three hits as the Virginians scored twice in the eighth inning after Ted Kazanski led off with a double.

Willie Horton's two-out infield single in the bottom of the ninth gave Detroit Tigers victory over the Chiefs their triumph.

INDONESIA ACCEPTED

LAUSANN (AP) — The executive board of the International Olympic Committee Friday allowed Indonesia into the Tokyo Games this October. The board also told South Africa that it was out unless it publicly condemns its government's racial policy. The Arab League had presented the board an ultimatum that it would boycott the games if Indonesia were excluded. Indonesia was barred originally because it refused to allow Israel and Nationalist China to compete in the 1962 Asian Games.

Phils Late Homer Nips Cards 6-5

Giants Edge Dodgers

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

You just know things are going right for Philadelphia Phillies these days. They've got a pitcher who can't pitch helping a hitter who couldn't hit, that's the kind of weird combination that makes winners.

When Gary Dalrymple's second homer of the season scored out of Busch Stadium Friday night for a 6-5 Phillies victory over St. Louis Cardinals, nobody could have been prouder than Cal McLish, a sore - armed hurler who's been on the disabled list all season.

McLish took Dalrymple, whose bat has been something of a hindrance too, in hand recently.

"I've been watching you," McLish told Dalrymple. "You're not swinging the way you did last year."

"He told me a couple of things I didn't realize I was doing," said Dalrymple.

Cardinal reliever Ron Taylor can testify that the advice was effective. Taylor came on to protect a one-run St. Louis edge gained when the Cardinals knocked out Jim Perfect Game) Bunning in a three-run eighth inning.

After Tony Gonzalez doubled to open the inning, Dalrymple hammered one into the right-centre pavilion roof for the ball game.

Cookie Rojas and Richie Allen also clouted two-run homers for the Phillies and Bob Skinner, whose eighth inning double ignited the Cardinal rally, had four hits for St. Louis.

In other NL action, San Francisco Giants nipped Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3, Pittsburgh Pirates whipped Cincinnati Red Sox, New York Mets topped Milwaukee Braves 8-4 and Chicago Cubs edged Houston Colts 7-6 in 10 innings.

Bunning's perfect-game magic disappeared fast when leadoff batter Curt Flood cracked a double in the first inning.

The victory maintained Philadelphia's one-game lead over the Giants who parlayed eighth-inning errors by Maury Wills and Jim Gilliam into an unearned run and their second straight victory over the Dodgers.

Tom Haller's sacrifice fly drove in the run off Los Angeles' reliever Bob Miller—the first run off Miller in 31 2-3 innings.

The Pirates pounded three Red pitchers for 13 hits with Bill Virdon and Roberto Clemente contributing three apiece. Virdon had a triple and a two-run homer and Clemente ripped a pair of doubles.

Starter Joey Jay, who gave up four of the hits, was the loser.

The Mets exploded for an eight-run second inning with homers by Charlie Smith and Joe Christopher, the latter a grand slam, doing the major damage, and routed Warren Spahn.

Pinch hitter Leo Burke's 10th inning single baited the Cubs after Ernie Broglio gave way with the Colts, driving Doug Clemens home with the winner.

Cleveland Open

Palmer, Young Pro Card Sizzling 64's

CLEVELAND (AP) — Golf's biggest money winner and a youngster who never has won a dime furnished the fireworks Friday in the second round of the $100,000 Cleveland Open golf tournament.

Arnold Palmer and R. H. Sikes Jr., a 23-year-old who turned pro just a few weeks ago, toured the 6,831-yard-par-70 Highland Park layout in six strokes.

Sikes, 1961 and 1962 national public links champion and winner of last year's National Collegiate Athletic Association title, had one stroke behind.

Jack Nicklaus was third at 133 and George Bayer and Al Geiberger were dead - locked at 134.

So terrific was the scoring that cards of 144, only two over par, or better were necessary to make it among the 80 who continue play today.

Some big names were among the casualties, with Ken Venturi, winner of last week's National Open, heading the list. Venturi was out with a score of 146, despite a 70 Friday. Others who failed to make it included Jerry Barber, Gardner Dickenson, Dow Finsterwald, Al Besselink, Doug Ford, and Al Balding of Toronto.

Kidd, Crothers

Will Compete In England

TORONTO (CP) — Three Toronto track athletes will compete in England next month, it was announced today.

Distance runner Bruce Kidd and half-miler Bill Crothers will perform at the British Amateur Athletic Association championships at White City Stadium in London on July 10-11. Abigail Hoffman will compete in the women's AAA championships also at London, on Saturday, July 11.

Kidd has been entered in the six-mile race and Crothers in the 880 yards.

Miss Hoffman, Canada's outstanding woman half-miler, has been entered in the 440 and 880. Coach Paul Poce, who will accompany her, said the 11-year-old athlete will remain in England throughout July and compete in the Britain - Hungary meet in London Aug. 1-2.

Meanwhile, Fred Foot, coach of Kidd and Crothers, said he had scratched both from the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union championships at Brunswick, N.J., this week.

Three other Toronto athletes will go to the U.S. AAU championships. They are Dave Ellis, entered in the 10,000 metres Saturday and in the 3,000 metres Sunday. Ergas Lepa will compete in the 1,500 metres and Sonny Appacks, who competed for Nigeria in the 1962 British Empire Games in Australia, has been entered in the broad jump and hop, step and jump.

Appacks has been studying at Guelph and is involved with the Toronto Olympic club.

The Don Mills Track Club has withdrawn as sponsors of the Olympic decathlon and pentathlon trials scheduled for July 30 and Aug. 1 because of a dispute agreement with the Central Ontario Track Association.

Lloyd Percival, coach of the track club, said in a prepared statement Thursday night the club will not be staging the events as planned because the association would not accept the schedule of events.

It was the only record set during the first day of the two-day event.

Friday's competition was called off after 10 events due to a sudden rainstorm.

About 450 entries drom throughout Ontario are taking part in the meet.

ASKS SPENDING REVIEW

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Duff Roblin of Manitoba said Friday he will urge the next federal-provincial conference to adopt a common sense approach towards national spending on health, pension and welfare plans. The province also repeated his demand for a review of national spending priorities in light of the full commission's recent report recommending a national medical care plan. "Obviously if we are going to take the Hall report seriously there will have to be a review of national spending priorities," he said in a press conference.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—They were making fun of Nona's Charger as he paraded to the post for the fifth race at Woodbine Friday, but when the 5-16 mile race was over they weren't making fun of the four-year-old gelding any longer.

The Ed Seedhouse-owned, son of King's Charger had just raced to a new track record over the Marshall turf course in 1:41 2-5, erasing the record of 1:42 set by Mystere in 1962.

Coming-from off the pace the chestnut gelding pulled away from his field with ease and returned 14.30, $3.70 and $2.50.

Most of the support was for Rococo Rogue, Nona's Charger's stable age entry-mate. Rococo Rogue finished second and those two combined for a two-way quinella payoff of $15.30.

In the co-featured seventh race, Royal Spirit, a late developing five - year - old mare owned by Stafford Farms, raced to victory over Royal Pledge and Ring Around, with comparative ease.

GENTILE INJURED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Gentile, Kansas City Athletics first baseman, will be out of action indefinitely with a pulled back cartilage. It was announced Friday. Gentile, 30, aggravated the injury in a game Thursday against Los Angeles Angels.

Als' Clarke Announces Retirement

MONTREAL (CP) — Halfback Don Clarke, whose brilliance on the football field was tarnished by injuries throughout his career, has decided to quit football, it was announced Friday.

Coach Jim Trimble of Montreal Alouettes said the 27-year-old halfback had telephoned him from his Akron, Ohio, home to say he will not report to training camp or play this season.

"It's through," Trimble said, "and he's definite about it. He has a good job with a newspaper in Akron and he said his injury record has shortened his career."

Clark played five seasons with the Als and had his best year in 1961 when he won the Eastern Football Conference rushing title with 1,143 yards. But in the next two campaigns he missed 16 of 28 regular games with a series of knee, kidney and rib injuries.

Meningitis Strikes Tribe Star

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors maintained a close watch today over third-baseman "Max Alvis of Cleveland Indians after admitting the 21-year-old outfielder struck the 26-year-old baseball player.

Alvis was taken to hospital late Friday when he complained of a high temperature and stiff neck. The club said it would not until the sixth inning of the game against Boston Red Sox that he was hospitalized, saying manager of Cleveland learned of the seriousness of the ailment.

Dr. Thomas Tierney, team physician for the Red Sox, said he believed the disease was arrested "just in time.

Doctors ruled out the necessity of a quarantine for the Cleveland team. But sulfa tablets, which have been successful in combatting the disease, were ordered for the Indians.

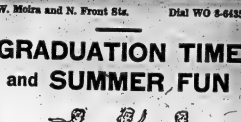
The disease attacks the brain, spinal covering and nerve cells. It is usually caused by an invasion of bacteria through the nose and throat. In recent years the incidence of recovery has been high, due mainly to sulfa and other antibiotic treatment.

Alvis is in his third season with the Indians. He batted .274 in his first full season last year and was high in the running for rookie of the year. He sported a .222 average going into Friday night's game.

Jose Stable Knocks Out VinceShomo

NEW YORK (AP) — Cuban welterweight Jose Stable, sidelined almost three because of a broken jaw suffered in training, ran his victory streak to seven straight by a 2:47 of the third smeared Vince Shomo of New York in 1:08 of the sixth round at Madison Square Garden.

Referee Jo Loscalzo halted the bruising scrap as Stable, the hard-hitting welterweight contender, hammered the tired New Yorker all over the ring.



It was the fourth fight card event for Shomo, the No 4 contender, and he ran out of gas after piling up a big lead in the first three rounds.

The more experienced Stable took charge from the fourth round on.

The defeat ended Shomo's winning streak at five. His record is 12-7-1. Stable's record is 23-2-1.

Vagrant Bees, Sour Lemons Looked After by Lt. Paxton

By PETER BUCKLEY

NICOSIA (CP)—For Lieut. Bruce Paxton of Victoria, the United Nations mandate in Cyprus is expressed in terms of vagrant bees and sour lemons.

The UN Security Council decreed when it set up the force in March that its Cyprus forces would, besides trying to keep the peace, contribute to a "return to normal conditions" on the island. For large numbers of soldiers, that mandate has meant guarding harvesters, arranging the transport of sick people under escort, trying to keep communications in order and similar duties.

Lieut. Paxton, 29, with the Canadian contingent in the UN force, is one of the men involved in assisting the return to normal.

One recent day, as typical as any, began for him when he picked up a thick sheaf of papers from Nicosia zone headquarters of the UN and was taken by United Nations jeep through narrow streets and past crowded hovels into the heart of the city's old Turkish quarter.

In a former government office where a small fan barely disturbed the warm air, he shook hands with Dervish Nihad, a pleasant-faced man of 46 who was an assistant district officer for Nicosia before last December's clashes brought an end to Turkish participation in the government. Now Paxton and Nihad meet almost daily to handle problems created by the massive displacement of Turkish-Cypriots because of communal fighting.

Over a black brew of Turkish coffee in dime - store demitasses, they launched into an hour-long discussion of an old man's bees.

The old man himself joined the discussions, his hands trembling, his mouth almost vacant of teeth, and his ragged appearance disguising the fact that in his native village of Trapeza in northern Cyprus he was a person of considerable property.

Among his possessions were nearly 150 beehives. Like the rest of the property, the hives were left behind in Trapeza when the Turkish residents fled five months ago—away from an area where Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots had lived together—into the barricaded enclave the Turks set up.

Many of the hives had been destroyed. Lieut. Paxton remarked, but the UN had decided to help him evacuate the rest.

The problem was compounded by the nature of bees. They dislike being disturbed in their hives. Nihad suggested a night-time mission, catching the bees asleep. Then he reconsidered on the grounds that it might be unsafe to take Turkish workers by night through the Greek villages along the way.

In the end, it was agreed that the old man and some helpers, driving a borrowed truck and with a UN escort, would travel by day to a neighboring town and sleep there until 3 a.m.

SEEKS PAYMENT

Then they would continue to Trapeza so the hives could be bundled up while the bees slept. After that, the old man and several other Turkish landowners from the area who would be going along could begin with Greek-Cypriots in Trapeza for the care of abandoned Turkish crops.

From here, Paxton and Nihad shuffled through the papers to consider the problem of a Turk whose crop of sour lemons, used in marmalade, had been harvested in the fall but who had still not been paid by the Greek - dominated co-operative in his village. Paxton promised to see what could be done.

Then they arranged an escort for a group of Turkish farmers who wanted to reclaim their trucks and tractors from a village which had been left to the Greeks.

As he left the office, Paxton was joined by two middle-aged Turks who wanted a drive under escort to their abandoned farms so they could inspect their crops for damage. The Canadian lieutenant was going along.

IS PHILOSOPHICAL

Paxton, a member of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, had been on an exchange posting with the Royal 22nd Regiment in Valcartier, Que., when the call to Cyprus came. He is philosophical about the new type of job.

"I was up to Trapeza before with the old man and his son, who is a well educated man in the city. The son told me that his father used to spend the whole day watching the bees just sitting and watching them gather honey. It was his whole world."

Restoring at least part of an old man's world is a way of fulfilling the spirit of the UN mandate.

STUDY SALT PROBLEM

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet and American scientists will meet in Washington July 14-15 to study problems of making salt water fresh with the help of nuclear energy, the Russians announced Tuesday. The announcement by the state atomic energy committee said work on desalinization has been going on for some time in both countries.

House Glossed Over Problem Says Knowles

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Member A says in Parliament that Member B is not telling the complete truth.

Member B demands that the accusation be withdrawn. Member A refuses and, by majority vote of the Commons, is temporarily expelled from the chamber.

Member C characterizes certain of member B's statements as lies. He is urged by the presiding officer to modify his words. Instead, he repeats the accusation, also calling attention to another remark that "I am not going to say that Member B lied."

In this case Member B suggests that the Commons accept the explanation as satisfactory and sufficient. There is no suggestion of expulsion.

Why the difference in the cases of former Conservative cabinet minister Alvin Hamilton and Conservative Erik Nielsen from the Yukon?

Mr. Hamilton was expelled temporarily last Friday when he refused to withdraw a statement that Mr. Pearson was not telling the complete truth.

NOT SUGGESTED

No such action was suggested Wednesday in the case of Mr. Nielsen who had made his remarks in the Commons was adjourning Tuesday night.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), acknowledged Commons rules expert, suggests this explanation for the difference:

"The House glossed over the trouble on Wednesday because members didn't want any more damning," the preliminary step to expulsion.

Some political circles suggest that an unidentified MP had the explanation when he interjected in the debate:

"No martyrs today."

It is argued that this interjection explains why Mr. Pearson did not demand that Mr. Nielsen withdraw his remarks. It's also said Mr. Pearson was anxious to get on with his prepared speech on the issue that generated all the heat—the celebrated TV film Mr. Pearson, commissioned by the publicly-owned CBC but never broadcast on the ground it failed to meet the corporation's technical standards.

TREMOR SHAKES JAPAN

Dutch Clairvoyant Again Sets Shovels Digging for Crater

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — A power shovel is digging up a grass-covered roadside in the slim hope of finding a clue in one of the most celebrated mysteries.

Westchester County authorities are searching for the remains of Justice Joseph Force Crater of State Supreme Court. On a hot August evening in 1930, Judge Crater, 41, drove away from a Manhattan hotel and was never seen again.

The digging, under the direction of Sheriff John E. Hoy, is only two miles from a Yonkers yard where a similar operation proved fruitless five years ago.

The current search, like the one in 1959, came about at the suggestion of the same Dutch clairvoyant who claims his extra - sensory perception led him to both locations.

After no clues to the Judge Crater mystery were uncovered in the first excavation, the clairvoyant, Gerard Croiset, brooded in Holland about his failure. Until last week he had never been to the United States.

He based his 1959 claim on emotions he said he felt thousands of miles across the sea from Yonkers, a city just north of New York city.

On his recent arrival in connection with a book to be published in New York on his life, Croiset opened the search again by announcing he had visited a roadside location that came to him through an impulse in Holland and had felt a sensation that told him the body had been disinterred from the yard before the 1959 excavation and reburied.

He also said there was a hidden road under which the body would be found. The first sweep of the excavator Thursday uncovered the old road and the digging continued.

So far, a trench 75 feet long and 2½ feet deep has been dug without the slightest sign of what might be human bones or any other clue.

Sheriff Hoy, who claims he does not believe in extrasensory perception, said he was digging at the request of New York City police.

Police officials contend they have made no such request.

But the digging goes on.

Maybe Keefe Brasselle Should Turn Weatherman

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) —"When you are cold in this town, nothing can be colder. But when you are hot—it is something quite marvellous."

Keefe Brasselle was speaking, and he has known both temperature extremes.

Hollywood remembers him from 15 years ago as a young actor. Sell he did, and he enjoyed a brisk career as a youthful leading man. And then he made The Eddie Cantor Story, in which the critics found little whoopee.

"It got the most tremendously bad reviews of any picture in years," he recalled, "and I suddenly was cold as anybody could get. Nobody called me on the telephone, but nobody.

"Actually, the picture wasn't that bad. In fact, it has been on television and I have been somewhat vindicated. But it surfaced at the time from having to follow The Jolson Story.

Brasselle sought relief by playing Las Vegas, and the dog dates warmed his bankroll enough to permit the purchase of an office building in Beverly Hills. But the movie offers dwindled to nothing.

BORROWS ON DIAMOND

His only convertible asset was a diamond solitaire he had given his wife, one of the singing Demarco sisters. He borrowed $18,000 on it to finance a new night club act, which opened at the Latin Quarter in New York.

He broke the house record and landed a booking at the Cocoanut Grove here. He almost blew it when he got mad over the billing, which gave greater prominence to Alice Lon, riding a publicity bubble after being fired as Lawrence Welk's champagne lady.

"But I was lifted out of it, and how lucky can you get?" he said. "That was when the CBS network came and offered me a contract."

Next season on CBS in production company will have three series—Reporter, The Baileys of Balboa and The Cara Williams Show.

AT THE PARK — Beautiful Shirley Knight plays Richard Widmark's fiancee, Cathie, in "Flight From Ashiya," opening at Mastercinema and Panavision 70 mm. Color by Pathe Color through United Artists release. Yul Brynner and George Chakiris co-star in the big colored air attraction, on the same program added action and adventure "The Valiant" starring John Mills. Special matinee Wednesday at 2.00 p.m.

Windsor was his battery mate.

Larry Moore and Clifford Scott collected a single apiece to account for the Belleville safeties.

Parma tripled for Frankford with other hits going to McGeachy, Forbes and Denton.

Belleville has another exhibition slated for Monday night when Ellis' visit Middleton Park for a 6.30 game.

Minor Baseball Results

Belleville Ellis Printers, the city's representatives in the OBA Bantam playdowns, took a 5-3 semi-final victory over Frankford in a six-inning game at Park Dale last night.

Six walks, forcing in three runs, in the bottom of the final inning broke a 2-2 deadlock and gave Belleville the victory. Langton, MacAuley and Gilchrist combined to pitch two-hit ball for Frankford but lost the nod via the six free passes. Forbes was their starter.

Howard Wark pitched the win, giving up four hits and striking out seven. Brooks

Says Parents Responsible For Drownings

SNELGROVE, Ont. (CP) — A director of the Canadian Red Cross told a coroner's jury Friday that 100 children were drowned in Ontario last year because they were not supervised properly by parents.

Malcolm Martin said lack of parental control at swimming areas is responsible for increasingly serious problem.

The jury, inquiring into the drowning of Maria Mandarello, 1, of York Township at the Hard Lake conservation area near Toronto, returned a verdict of accidental drowning.

The jury recommended the posting of signs at swimming areas stressing parental responsibility.

Cross-Canada Survey

Canadian Catholics To Translations of Liturgy

BY JOHN LeBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A traveller stopping off for Roman Catholic mass on a trip across Canada might well hear the gospel according to St. Mark read in English, French, Italian, Latin, Hungarian or Yugoslav.

He would be least likely to hear Latin or other vital part of the liturgy—the epistle—recited in Latin, the form in which the ancient ritual of the eucharist has come down through the ages.

The church in Canada has been setting a fast pace in picking up the Vatican's cue to change these parts of the mass to the vernacular—the common language of a locality—and a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that churchgoers are taking to it readily.

Multi - tongued Canada has also found the change easy to foreseen by Rome, making it commonplace to use as many as three languages in the same mass to accommodate different congregational segments.

Latin remains for modernizing parts of the mass was given early in the year and quickly went into effect in all areas of Canada except Newfoundland. It was to be extended there by Archbishop P. J. Skinner who take effect June 7.

AHEAD OF U.S.

Purpose of the change—to be followed by others—is to make the ceremony more meaningful to worshippers. As one Nova Scotia priest put it:

"We are trying to simplify the ritual to give it more understanding to the average joe."

Canadian Roman Catholics are well ahead of those in the United States. There, the indications are that Pope Paul's promulgation of last December permitting use of the local language in the mass will not be in effect first Sunday of Advent, which falls on Nov. 29.

In Canada the church hierarchy through the Canadian Catholic Conference gave its permission on Feb. 14, and some dioceses had it in effect by the following Sunday — two days later.

Under the new procedure, the priest—who formerly read the epistle and gospel in Latin—turns to the congregation and reads them in the vernacular. This may be the language of one or the other of the large groups in his parish, as he chooses.

However, cosmopolitan cities such as Toronto and Montreal also have so-called "national" parishes which draw persons whose common language is not that of the territorial parish in which they live. They vernacular is the designated single tongue, say Hungarian.

SWITCH LANGUAGES

The epistles and gospels are three times yearly, for each day, from the two types of works. The gospel consists of readings from the epistles, for each day, from the two types of works. The gospel consists of readings from the four gospels — Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. The epistle is generally taken from one of the 21 books of the Testament.

In Canada, the survey shows the new-style reading varies in practice according to the make-up of a parish.

In mixed dioceses, the priest may deliver the epistle in English and the gospel in French or another language, or vice-versa. Or he may use one vernacular language at one mass, and another at the next mass.

One heavily-Italian parish in Edmonton — where English is settl—uses Italian for the grown-ups and English for the children.

Another Italian church, St. Agnes in Toronto, has five masses with English recitation and five with Italian on Sundays.

"The people feel so much more close to us with these changes," Rev. Rev. Adolfo Baldolfino, the pastor.

Paul - Emile Cardinal Leger, Archbishop of Montreal, said in a recent sermon that the introduction of the vernacular, "far from spoiling the solemnity of gospel, has in fact given this act a new dignity."

MONTREAL LEADS

He also said the changing use of the reading of the gospels and dead Latin—have gained a new importance in the eyes of the church. As a result, Catholics would participate "more profoundly and thoroughly" in the Mass.

Rev. Leonard Crowley, a member of the cardinal's staff, pointed out that the change occurs in the first part of the mass, known loosely as Christian times as the mass of the catechumens.

"This is really intended to be the instructional part of the mass, and we are gradually getting back to that idea."

Father Crowley said that in the stimulation of thought in these matters Montreal has been "away ahead of the rest of North America and abreast with the most active European dioceses." Further steps in the same direction would be welcomed.

He said the spread of the vernacular to other portions of the mass of the catechumens could be expected. Bishops already had a certain latitude in this respect, though texts are set out for approval to the Congregation of Rites at Rome.

ROMAN DIRNY'S NOTICE

Father Robert Lucknart, a teaching priest at Ottawa and member of a vernacular committee to advise on implementing the changes, comments:

"Some of the old people were a bit bewildered at first. Others didn't even notice the change until two or three Sundays later. Most of the parish priests like it."

Rev. Patrick Ratchford of Victoria, chairman of the diocesan liturgical commission, says virtually no opposition to the vernacular trend has been noticed there. "As it is being introduced our people are gaining a greater consciousness of the meaning of our services and the church's social involvement in the community."

Rev. Peter Mallin, chancellor of the archdiocese of Vancouver, said some priests are anxious to move along to further steps in modernization.

"In fact, the main question is: 'When are we getting more?' We would like all prayers that pertain directly to the people to be in the vernacular—the mass of catechumens, the Lord's Prayer, Confiteor — prayers that are the canon could be left in Latin because it is more a 'priestly part' of the mass."

(The canon is the most important part of the mass. It includes the consecration, that part of the mass where, Catholics believe, the bread and wine is transformed into the body and blood of Christ.)

WILL TAKE YEARS

Similar sentiments came from the other side of the country, a priest at Yarmouth, N.S.:

"We're still not satisfied with the results but this is a period of adjustment. It will probably take 10 or 15 years to complete the change, since the mass has been altered little in the last 400 or 500 years."

"Actually, I would say it's a little step in the direction of greater participation by the laity," says Rev. Walter Lynch, on the staff of the archdiocese of Kingston. "The general consensus is that it's good."

Meanwhile, additional details from the Canadian Catholic Conference for extending use of the vernacular are awaiting the approval of Rome. They were drafted at a mid-April meeting but are not likely to go into effect until fall, possibly the first Sunday of Advent.

Under discussion is that the bishops' decisions will involve use of the vernacular in prayers preceding and following the canon of the mass and that this will probably require the publishing of a book of common prayer similar to the Anglican prayer book.

Father Mallin of Vancouver forecasts for the future, too, some structural changes in the mass. The aim would be to eliminate "additions made during the centuries that complicate the simple, meaningful operation of the mass."

Frankford

FRANKFORD — Mr. John Strome of Toronto, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Strome of Frankford, graduated last Friday from the Provincial Institute of Trades, Toronto, standing first in "Instrumentation" and was presented with a plaque for general proficiency by Mr. D. Pryor, sales engineer of Foxboro Instrument Company.

Guest speaker at the graduation exercises was Dr. W. A. Young, director of Student Affairs from Guelph University.

U.C.W., UNIT 3

The June meeting of UCW Unit 3 was held in Frankford United Church. Rev. Eva Bleecker was the treasurer's report. The unit is planning a day's trip some time in July.

The worship service was conducted by Mrs. Edith Bird and Mrs. Virginia Savage. Readings were given by Mrs. Edna Patrick Mrs. Eva Bleecker and Mrs. Heddy Huer. Miss Carol Branch gave a piano solo. A film was shown and Mrs. Edna Patrick closed the meeting.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Bessie Bush and Mrs. Marion Phillips.

SEES NO INCREASE

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will not increase its contingent serving with the United Nations force in Cyprus, Defence Minister Hellyer informed the Commons Friday. He said only "minor adjustments" would be made in the 1,122-man Canadian contingent.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

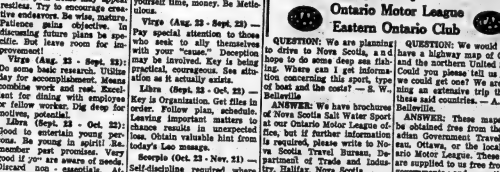
QUESTION: We are planning to drive to Nova Scotia, and would like to do some sleep and fishing. Where can I get information concerning this sport, type of boat and the costs? — S. W., Belleville

ANSWER: We have brochures of Nova Scotia and N.S. Water Sport at our Ontario Motor League office, but if further information is required, please write to Nova Scotia Travel Bureau, Department of Trade and Industry, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

QUESTION: How many national parks are there in Ontario and where are they located? Also, how many islands are there in the St. Lawrence Island Park? — Miss H., Belleville

ANSWER: There are three national parks in Ontario — Point Pelee, St. Lawrence Islands and Georgian Bay Islands. Point Pelee Park is in the southwest corner of the Province and is accessible from Leamington on Highway No. 3. The St. Lawrence Islands Park comprises 12 islands and one mainland area, along the forty-two mile stretch of the St. Lawrence River between Kingston and Brockville. The parks units are reserved by Highway No. 2 and No. 401, and can be reached by boat service from nearby towns. Georgian Bay Islands Park is in the Georgian Bay region of Lake Huron, and consists of thirty islands. These parks are served by the Provincial Highway system. Camping fees: Tent — 1 day 50 cents; 1 week $2. Trailers —1 day 75 cents; 1 week, $3.

QUESTION: We would like to have a highway map of Canada and the northern United States. Could you please tell us where we could get one? We are planning an extensive trip through these said countries. — A. L. B., Belleville.



ANSWER: These maps may be obtained free from the Canadian Government Travel Bureau, Ottawa, or the local Ontario Motor League. These maps are supplied to us free from the governments and supplied to any one who applies for them, also your Chamber of Commerce. Further to your letter of inquiry, there is no road or highway to James Bay. The farthest any highway in Ontario goes north is to a place called St. Ephram de Paradis, 70 miles north of Hornepayne.

QUESTION: We are interested in having a vacation on a farm, and wondered if the Ontario Motor League has any information where a family could find such a place. I refer, of course to a recommended farm or ranch that makes a business of boarding people who like this type of holiday. Any information would be appreciated. — Mrs. McB., Belleville.

Growing Late Replacements

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Your Car

Many of our quick growing annuals, polar oer or begin to look seedy by the first of August leaving a gap in the border. Then, our supply of cutting material comes to an end long before the summer is gone. The answer to these problems is the sowing of fast growing annuals. Make a nursery plot and grow new replacements.

Choose a place where the plants will get at least half a day of sun. Add extra humus to ensure extra moisture through the hot dry months and add a light dressing of chemical fertilizer. Work up the soil and make shallow rows six to eight inches apart if you plan to transplant the seedlings Make the rows one foot apart if you plan to leave the plants in the rows. Sow seeds sparingly. Crowded seedlings give poor results. Water seeds with liquid plant food before covering lightly with soil. Firm soil over seeds with the back of hoe. Fine seeds do not need covering with soil. Cover them with newspapers to keep soil damp Remove paper when seeds sprout.

When transplanting, water the plants with half strength liquid fertilizer such as rapid - gro. Shade plants a day or two with baskets or newspapers. Remove covers as soon as sun is off plants when next sun shine on them again. This will slow the loss of moisture from the leaves and allow new roots to form and become adjusted to new setting. Remember transplanting breaks many feeder roots of a plant and causes shock. Transplant in evening, or on a dull day when ever possible.

Cottage dwellers can start seeds in jiffy pots. At time of planting break off the edges of the pots and set the plants half inch below the soil surface. Any portion of the jiffy pot that remains above soil level acts as a wick carrying the soil moisture up to be dispersed into the air. This robs the roots of needed moisture and slows the plants' growth.

Annuals that grow quickly for late summer bloom — balsam, bachelor's button, burning bush calendula , California poppy. Castor oil plants, celosia. early single cosmos, fiesta cosmos, four o'clock, marigolds- French and African types, and of course all the wonderful giant, ruffled and dwarf button zinnias.

Watch Out For Engine Overheating

By EUGENE B. MELMOE

Often, engine overheating in warm weather is caused by conditions which might be called "neglected and unsuspected." Typical is the accumulation of insects, leaves, mud and grease so often allowed to remain on radiator grilles. This definitely interferes with good cooling and can be as harmful as interior radiator clogging. Another example is low tire pressure. Undgrinflation sets up greater resistance, makes the engine work harder — and a heat build-up is increased.

An excessively lean fuel mixture represents another overheating cause and not an uncommon one. In this case, it may be more difficult to pinpoint the exact troublemaker. It could be due to faulty carburetor adjustment, weak pump pressure, a clogged fuel filter, a pinched or kinked fuel line, manifold air leakage, dirt or water in the fuel. Finally, there is incorrect ignition timing. This is often the basic reason for high engine heat, and one which is caused by inadequate attention on the part of the car owner.

From E. L.: "How does sludge develop inside a car engine?"

When an engine rarely runs far enough or long enough to heat up thoroughly, water vapors mix with oil, carbon, dirt and form sludge.

H. R. asks: "In checking the radiator water yesterday, I noticed it was dirty and flaked out several small bits of hard black sediment of some kind. What would this be from?"

It's probably rubber from a rotting hose.

P. T. writes: "Could the brakes have anything to do with the fact that our car pulls or drifts toward one side when the brakes are off?"

Yes — If one front brake is dragging this will happen.

From G. P.: "When speaking of roughness at idle and low speeds, you warn of air leakage at the carburetor base or manifold flange. Wouldn't such leakage also allow dirt into the engine?"

It would — and in extreme cases, it could result in cylinder and ring damage.

First Year Is Worst In Teaching Profession

By JACK HUTTON

Believe me, it's no small shock when your own mother officially retires from the classroom.

This weekend my mother leaves behind a brood of Grades 4 and 5 tads forever. She has already cleaned out her desk. And two weeks ago she was given two silver trays for her service.

I'm told that about 10,000 teachers across Canada are taking their fishing gear, studying travel folders or just rocking on the porch, their classroom chores ended.

It's one thing to look at a statistic. It's something else to realize they're making speeches of gratitude to a quietspoken, gracious, youthful - appearing lady who still has more energy than any day of the week.

When I read the newspaper story from St. Catharines, Ont., describing the retirement of several teachers under a heading that said "Millions of years," I wondered how many fledgling teachers realize what sort of profession they'll enter into.

NEW TAPPINGS

I also wonder how many young teachers realize that the working hits, staff rooms, regular salary increases, green fees and well-equipped labwerer't there forever.

My folks decided to get married early in Depression years because Dad had a job as a principal just outside North Bay, Ont. It came along one year later — just about the same time the salary of every school teacher was cut.

You're right. They couldn't slash salaries today. But they did in 1933, all across Canada.

When I spent a winter teaching the students of the girls were almost as old as I was) both parents taught within reasuring distance. And they had one piece of advice: "Son, don't try strapping the whole room at once."

As far back as I can remember, talking to the folks wasn't the same as talking to anyone else. The difference: they were constantly marking papers, making up lesson plans or preparing tests while they sat and talked.

LONG HOURS

If you're thinking of teaching as a career, don't be fooled by the hours. The first year is the worst, but after more decades than they like to remember the folks still spend countless hours with piles of paper around the kitchen table.

But maybe I'm piling up the bad points. As a kid I also remember marvelling at the number of people who looked up the family whenever we travelled somewhere. They were former students who remembered the folks.

Telephone calls came from former students who had just been married and wanted the folks to meet the bride or groom. Or they wanted to drive over and show off their first child.

Those are rewards that can't be counted in money. And they are something to look forward to if you're hoping to make your mark as a teacher.

I asked Mother, who didn't know I was writing this column, if she intended making a little farewell speech or something similar. "No, no," she said. "Nothing so trite. We'll just keep busy."

But she remained a teacher to the end. During the second last week, she entered her classroom to find a blackboard note: "You've got till June 19 to bring your money."

Ignoring the fact that this was obviously for a going-away present, Mother summoned the author to the blackboard. And under her direction the girl corrected her sentence: "You have till June 19 to bring your money."

Somehow, I like that.

SUMMER

It's good old summer time again. And during the next two months we hope to describe what some of you are doing, and how to make the summer more interesting or profitable.

If you're doing anything unusual this summer, drop us a line, and we'll pass it on. For instance, we'll talk later about a group of fellows who plan to hitchhike right across the country, working as they go.

Anyway, have fun.

Pearson, Dief Fight Over Probe Of Separatism

'Stop It' PC Reply To PM's Explanation

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Battle lines have been drawn for a new political fight on the issue of Quebec sogession from Confederation.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has charged the government has set up a committee to study the ramifications of a separation of Quebec from the rest of Canada, and has given official countenance to separatism.

Prime Minister Pearson, claiming remarks he made in the Commons were misunderstood, says the inquiry is merely into the economic interrelation of various parts of Canada and should prove that Quebec and the other provinces are inextricably related.

The party political leaders drew the lines of battle in a weekend exchange of press statements.

They rode out of truce in Mr. Pearson's reply in the Commons Friday to a question originally put by Social Credit Reid Scott (NDP — Toronto Danforth): would the government consider investigating the economic, cultural and social effects upon the rest of Canada of separation by Quebec.

Mr. Scott's Friday question was rewarded with a no, whether the government would consider a study being made of the economic, social and political effects on the rest of Canada of separation. He said the subject needed clarification.

"Yes," Mr. Pearson said, "we have been considering the matter, it is not a subject which lends itself to easy investigation and dogmatic conclusions but officials of the government are making that kind of investigation now."

SURPRISED AT STUDY

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker shot to his feet to say it was surprising that the government would assign federal civil servant to study the effects of separation on the remainder.

After the Commons adjourned for the weekend, Mr. Pearson said he thought he had been misunderstood. He still felt as he had when he made the remarks at the final question on May 20 at which time he replied such a study would be "entirely academic, because no such separation is going to take place."

Mr. Pearson's release said: "What I have asked for, and is now in the exploratory stage in my office and the Privy Council office, is a study of the

Santa Claus Generous In Sweeps

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Santa Claus arrived Saturday for seven Canadians who were each $150,000 richer when a horse by that name sped to victory in the Irish Derby at The Curragh race track near Dublin.

They held Irish Sweepstakes tickets on the horse and were among 146 Canadians who will collect a total of at least $1,581,000 on the race.

Second-place windfalls of $60,000 each went to four Canadians who held tickets on Lionhearted and another five each won $30,000 with tickets on third - place Suneeker, Canadians who held tickets on the 27 other horses eligible for the Derby — it started — will each receive a consolation prize that will amount to at least $1,100.

The rewards were earned for an outlay of $3.25—the price of a ticket—and, for many, were the fruits of years of sweepstakes investments. For others, however, the first time they had taken the plunge.

Toronto-area residents were well represented among the big money winners. Two—William Jones, 48, a Scarborough pursuing sagent, and Mrs. Iris Taylor, mother of one—won $250,000; David Meadis, 33, a Toronto upholster cutter, won $60,000 and E. J. G. Moore of Toronto and Donald Hamilton of Willowdale each won $30,000.

ALWAYS BUYS

Mr. Breen, who is married and has no children, said he has been buying sweepstakes tickets "as long as I've had $3 to bet on them."

"We haven't really got any plans to spend the money," his wife said. "It's such a shock. Perhaps we'll be able to help out some of our relatives."

"I just can't believe it," said Mrs. Taylor, who came to Canada from England in 1957 with her husband Charles, a die and tool maker. She said she will resign her job as a bank teller.

Robert MacLeod, 42, of Glace Bay, N.S., heard of his $60,000 win as he was preparing to to attend the funeral of his wife's

Mass Immunization by Inhaling Airborne Vaccines Said Possible

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—Whole populations can be immunized against disease without the use of needles or pills, a Denver scientist said today, but human fears prevent use of the new technique.

"We have become accustomed to being injected," lamented Dr.

Today's Chuckle

If Communism is as wonderful as they claim it is, it seems that they would take down that iron curtain and put in some picture windows.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Weak circulation persists over most of southern Ontario and cool air which moved in Saturday is warming up. Very warm weather is expected to continue over Northern Ontario today followed by some thunderstorms this afternoon and evening. A slow warming trend is expected in Southern Ontario accompanied by sunny weather.

Gardner Middlebrook, director of research at National Jewish Hospital in Denver.

He said that mass immunization through airborne vaccines is possible as a means of preventing tuberculosis, polio and measles.

A pioneer in the research of immunizing by inhaling vaccines, Middlebrook described airborne infection apparatus several years ago. The device is being used to test this technique on animals at several research centres.

The basis of such inoculation depends on the use of atomized organisms, living germs or chemicals which in their pure state are highly infectious. The organisms are sprayed into a chamber in closely controlled amounts.

A single sniff by a human, Middlebrook said, and he's immune.

He said mass immunizations by this airborne technique could be used theoretically to fight any infectious disease.

Attempt To End Strife

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — A behind-the-scenes attempt will be made by the government today to get rid of some of the bad blood that has afflicted the House of Commons in recent months.

Justice Minister Guy Favreau is expected to try to apply the poultice at a meeting he has called of party House leaders. He will give a list of priority measures the government grant passed before a summer recess, and appeal for support of a plan to ration debating time voluntary.

But the government House leader isn't by any means assured his medicine will work. The ills that afflict are deeply imbedded as the feud between the Hatfields and the McCoys.

Gordon Churchill (PC — Winnipeg North Centre), the Conservative House leader, hasn't attended such meetings for two months. His complaint is that confidences haven't been kept and he believes there has been double-dealing with he NDP. His credit and Opposition reputesentatives behind his back.

If the House leaders' meeting fails, Prime Minister Pearson proposes to call in the Opposition party leaders. Observers think the Conservative chief heads - of - parties meeting will follow whatever pattern is set by the House leaders.

The sub of the problem is the expressed hope of the government, NDP and Social Credit groups to avoid a general election. The Creditistes say they are ready for one, and the Conservatives see the possibility of

Banks Denied Right to Appeal Contempt Term

OTTAWA (CP) — Hal C. Banks, deposed president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada, suffered today by the Supreme Court of Canada to serve a 30-day jail sentence for contempt.

The court dismissed an application by Banks seeking leave to appeal to the Supreme Court against the contempt of court conviction.

The application for leave to appeal is dismissed with costs," the court said.

The court in dismissing Banks' application gave no reasons.

The application was heard by Chief Justice Robert Taschereau and Justices Gerald Fauteux and Ronald Martland on June 15.

Banks was convicted for violation of a Quebec court injunction granted last May by the SIU. The infunction was obtained in 1962 by Upper Lakes Shipping Company after a campaign of harassment directed against the company's vessels in St. Lawrence River ports.

The contempt charge was laid after picketing occurred at Trois-Rivieres, Que., in violation of the injunction. The Quebec Superior Court judgment convicting Banks later was upheld by the Quebec Court of Appeal.

Five Powers Seek Cease-Fire in Laos

LONDON (AP) — Britain, Canada, the United States, Thailand and South Viet Nam today called for an immediate ceasefire in Laos and a withdrawal of pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces from their recently-won military positions.

The five-power appeal was made in Vientiane and its details released by the foreign office in London - after a month of consultation among the envoys of those pro-Western countries which signed the 1962 Laotian peace agreement.

India, which took part in these exchanges, declined to sign for reasons of diplomatic protocol.

The five powers, after studying the political and strategic elements of the Laotian crisis, claimed to have established what they called "indisputable evidence" of Communist North Vietnamese involvement in the Pathet Lao offensive which has been under way since February.

"This (involvement) has taken the form of North Vietnamese fighting cadres as well as extensive logistic support," the five-power statement said. They added that the Pathet Lao and their allies "are in a tactically disadvantageous position from which to conduct further military operations and are in fact continuing their offensive."

The five powers also claimed that the North Vietnamese Communists are using Laotian territory "for the infiltration of men and arms into South Viet Nam" where the United States is actively backing the Saigon government's to crush the Red-organized insurrection.

The five powers agreed to ask the foreign secretaries of Britain and Russia as co-chairmen of the Laotian peace settlement,

1. Appeal urgently to all parties in Laos to quit fighting immediately.

2. Request the Pathet Lao forces to pull back to their Feb. 1, 1964, military positions.

3. Call on all Communist North Vietnamese forces "to withdraw from Laotian territory and to desist from any further use of Laotian territory for the purpose of interfering in the internal affairs of the republic of Viet Nam."

Call on the international commission for supervision and control in Laos (Canada India — Poland) to submit a report on the situation without delay.

Must Be Prepared to Risk War Yet Ready to Compromise - LBJ

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson says the United States "must be prepared to risk war" to keep its freedom, yet be ready to "seek just compromise to achieve peace.

This was Johnsons keynote message Sunday as he ended a three - day trip into Michigan and Minnesota. He took up the matter of war and peace in his only non-political speech of the trip, at a Swedish festival in Minneapolis.

Facing thousands of cheering Minnesotans who stood under shade trees in Minnehaha Park, Johnson said:

"Today, as always, if a nation is to keep its freedom it must be prepared to risk war. When necessary, we will take that risk. For as long as I am president, I will spare neither my office nor myself in the quest for peace."

In South Viet Nam, Johnson said, "we are engaged in a brutal and bitter struggle for the freedom of a friend" and "we will stand firm to help maintain freedom and give them counsel and advice and help as necessary."

Johnson had this to say about compromising East-West differences in the interest of peace:

"We must remember that differences with others do not always flow from a desire for domination. They can come from honest clash of beliefs or goals. In such cases our strength does not entitle us to impose our interest. Rather, our desire for peace compels us to seek just compromise."

Speaking as much about civil rights as the quest for international peace, Johnson said:

"As president of the United States, and as an individual citizen, I stand totally committed to the integrity of justice and the enforcement of the law."

Johnson said the United States is pledged to "abide by the law and accept its settlements" when it submits to courts and be satisfied by court decisions . . . to respect, uphold and obey the law of the land."

'Empty Words' Says Turk Of Peace Offer by Grivas

NICOSIA (AP)—Dr. Fazil Kuchuk, Turkish vice-president of Cyprus, described today as "empty words" a second peace offer by Gen. George Grivas, underground hero of the guerrilla war against Britain.

Grivas repeated his offer Sunday in his first public appearance since returning to the island he helped win independence for in 1960. He called for peaceful coexistence between Greek and Turkish Cypriots in a "free Greek Cyprus."

Grivas promised friendship and security to the island's Turkish minority, which has been locked with the Greek-Cypriot majority in a bitter struggle since December.

Kuchuk said Grivas would put the island's Turks "at the mercy of the Greeks."

He pointed out that while Grivas was speaking, Greeks and Turks were exchanging gunfire in a nearby village and one Turk was killed. "Is this the kind of treatment the general wishes to offer the Turks?" Kuchuk asked.

He noted that Grivas had invited the Turks to return to their homes. But he charged the Greek-Cypriots had burned hundreds of Turkish houses and looted or destroyed others, leaving their occupants no place to go.

In a long list of charges he said the Greek-Cypriot government had armed thousands of terrorists, brought in others from Greece, and kept the island under siege.

In the only conciliatory part of his statement, Kuchuk said: "The future will show whether these are simple words uttered publicly to camouflage real intentions or whether they will be followed by deeds to prove the general is sincere in what he says."

Grivas asserted that Greek-Cypriots can make their own

Ald. Ross Bailey Sheriff of Hastings County

The appointment of Belleville alderman Ross C. Bailey as sheriff of Hastings County was officially confirmed today.

Mr. Bailey will assume office Thursday.

His appointment was given Ontario Cabinet approval this morning, the 46-year-old Mr. Bailey said.

He succeeds Roscoe Robson, a former Hastings East M.L.A. who died suddenly April 1st after being stricken with a heart seizure.

A native son of the county, the new sheriff brings much municipal and general business experience to his new appointment.

Born at Harold in Rawdon township, he taught in district public schools for four years immediately preceding World War II.

He then saw service with the RCAF.

After demobilization, he went into county service for five years as treasurer of Hastings County until 1945.

In 1951 he was appointed to the administrative staff of Rival Leaders Return, 'Reconciliation' Theme

By ROBIN MANNOCK

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—The last United Nations troops are leaving the Congo with a bang, from exploding grenades lobbed into polling stations and the wounding feat of a chief of the Baluba tribe.

The grenades injured nearly 100 persons Saturday as The Congo opened a country - wide referendum on a new constitution. Agriculture Minister Constantin Tshisuta - Mwana was among the wounded.

Meanwhile, "national reconciliation" was the keynote of frenzied politicking. It was sounded most loudly by exPresident Moise Tshombe of Katanga, back after a year of self - imposed exile in Europe.

"I am convinced that a total and since rereconciliation of all Congolese is the only chance of saving this country from misery and anarchy," the former secessionist told hundreds of cheering Congolese.

Saturday, South Kasai's deposed "malopwe," or god-emperor, Albert Kalonji, arrived from Brussels. "I am still the malopwe," Kalonji told reporters.

CLAIM CHARGES FIXED

Kalonji had been a fugitive for more than two years from a 30-month sentence for torturing political enemies. Officials said the charges "had all been fixed."

One Baluba leader was killed before the reconciliation maneuvres got started. Messages from the east said North Katanga provincial president Jason Sendwe had been hacked to death by rebels some days ago when they overran Albertville, his provincial capital.

Sendwe, 41, was cut down with machetes along with the provincial vice-president, Forminot Kabangi-Numbi, and several of Sendwe's aides. Sendwe was Tshombe's arch enemy, but his apparently was a slaughter as revenge for the massacres of about 200 anti-Sendwe youth from the Lunda tribe, which Sendwe belongs to. He was greeted by cheers when he demanded freedom for Antoine Gizenga, Communist-backed separatist leader in Stanleyville.

Gizenga has been detained for 27 years on the island of Bemba at the mouth of the Congo River. Informed sources said the Communist leader will offer of liberty if he would join a "round table of reconciliation."

Gizenga's supporters were believed responsible for the grenade attacks Saturday. The terrorists were thought to have been acting on orders from the

Revamp Program To Aid Indians

SUDBURY (C) — Announcement of a revamped federal program to aid Canada's Indian communities highlighted the final assistant Saturday of the northeastern Ontario workshop of the Indian-Eskimo Association of Canada.

Walter Rudnicki, director of the welfare division of the Indian affairs branch, said many of the policies and programs of his department are being realigned and new services added to combat poverty, ignorance and unemployment on Canada's reserves.

Immigration Minister Rene Tremblay is expected to table a detailed report on the changes in the Commons.

The workshop also heard a report on a school integration plan for Indians and whites and a charge of discrimination against Indians.

Dick Vincer, Sudbury separate school inspector, told the meeting a school integration plan for Indians and whites is working successfully in some parts of the province but there should be a greater emphasis on subjects dealing with Indian culture.

He said the teaching of Indian culture would lead to a greater understanding of the Indians.

Children in integrated schools appear to get along well, both in school work and recreational activities, Mr. Vincer said.

Chief Wilfred Mcswaasgi of the Serpent River Reserve charged discrimination against Indians.

Wesley Elliott, Thomasburg, Fatally Hurt

THOMASBURG — A Thomasburg resident, Wesley Elliott, was fatally injured in a two-car accident on Highway No. 37 shortly after noon today.

The accident occurred in front of Whitle's service station.

Mr. Thomasburg Elliott.

It is believed the dead man was proceeding to pull out onto the highway from a neighboring road when his car came into collision with a second vehicle.

Further details of the accident were not immediately available. Ontario Provincial Police from Madoc are investigating.

'Hitler Great Man' Says Preacher Backing Florida Segregationists

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) "Anyone who thinks the nigger is equal to the white man," said Rev. Connie Lynch, "is a goof."

"Hitler," he said, "was a great man."

"The nigger," he said, "should be sent back to Africa."

The governor, Lynch said, was intended to be of the white man, by the white man and for the white man.

Lynch has been the chief spokesman for white segregationist rallies in St. Augustine. His message is a blend of evangelism and militant white supremacy. He said he came here from his home in San Bernardino, Calif., "to help them embattled, good white people in their cause."

Lynch has been night after night to anywhere from 100 to 200 segregationists gathered in the city's plaza.

Some in his audience say they believe Lynch may be an extremist but so a group they applaud and screw "Amen."

About half a mile away the Negroes meet. They gather in any one of several churches.

Sunday night the Rev. Jesse Baptist Church. Hosea Williams, a leader in the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, challenged Negroes in the pews:

"Are you willing to get beat up and go to jail for freedom? Are you willing to suffer? Don't ask me about Paul and Silas, unless you're willing to do the same thing they did. Suffer and go to jail for what you know is right!"

He asked for volunteers for a march on St. Augustine's beach today. A score or more of the 200 listeners stood and pledged themselves to participate.

Canadian Committee Studies Practices in Dutch, Belgian And W. German Parliaments

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Practices in the Dutch, Belgian and West German parliaments are being examined by a subcommittee of the Canadian committee on parliamentary reform.

A first-hand study of the ways these three parliaments do their work was made in recent weeks by former Commons speaker Marcel Lambert, Conservative MP for Edmonton West, who heads a four - member house group composed of two Liberal members and two Progressive Conservatives.

While in Europe for the official anniversary ceremonies of D-day, Mr. Lambert visited all three parliaments. His findings will be placed before the subcommittee in a report.

Mr. Lambert says he found some marked differences between the Canadian-British parliamentary system and that of Holland, Belgium and West Germany.

"One basic difference," he says, "is the distinct cleavage between the cabinet and the parliament in that parliament is much more dominant than in our system. There is not the ascendancy of cabinet in their system."

"Government business is studied more at the direction and wish of the cabinet.

SPEAKER RANKED HIGH

"Secondly, the position of the president or their equivalent of the House of Commons—the opposite number of our speaker—makes him a much more dominant figure. In fact, in Holland and Belgium he actually rates ahead of the minister-president or prime minister.

"It is chamber president who determines the progress of legislation and the conduct of parliamentary business."

However, in Germany although the chamber's presiding officer is a powerful figure the chancellor is, of course, the predominant figure.

The three countries do not employ the committee system in the same way as, for example, the United States Congress. But their committees differ markedly from those of the Canadian Parliament.

They are smaller and they do much more of their business behind closed doors. Canadian parliamentary committees sometimes get up to 30 or 40 MPs and usually go into closed sessions only to discuss the wording of their reports to the Commons. Witnesses are heard in public sessions.

Mr. Lambert found the systems for recording votes of special interest there has been considerable criticism in the Canadian house of the time-consuming method employed there by which each MP's name is called and his vote recorded. It takes 30 to 30 minutes to tally all 385 MPs.

USE COMPUTER

In Belgium, with 212 members the whole process takes only about three minutes. An electronic voting system was designed for the Belgian chamber. Each member presses one of three buttons on his desk—for, against, or abstention.

An illuminated board behind the presiding officer's chair shows how each member voted and a computer a breeze when two later produces a written, detailed record of how each man voted, including the names of absent members.

The Dutch, with only 150 members in their chamber, use the roll-call vote. In Germany, the members file through a lobby, handing a plastic name card to tellers for or against a motion. Both are more rapid than the Canadian system.

APPROVES BILL

The Civil Rights Bill approved by the U.S. Senate is more than 15,000 words long.

Point Anne U. C. Holds S. S. Picnic

The Point Anne United Church Sunday School picnic was held in the Canada Cement park on Saturday afternoon. The afternoon was spent in racing, a ball game and a bountious picnic lunch served in the Canada Cement club house. Ideal weather conditions prevailed and all present thoroughly enjoyed the afternoon's activities.

Elks' Queen To Be Crowned By Champion

John Lewis, Belleville's own champion, has accepted the Elks' invitation to crown their picnic queen on the fourth of July. It had been hoped that John would give a demonstration of the power that has enabled him to become all-Canadian champion, British Empire record holder, a bronze medalist at the Pan-American Games and Canadian representative at the Olympic Games in Tokyo but coach Kenneth Carr-Brainé is at present enjoying a well-deserved rest.

Even though John will not be flying, those who come to the Elks' picnic July 4 at Zwicky Island will not be disappointed. Mr. Bill Lacey of the Prince Edward Sky Diving Club has confirmed that he be on hand with others of the club. Those boys jump and their sky gear is a forty foot cross which must look pretty small from a few thousand feet up. For those who like it rough Mr. Jim Driscoll of the YMCA Hatashita Judo Club will be on hand with other members to demonstrate the finer points of self defence.

Added to all this there will be bands, majorettes, races, picnic queen finals, ball game, dancing and fireworks.

William Jeffs, Stirling, Has Highest Score

It has just been announced by the Hastings County Hog Producers' Association, that William Jeffs, Stirling, R.R. 2, had the highest score for grade "A" hog carcasses shipped during the month of May. Two other farmers also had 100 per cent grade "A" carcasses, however, they shipped fewer hogs during the month. The purpose of the competition is to stimulate interest in and the development of a better grade of hogs by the producers of Hastings and to reconcile the producers marketing the largest percentages of grade "A" hog carcasses during the period January 1 - December 31, 1964.

The competition is open to any hog producer in Hastings County. And those wishing to enter the competition should forward their year's receipts up to the present to the Ontario Department of Agriculture, at Stirling. There will be three classes, one for those marketing less than twenty-five hog carcasses during the year, one for those marketing twenty-five to seventy-five hog carcasses, and the third class is for the producers marketing over seventy-five hog carcasses during the current year. The standing for those who shipped hogs during the month of May is:

	No.	No.	%
	Shipped	Grade "A"	Grade "A"s
Wm. Jeffs, Stirling 3	17	17	100
W. J. Thamer, Harold 2	7	7	100
Roy Sills Holloway	6	6	100
Dennis Chapman Madoc 3	18	17	94.4
Donald Vardy Stirling 4	43	39	90.7
Harold Harris Madoc 1	11	9	81.8
Mal Blackburn Eldorado 6	2	50

These hog producers are to be commended on their shipments and on the quality of their carcasses, and it is hoped that the other hog producers will forward their grading slips to the department.

U.N. Forces in the Congo Leave Tuesday But Country Has Many Crises to Conquer

The UN presence in The Congo is about to end. The United Nations entered the central African country a few months after it became independent June 30, 1960. The thousands of foreign troops which participated in the peacekeeping operations there have gone except for a handful.

The Congo has other crises. It is in a constitutional crisis, with a referendum on a new constitution coming up. There are two rebellions based on tribal disputes but aided and encouraged by the Chinese Communists.

What will happen next in this strategically important, potentially dangerous, split up country? The AP asked former ambassador Edmund A. Gullion to look at it with these and other questions in this special article.

Written for the AP
By EDMUND A. GULLION

WASHINGTON (AP) — On June 30 the rear-guard of the United Nations force in The Congo, its mandate from the General Assembly expired, will be on its way back to home bases after three years of unprecedented operations in the most unpredictable of the new countries which have gained independence since the Second World War.

The UN force is leaving mainly because its money has run out. Since last December it has stood pilot on borrowed time, a six-month extension of its tour.

What has the United Nations accomplished? Without the United Nations, what lies ahead for the republic of The Congo?

At the price of $400,000,000 and 126 young lives in military operations, the United Nations has:

—Prevented what might have been a Korean-type struggle between the super-powers in the heart of Africa;

—Spared the Congolese people the ravages of a step-up from cold war to hot war;

—Helped hold together a country of more than 14,000,000 people, comprising scores of tribes, possessing unequalled potential wealth and sharing frontiers with nine countries;

—Offered counsel and moral support while The Congo, one of the least prepared of the new states, struggled to create the forms of legal government;

—Carried on the biggest technical assistance program yet conducted by an international organization and which, finances permitting, will continue;

—Increased the resentment of the Soviet Union which has balked at paying assessments for an operation which it doesn't approve (and which has seen its representatives twice ejected by the Congolese government);

—Furnished the critical, controversial precedents for the future of a world organization.

UN STOOD FAST

If the United Nations had not stood to its task as it did in The Congo, it might well be on the road into the shadows to join the League of Nations. What it has done, it seems to me, not only increases the chances that it will be more constantly used, (with the safeguards built into its charter) but also speeds up its evolution into what its founders expected it one day to become.

In supporting the United Nations through this test of its day in Africa and controversy at home, the United States clung to a constant line.

If The Congo should break into pieces, the Communist country could pick up some of the pieces.

To keep this from happening, multilateral action through the United Nations appeared better than direct intervention which could not only call for similar action on the part of the Soviet Union but would also look to the hypersensitive new nations like self-serving neo-imperialism.

If one part of The Congo, the mineral-rich Katanga, were to break away, taking with it all most half of the country's wealth and revenue, other defections would follow. Indeed this disintegration was in full swing in the first year of Congolese independence when seven one secession but three were in the making:

—In Katanga, in the Kasai and in Orientale province, where Antoine Gizenga, self-styled successor to Patrice Lumumba, held sway amidst a cluster of Communist and satellite "embassies."

In almost a dozen diffuse but closely negotiated steps and resolutions, the United Nations in The Congo was enjoined to expel foreign paramilitary, prevent civil war, "by force if necessary," and to preserve the "integrity" of the country.

PROBLEMS AHEAD

It achieved these goals, not without blood, sweat and tears, while it remained in The Congo. Now that it is going will all this be undone? Will The Congo fall apart again?

A man would have to have his head examined to offer a sure thing in forecasting The Congo. The best which can be done is to weigh the good and the bad. To this observer, the former seems slightly to outweigh the latter.

4 Area Boys To Attend Children's Camp

Four area boys will have a chance this summer to enjoy Easter Seal money at work. Brenda Brown and Allan Embleton of Trenton, Calvin Struthers of Wellington and Brian Hitchcock of Roslin will attend the Ontario Society for Crippled Children's camp at Port Elmsley, Ontario.

Merrywood Camp, one of five camps in Ontario operated by the Society for Crippled Children, is located between Perth and Smith's Falls. The camp offers a full time program of recreation and craft education to the area's crippled children. Merrywood along with its sister camps throughout the province offers this summer opportunity to over 1200 of the province's crippled youths. This program is the largest in the world exclusively for crippled children.

Frances Foster of Belleville will participate in the program at Merrywood as a sub-counselor.

An "open house" will be held on Sunday, July 12 from two to six p.m. to demonstrate to the public how the society, in association with over 230 service clubs in the province is spending your Easter Seal donations. The public is invited to attend and the children will participate in an afternoon day's program of crafts, music and recreation. Picnic areas are available and beverages will be served.

Thirty-five couples played 18 holes of golf. The day was fine and everyone agreed it was the best Mr. and Mrs. ever at the local club.

Winners were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hartin of Napanee with a low net score of 67.

First low gross was taken by Mr. and Mrs. Alec Ingram of Belleville with a 77; second low gross, Mr. and Mrs. D. Cuthbertson, RCAF, with 82; third low gross, Mr. and Mrs. P. Officer Hurt In Police Chase, Cruiser Damaged

PICTON — A Picton police constable is in hospital here after his cruiser collided with a car which was chasing on Highway 14 north of Bloomfield early today.

The driver of the pursued car fled the scene and is being sought by police.

Provincial Police Constable Edward County Memorial Hospital is Constable Al Marvin. At first it was feared he might have suffered a broken collarbone and other rib injuries in the pile-up.

However, Provincial Chief George Pitt this morning said his officer was in good condition and there "were no bones broken."

Details on the chase — and what caused it — still are being investigated by provincial police from here.

The chase is believed to have started in town some time around 2 a.m. It ended on a bridge spanning a creek where the pursued slammed into a guard rail and the cruiser piled into the wreckage.

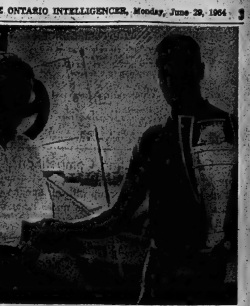
Douglas Grant Of Quinte Club Scores an Ace

TRENTON — On the 17th hole in Saturday's tournament for the Quinte Cup at Trenton, Douglas Grant of the Bay of Quinte Golf Club wacked a hole-in-one on the 200 yard, par three hole, before the unbelieving eyes of his opponents, Lawrence Bigg of Picton and George Winn of Napanee, who nevertheless served as witnesses for the first witnessed hole in one for the local course. Through out the 40-year history of the local club, there have been isolated instances of holes-in-one, but these have been unwitnessed, and therefore, unofficial. Last year, a junior player reported a hole-in-one. Most local club members recall the last reported unwitnessed shot as having been made in 1934 by a member playing alone.

Winner of the Quinte Cup in match play was a Trenton nine-man team, captained by Gordon Tripp, with co-players Scott Duncan, Joseph Donato, Carl Charlton, Clarence Hickery, Jim Teake, Larry Terry, Steve Holmes, and Ronald Beale. Donato, Beale, Holmes, and Duncan are all juniors.

Thirty-six holes were played between 8 a.m. and 5.30 p.m. Following the match, all players received golf balls and winners, trophies. A buffet supper was enjoyed in the club rooms.

Mr. Grant is in line for numerous awards for his feat.



Woman Injured In Accident

TRENTON — A Bowmanville woman, Mrs. Kathleen Pursey, 34, was treated at Trenton Hospital for an injured right knee following a two car collision at the corner of McLellan Ave. and McGill St., in Trenton. Damage totalled. The cars were driven by George Forsey, the injured woman's husband and Muriel Daniel of R.R. No. 5 Trenton. Nine children, riding in the two cars, and ranging in age from 12 to two, were not injured. Damage to the two cars was set at $300.

MUTUAL CONGRATULATIONS are exchanged by Cpt. Gordon Tripp of the Trenton nine-man team which Saturday won the Quinte Cup at Trenton, in play against teams from Belleville, Picton and Napanee, and Douglas Grant of the Bay of Quinte Club who had a hole in one on the 17th hole during the match — the first "witnessed" hole in one for the more-than-40-year-old Trenton club.

Co-operation and Competition

Canadian Pacific Airlines has rejected any amalgamation or partnership with Air Canada—that is Trans-Canada Air Lines under its new, and more accurate, name.

Instead of amalgamation or a partnership, Canadian Pacific Airlines wants to divide the world up with Air Canada. This is the method it prefers in meeting the stipulations of Transport Minister John Pickersgill that the two major Canadian airlines refrain from cutting each other's financial throats.

Accordingly, talks between the two companies are proceeding on the CPA blueprint, but Air Canada president Gordon R. McGregor would prefer the other method. Amalgamation, he says, would eliminate duplication, improve the quality of service and reduce costs.

Believers in the values of competition have to register a demurrer, here. Amalgamation might make these results possible, but would hardly guarantee them all. Particularly in the realm of service, competition often works wonders. It provides an incentive to cut costs, too. Where competition is lacking, the only drive to provide better service and to reduce costs comes from the calibre of management. No matter how high this may be, competition is a handy way of providing pressure to assure that it stays that way.

Having said this, though, we ought to add that Air Canada deserves protection. It pioneered air service for Canadians, in days when demand was small. Canadian taxpayers have footed the bill for deficits which were made inevitable by conditions. Today, when more people are travelling by air and profitable operation is possible on many routes, there is no reason to permit every Tom, Dick and Harry, or every Johnny-come-lately, to move in on Air Canada and share the fruit of hard years of pioneering.

Any private company which had undertaken the same pioneering work would have insisted on a franchise which would have provided a suitable monopoly, at least for a certain period of time. Just because Air Canada is publicly owned is no reason why it should be denied privileges which a private company would have received under similar circumstances.

The Duty to Govern

The Financial Post recently offered some sage advice about the so-called "great flag debate."

"Prime Minister Pearson says that neither his cabinet nor his caucus wants a general election. There is nothing the voters want less," the paper observes.

It adds that an election over the design of a flag would make a Canadian joke. Such an election, it forsees would have to be fought on the flag issue because there is no other debatable issue in sight.

"Getting business done in a splintered parliament," the paper says, "is difficult; but the politicians must learn how to do it, restraining their natural ferocity and even modifying their rules if necessary. It is for them to accommodate themselves to the public's wishes, decisively and even whims, not the other way around."

In short, regardless of the difficulties of doing so, any government's first duty is still to govern.

All Eyes on Moscow

From all indications, the Sino-Soviet ideological split is leaving its mark on Canada's communist party. The Canadian comrades, too, are divided on the question of what constitutes orthodox communism and the rift is becoming more steadily difficult to conceal.

On the one hand, intellectuals in the Canadian Communist Party tend to favor the militant brand of communism espoused by Peking. The party's political bosses—who for the most part are not intellectuals, but rather are specialists in the building and maintenance of political organizations both overt and covert—tend to favor the softer Soviet line.

Especially, the Canadian Communist Party is Moscow-orientated. But with growing grumblings from the intelligensia about deviation from the true tenets of Marxism and Leninism, the orientation is undoubtedly hard for party leaders to maintain.

Language gradually varies, and with it fade away the writings of authors who have flourished their allotted time.—Washington Irving.

Battle of Statisticians

By ED FINN in Canadian Transport Review

In the golden age of chivalry, it was customary for the warlord of nobles to hire knights to do their fighting for them. In this age of complexity, it is the custom of big employers and big unions to hire statisticians to do their fighting for them.

This is especially true in the railway industry. When company and union negotiators meet to "negotiate" a new working agreement, their front ranks bristle with statisticians, lawyers, economists and research technicians. Instead of swords and lances, they carry briefcases bulging with charts, tables, graphs and other esoteric documents. They hurl statistics at each other like so many pellets of lead.

Both railway and union officials are relegated to spectator roles in this tournament of the technicians. Most of the statistical in-fighting is over their heads — as incomprehensible to them as were the mysterious incantations of Merlin to the Knights of the Round Table. They are able to tell when one side or the other has made a palpable "hit" only if the victims betray discomfiture.

The perennial "Battle of Statisticians" was on display last month at Ottawa's conciliation board hearings in the dispute between the non-operating unions and Canada's railways. The board hearings were conducted with amazing speed this year: a mere six days, instead of the usual six months or more. Even so, the mountain of briefs, exhibits, charts and statistical evidence compiled during those six days would take the average union member about six weeks to read through. And, unless he has a Ph.D. degree, he wouldn't be much wiser when he finished than when he began.

Sitting at the head table, while this ritual was going on, I had time to reflect on the vast change that has occurred in the pattern of collective bargaining. There was a time when a labor giant such as the late Lewis could negotiate with just two words. Asked what he wanted, he would say: "More." Asked why, he would say, "Because."

Then, if the employers proved stubborn, would come the strike that forced them to meet the union demands.

Nowadays, the fighting is done with figures, wielded by statisticians to impress government - appointed conciliators and arbitrators. The modern negotiators have little to do except provide a cheering section for their team, by applauding and try to look as if they understood the complicated terminology of the verbal skirmishers.

Basically, of course, the arguments all revolve around the so-called "ability to pay standard," with which the non - op unions demand parity. The railway industry has fought back by computing the standard in another way that produces a much lower figure, or by introducing new standards which they try (always in vain) to prove more valid.

The durable goods standard is based on the average earnings of workers in a certain group of manufacturing industries, whose range of skills, occupations and sex ratio are considered most similar to those of the non-op railway employees. Of course, they are not exactly the same, but the railway evidence that the non-ops group contains more skilled workers and fewer females is certainly more long-service employees — than does the durables group, and therefore deserve a higher overall wage average. This is why the non-ops advance durable goods as a minimum standard only.

The necessity of finding some standard of comparison, by which the wages of non-op workers can be judged for the result of the alleged erosion of the unions' right to strike. Government intervention is the last resort, the rather has deprived the non-ops of the strike weapon three times in the past decade, and in particular, nevertheless, that 100,00 railway workers have to depend on the wrestling of other parties to set the pace for them in wage increases; it is more than regrettable — it is humiliating.

The Animals Are Restless

Milwaukee Journal

From Colorado to Australia, the animals seem to be getting restless. A Hereford bull climbed the stairway to a hayloft in a barn near Denver, Colo., and defied efforts to get it down. They had to give it a tranquilizer. Municipal officials on a Lebanese town fled and gave themselves a three-day holiday when a wild bull took over the town hall. An irate taxpayer finally shot the dog and ended the bulldog's reign of terror in a mouse recently put Fortnum and Mason's, the queen of the world's most exclusive grocery stores, in a tizzy. "We do not have a mice," the floorwalker told lady, "we have a mouse. We're a panic stations."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

June 20th, 1944

Agriculture Minister Gardiner said in the Commons last night in announcing the negotiation of a four-year bacon agreement with the United Kingdom, that there was no reason for farmers to worry about not having markets for a considerable part of their hog production. He said, however, that world associations had to be considered in any agreement entered into with the United Kingdom or anyone else, and a factor in the future would be the consideration that the British will not always be buying all the food they require in Canada. Mr. Gardiner said he could give no guarantees of conditions five or ten years ahead.

The Minister said the new four-year bacon agreement had not been signed, and that it might be some minor changes. However, it was planned that the United Kingdom should take as much bacon from Canada in the next four years as it did in the last four years. The agreement would cover 1944, 1945, 1946, and 1947, and the price would be 75 cents per hundredweight higher than that paid in any year during 1944.

Sponsored by the Belleville Rotary Club, the local air cadets came into being almost two years ago, the corps now having grown until there is now a personnel of approximately 75 air-minded boys. Ages of the boys range from 14½ to 17½ years. Original intention was to give boys some initial training in aeronautics with a view of directing their promotion should they later wish to join the air force. Now with the end of the war probably in sight, the corps will be continued as one of the youth training movements.

Yawning Is a Normal Function of the Body

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes me to yawn all the time, or to take deep breaths?

Could my metabolism be off balance? I had a chest X-ray and the result was fine. I'm not short of breath, but I am a little overweight. — M. K.

What makes people yawn? Or have to take a deep breath once in a while? The deep breath is really a sort of slow-paced yawn. And a real yawn is a concentrated deep breath.

Physiologically, a yawn results when there is a relatively high amount of carbon dioxide in comparison to the amount of oxygen in your system.

This doesn't necessarily mean that anything is wrong, of course. Babies yawn. Animals yawn. They lie around and when they breathe very hard. Eventually the oxygen-carbon dioxide balance becomes normal. That they need to correct it. So they yawn, meaning that they breathe deep, breathe exhale, then go back to ordinary breathing.

If you are sleepy and tired, you yawn. Because you haven't been active, and you haven't been breathing very vigorously. Even imagine a baseball player, up at bat, stopping to yawn! He's keyed up, and his physical responses have been extensive to respond to his emotional desired to get a hit.

Boredom also makes you yawn. When you are bored, you slow down physically to suit your mental attitude. (This, indeed, is a considerable part of what we mean by the word "psychosomatic." The way we feel has a great deal to do with the way we act, or react.)

For whatever reasons, yawns are contagious. Somebody else yawns, and pretty soon you do, I suppose that this is a normal response to dull or tiring situations. Everybody feels free to yawn. One person finally gives way to automatic desires and yawns. So the cork has been pulled. Other bored people, who have been trying to stay interested, yawn, too.

It is quite conceivable that low thyroid activity can have its impact on yawning. This means low oxygen consumption. Therefore a chronic yawner may well find it in order to have some metabolism tests.

Yawns don't mean anything. Nor a dozen yawns. But chronic yawning may mean that your metabolism is below par, and that you consequently are bored and languid.

There are not much combinations of circumstances as I cannot easily reconstruct, be in-different and bored and so have lowered metabolism.

Or for that matter there may be a connection between being overweight and being unduly inactive and more than duly bored.

You'll have to take it from there.

Dear Dr. Molner: I read your recent article on cortisone. Can you enlighten me on sclerotherma, or "tightening of the skin"? — Mrs. H. H.

Scleroderma is one of the collagen diseases, that is, involving fibrous structures of the body. It can appear in different forms. In the case of the skin, the skin becomes thickened pale and tight. Arthritis often but not always accompanies this.

Cortisone or one of its derivatives is the chief treatment.

Fear and Guilt About Disease Common Factor

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"I sometimes wonder why people think they are sick," said the doctor, across the dinner table. "What do you mean by that?" I asked.

"I mean the people who come to me for a diagnosis, and when it turns out to be serious, want to know resentfully, 'But why should this happen to me?' I'm always tempted to answer, 'Why not?,' but I don't."

The doctor and I attested pride as the cause of this common question. I don't see the same thing at all. It is, rather, what Alan Gregg has aptly called "the shadow of possible guilt."

In one of the Bampton Lectures at Columbia University a decade ago, Dr. Gregg remarked that "fear and guilt" about disease are nearly as prevalent today as they were in more openly superstitious eras. "Indeed, I have often marveled," he said, "that we do not perceive our mental attitude. (This, indeed, is a considerable part of what we mean by the word "psychosomatic." Tourist Check Is Nonsense

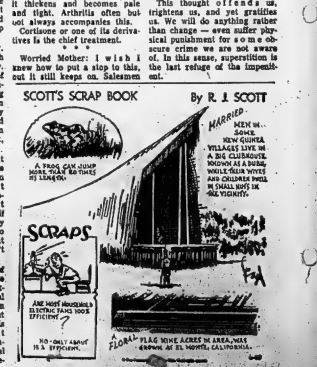
Sarnia Observer

The department of tourism and publicity for Ontario has a research director. He is Donald R. Richmond and he is toying with the idea that there should be the licence numbers of all tourists entering Ontario and then keeping a check on their movements.

In general terms, this is what he told a provincial travel research conference in Toronto recently. He wants to know where the tourists go, what kind of accommodation they prefer, how many are in each car, where they come from, whether they like to camp out in public parks or rent boats and heaven knows what else.



It is to be presumed that much of this information when boiled down could prove of some value as to what visitors are getting the most from the tourist dollar. We do not have information as to what is going to be done about the Ontario tourist facilities when the crowded cities on hot weekends to camp at the Pinery for instance.

But it strikes us that Mr. Richmond is dabbling much too deeply in Parkinson's Law. It would take a small army of researchers digging out the information from tourists, filling in long forms and sending them to some central point. Then they would have to be cross checked to show where the car from Michigan went the first night, the second night and so on.

Probably it would mean that the taxpaying public would have to provide enough money for an electronic computer so that every tourist would be a properly coded statistic. But what would happen to the number if the car from Michigan suddenly turned around and managed to get across the border unchecked? You can't abuse computers that way.

It just seems to be a bit of nonsense to go to the expense of embarrassing tourists by asking them a barrage of personal questions, then keeping tab on their every move. We want more tourists coming into this province and we don't want them to think that they are unwelcome or under the watchful eye of some eager research researcher.

Few Memorial Plaques Mark Assassination

By ROSS ROSKOVIC

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) Austrian Archduke Franz Ferdinand's driver took a wrong turn in this town 50 years ago and a young Bosnian revolutionist named Gavrilo Princip was in the wrong place.

Those two errors added up to the shots fired on a Sarajevo bridge a half-century ago that touched off the First World War, led to the end of the mighty Austro - Hungarian Empire, cost the lives of 8,000,000 men, opened the way for the communization of Russia, and created hatred that led to the Second World War.

There is little here now to recall the tumult of the day 50 years ago Sunday when the heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne was shot dead, with his wife, while on a state visit to Sarajevo.

There were no flags decking the streets; no parades; no crowds.

Sunday a few memorial plaques were unveiled and wreaths were placed on the tombs of the plotters. The house where assassin Princip was born in the village of Bosanski Grahovo will be opened as a museum.

NO CELEBRATION

But the Yugoslav government made clear that this was merely the observance of an historic event, not a celebration.

One of three surviving members of the group that carried out the assassination, Cvjetko Popovic, is custodian of the Sarajevo museum. He says he would not have taken part in the plot had he dreamed it might lead to war.

"We wanted only to destroy the archduke as a symbol of Austria's rule and of Germanization of our Bosnia," he said. "It was purely a protest — a strictly local affair. We did not think of war."

Students of the assassination call it a muddled plot which succeeded only because of two errors. Early on the assassination day, a bomb was hurled at the archduke's car as he rode through Sarajevo streets to a welcome at the city hall. The bomb landed in the folded back canvas top of the car and the archduke is said to have pushed it out into the street. It exploded, wounding one of the archduke's aides in a following car.

CHANGED SCHEDULE

After the city hall reception, the angered archduke insisted on changing his formal schedule and driving to the hospital to visit his wounded aide. On that route the car would not have passed near Princip. But the driver took a wrong turn and had to stop the car and turn back.

The assassin, meanwhile, had left his hiding place along the regular route and just by chance happened to be at the spot where the car turned back to drive to the hospital. There he emptied his pistol at the car, killing the archduke and his wife.

Princip, then 19, was seized at the scene. He tried to commit suicide by swallowing cyanide but the poison didn't work. Four years later he died in prison. Three fellow conspirators were executed.

Accident Alley' At Marysville Scene of Crash

And yet again it's happened in Accident Alley!

Pierre Gauthier, 23 - year - old Downsview man was treated for scalp and possible back injuries when his car rolled over on Highway 401 where the road narrows to a two - lane two-way stretch north of Marysville.

Accidents at the junction have occurred regularly since it opened last fall.

ARREST MARCHERS

GLASGOW (Reuters) — Several "ban-the-bomb" demonstrators were arrested Sunday at the site of the $275,000,000 ($275,000,000) British Polaris submarine base at Faslane, 25 miles northwest of here. About 200 demonstrators reached the base Sunday after a two-day protest march from Glasgow.

Shastri Reported Better

NEW DELHI (AP) — Ailing Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri was reported in generally good condition today but more of his official schedule was cancelled.

For the first time there was a public suggestion that the 58-year-old prime minister, who was reported to have suffered a mild heart attack Friday night, should delegate some of his responsibilities.

The Times of India said no prime minister can afford to do without a full-time foreign minister, as Shastri does.

A government spokesman issued this statement on Shastri's condition:

"The prime minister's temperature is near normal now. He slept well last night. His general condition is good and he is cheerful."

"In a couple of days the prime minister may be in a position to attend to the business of government," an authoritative source said.

Sunday night, Shastri's son Hari, said his father would need at least a month's rest, and there was speculation some of his aides would take the reins of government temporarily.

The son's statement indicated India was again on the verge of a period of temporary leadership. After the late prime minister Nehru suffered a stroke in January, he turned over many of the burdens of his office to Shastri. Because Shastri lacked Nehru's authority, the government was beset by indecision.

The government slumped into another leadership crisis when Nehru died of a heart attack May 27 but it ended quickly with Shastri's election as prime minister June 2.

CLAIM 'OVERSTRAIN'

Shastri, 59, is officially reported ailing from "overstrain and temperature" but authoritative informants said he suffered a mild heart attack Friday.

He almost died of a heart attack in 1946. The government's statement on his present condition did not specify fears that he was critically ill.

Shastri had been working up to 18 hours a day, attempting to give new impetus to solving the country's problems.

A government official said Shastri awakened in a cheerful mood Sunday. He got out of bed to change clothes, had morning tea with his family and later ate a little rice and butter, informants said.

President Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan, home minister G. L. Nanda and Finance Minister T. T. Krishnamachari saw Shastri twice briefly during the day. Nanda and Krishnamachari were expected to take on many of Shastri's duties during any prolonged convalescence.

Island Site Turnover Will Be Spectacular

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Drapeau, Montreal mayor and master showman, has scheduled a spectacular display for Tuesday night's turnover of the Expo '67 site to the Canadian Corporation for the 1967 world exhibition.

The mayor has secured the attendance of some 7,000 prominent persons for his "La Nuit des Iles."

Bands and folk dancers will perform at the outset. But the show-stoppers begin at 11:15, when coast-to-coast CBC television viewers are presented with a gala array of fireworks, a performance by the RCMP musical ride and blackout of the city.

The ceremony marks the turnover of the island site in the St. Lawrence River to the exhibition builders.

The blackout will begin at 11:50 p.m. when all street lights in the city visible from St. Helen's Island will be switched off. Then, at each stroke of midnight, major buildings and points of interest will be lighted in succession.

Twenty-two countries, including the United States, will see the show via the telecast and English and French CBC television and radio networks will carry it across Canada.

forcing one if they can hold up the granting of interim spending authority for another two weeks.

BEST CHANCE IS NO W

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has said—as Prime Minister Pearson has also said—he fears an election at this time would tear the country apart on racial and loyalty issues. But the Conservatives believe their best opportunity to return to power is now, before any change is made in electoral maps.

Redistribution of parliamentary seats on the basis of shifts in population recorded in the 1961 census is long overdue. While the government proposes that the new electoral maps be drawn by independent commissioners, the Conservatives feel certain there will be enough political hanky-panky in altering electoral boundaries to make their re-election difficult.

After two hours of roistering debate Friday, the Commons agreed to sit every week, and until there is a summer recess, under new, longer hours.

The House meets at 2 instead of 3:30 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, and at 10:30 instead of 11 a.m. on Fridays.

On Wednesdays and Fridays, the Commons will continue to adjourn at 6 p.m. But on Fridays there will be no lunch break. On Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays there will be evening sittings from 8 to 10:30 p.m. instead of 8 to 10 p.m., plus an hour's Monday extra for the three 10-minute adjournment debates.

The arrangement still gives members Wednesday mornings off for caucus meetings, Wednesday evenings for social events and permits them to leave Friday night for the weekend.

Puts Little Stock in New Threats

HAMILTON (CP) — Justice Minister Guy Favreau said Saturday he puts little stock in new threats of renewed terrorist violence in Quebec next month.

During a press conference at a Liberal party picnic here, Mr. Favreau noted that there was only a token demonstration by separatist groups at last week's St. Jean Baptiste celebration in Montreal.

He said the royal commission on bilingualism and bi-culturalism will ultimately help to defeat separatism but that it now is providing a forum for extremist views.

Mr. Favreau also said his department is trying to amend legislation to cope with the hate Camp Niagara Sunday for the literature problem in Canada. It is co-operating with Ontario in getting enough evidence to launch a test case under existing laws.

He has been a city alderman since 1960.

Mr. Bailey's appointment now leaves a vacancy on city council.

MILLS — McCOLL

Bouquets of white carnations and pink snapdragons adorned the altar in St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Anglican Church, Belleville, for the recent marriage of Judith Eileen McColl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. McColl, Belleville, to William Hamilton Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Mills of Ottawa. The Rev. J. A. Dunlop, minister of the church, officiated.

Traditional wedding music was rendered during the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length bridal gown of white organza over taffeta, featuring a scoop neckline and long lily-point sleeves, and highlighted with lace inserts on the bodice and skirt with a flowing train and bow at back. Her shoulder length bouffant veil flowed from a headdress of white organza and lace flowers. The bridal bouquet was of mauve orchids mingled with stephanotis and ivy.

The matron of honor, Mrs. R. M. McArton, Ottawa, sister of the bride, the bridesmaid, Miss Joan Hart of Toronto and Miss Susan McColl, sister of the bride, as junior bridesmaid were all dressed in embroidered white organza dresses over orchid taffeta with matching shoes and headpieces. Each carried a crescent shaped bouquet of white carnations.

Mr. Allen Mills of Toronto was groomsman, while Mr. Brian Tombs of Ottawa and Mr. Ronald McArton of Ottawa were the ushers.

The reception was held at the bride's home, 22 Stanley Street, Belleville, where the bride's table was most attractive with pink lace cloth, pink candles in silver holders and centred with a three-tier wedding cake topped with bells and pink flowers and encircled at the base with misty tulle. The bride's mother received the guests wearing a pink lace sheath, pink hat and shoes and a corsage of white gardenias. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother attired in a beige organza dress, large beige flowered picture hat, beige shoes and a corsage of yellow roses.

For a motor trip around the Great Lakes, the bride chose a beige A-line dress with bone colored trim ,matching shoes, gloves and purse with a corsage of white roses.

Guests were present from Ottawa, Toronto, Barrie, Brockville, Kingston, St. Catharines and Cornwall.

The bride was honored previous to the marriage at the home of Miss Joan Hart in Toronto; shower at the home of Miss Frances Smith in Ottawa and by Mrs. George Sprung and Mrs. L. Mountjoy at Little Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Mills will reside at 310 Westdale Avenue, Kingston.

Successful Living

Household Rules a Must For Comfortable Living

DEAR DORIS — I believe we have the most ill-mannered children outside of the circus. They eat with muddy hands, don't know what a fork is for, and when I try to tell them, I am a nag!

Trouble is, I am stepmother, so anything I say is resented by my two stepdaughters ages 13 and 14. When I try to get them to pick up their own ironed (by me) clothes off the floor, their father says I am picking on them.

I'm about ready to give up. If I talked back to my mother I had a warm seat for days. Don't you think a family has to have rules, just like a country or a club? — JUNGLE JENNY.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR JENNIE — A stepmother's lot is not a happy one! Not always, anyway. The girls resent you as some kind of interloper; the father feels guilty to have foisted on them a strange new boss.

Of course you need rules. When youngsters aren't brought into line they are worse off than a baby lion whose mother bats him down when he gets too frisky.

But love comes first. Do your charges get affection from you; or any hint that you care about them? They must know you are on their side. Then a system of rewards for helping, (dishes, ironing, tidying), and for good behavior, will do more than stern words. I am sending you a list of books on manners which make easy reading for the young people themselves.)

DEAR DORIS — For a few years I have been in love with a hockey player whom I have never met. My cousin tells me what a wonderful guy he is; and we like the same things and have the same interests. I thought I would get over him, but each day I find that I love him more.

Would it be all right for me to go to the city where he lives to work and try to meet him? — UNIVERSITY STUDENT IN LOVE.

DEAR UNIVERSITY STUDENT — Put your dream boy in the background by associating with flesh and blood boys. Love is something which is born of companionship. Moving to his city for the express purpose of meeting him is foolhardy. Suppose the dream turns out to be a nightmare?

St. Margaret's Guild Holds Successful Strawberry Tea

St. Margaret's Afternoon Guild held their strawberry tea and bazaar recently with Mrs. A. Dunlop, the minister's wife, and Mrs. J. Dobson, the president greeting each guest. Mrs. I. Smith was treasurer and took the tickets at the door.

A centrepiece of garden roses of pink, white and red was artistically arranged, and pink and white candles cast a lowly glow on the silver tea services at the tea table. Those pouring tea were Mrs. A. S. McConnell, Mrs. W. Gorham, Mrs. R. Rushton and Mrs. D. Fort.

In the tea room small arrangements of pansies were on each table where strawberry shortcake and tea were served. Hostesses in the tea room were Mrs. Pickering, Mrs. Black, Mrs. Waldron, Mrs. D. Allen and Mrs. W. Roblin, Mrs. W. Mosser convened the kitchen committee.

Mrs. J. Dobson and Mrs. C. A. Parm convened the fancy work table where needle work of all kinds was displayed, including tablecloths, pillow slips and beautiful hand dressed dolls.

Mrs. W. Collyer looked after the sale of plants. The candy, aprons and novelties, convened by Mrs. W. Meens were soon sold.

The bake table loaded with good things to eat was in charge of Mrs. J. Ritchie, Mrs. C. Brown and Mrs. D. Leeming.

Miss Docter convened the sale where soap turtles were sold to the children.

Members of the Guild expressed their appreciation to all who helped make the occasion a success.

Hounds Difficult Dogs To Train

MONTREAL (C) — Every dog should be well-adjusted.

Blanche Saunders has spent 30 years helping owners of canines to cope with doggy problems. She has trained upwards of 25,000 persons and written 10 books on the subject of her dog-training techniques.

A resident of Bedford N.Y., she was here to conduct a clinic at the Dog Obedience School.

Some of the trickiest breeds to train, she says, are:

Hounds—because they keep their noses to the ground all the time;

Beagles—same problem as hounds;

Sporting breeds—because they are constantly distracted by birds and movement, which is part of their nature;

Poodles — the quickest to learn but often difficult to train because "they like to clown and if people applaud, off they go."

Miss Saunders said there is no size criterion for dog training. Big or small, it is just a question of wise instruction.

Dominion Day Picnic Cake

by Mary Moore

A cake that you could toss in the pan in which it is baked to your Dominion Day picnic site is sitting in front of me on my desk. As Eleanor and I sip our afternoon tea we cut off little bites and munch on them.

This is a dandy cake for you girls who like to beat up a cake quickly to serve at once to your hovering, starved ones.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Pan-Fried Baby Beef Liver and Onion Rings; Fresh Fruit Squash; Creamed Broccoli; Tossed Green Salad; Glazed Strawberry Pie; Coffee.

PICNIC CAKE:

¾ cup sifted all-purpose flour, 2 teaspoons single-acting baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup chopped walnuts or pecans, ½ cup chopped dates (or raisins), ½ cup shortening (half and half butter and shortening are good), ¾ cup sugar, 2 eggs, yolks and whites separated, ¾ teaspoon vanilla, 2 tablespoons milk, ½ cup all-bran (or ¾ cup each crushed shredded wheat and bran flakes).

Sift flour; then sift it with the baking powder and salt. Add the nuts and dates (or raisins) and mix the flour mixture through them.

Cream the shortening (or butter and shortening) with the sugar until light and creamy. Beat in the egg yolks and vanilla. Stir in the flour mixture alternately with the milk. Beat the egg whites until nearly stiff and fold them in with the all-bran (or other combinations of cereals). Butter generously an 8 x 8 x 2" pan and turn batter into it.

Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 35 to 40 minutes, or until it tests done when a pick touched with fingertips at centre.

While the cake bakes prepare the Topping: Mix 2 tablespoons cornstarch and 2 tablespoons honey. When they are blended, stir in ¾ cup unstrained fresh orange juice. As soon as cake is taken from oven, slowly spoon topping over, smoothing it patiently to edges to cover entire top of cake. If a little topping runs down the sides it won't matter. Cool in pan.

Serve from pan cut into 9 (or 16) squares. Wonderful!

Indian Woman Taught Cree In Mission

TORONTO (C)—An attractive young Indian woman who could barely speak English when she came here four years ago now works for the Ontario government translating news releases from English into her native Cree.

Mrs. Richard Coatsworth, who as Mary Wheesk was born in Attawapiskat, a settlement of some 400 Indians in the James Bay area of Northern Ontario, is paid five cents a Cree word.

Written Cree is a series of symbols, rather like Egyptian hieroglyphics, with each symbol representing a sound. Mrs. Coatsworth translates into Cree and dictates to her husband who transcribes the words with a special Cree typewriter loaned to them by the lands and forests department.

Mary was taught Cree and French by Roman Catholic missionaries when she attended school in Fort Albany as a child. She later moved to Cochrane and worked in an English-speaking household.

She met Richard Coatsworth, a Toronto auditor, at Moose Factory and came to Toronto in 1960. They were married in 1962 in the Mormon Temple in Mesa, Ariz.

A year ago the department decided that some announcements of interest to Indians should be translated into their language and called Mrs. Coatsworth who by this time was fluent in English as well as Cree.

75 Friends Honor Couple

CENTENARY —On Wednesday evening about 75 friends of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Wells (nee Eileen Hancock) met in the church hall to honor them on their recent marriage.

Eileen has grown up at Centenary, attended public school here and secondary school in Bellleville, and recently graduated in home economics from MacDonald College in Guelph. She has always been active in church work, helping in the choir both as soloist and organist, also has been a Sunday school teacher. Gilbert, better known to his friends as Gib is well known among the young people. He is a member of College Hill United Church.

Mr. Byron Harder acted as chairman. Mrs. Roy Nobes led in a sing-song with Mrs. Edgar Hay at the piano. Readings were given by Mrs. Percy Sutherland, Mrs. Keith Johnston, Mrs. Roy Nobes and Mrs. Byron Harder. Freddy Means and Carol Pearson each played a selection on their accordion.

Mrs. Fred Aikans read the address expressing congratulations and best wishes for their future. Miss Helen Hart, Mr. Dawson Douglas, Mr. R. Nobes and Mr. Elwin Hart presented them with an automatic toaster, mixer, wall can-opener, sandcan and three-way dispaser and the Young People presented them with a lovely relish dish.

Eileen and Gib thanked their many friends for their kindness and hoped they would come to visit them in their new home on the third concession. The ladies served refreshments.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

VACATION LINES

Taking your vacation about now? Well, the line forms to the right.

Now that the rush is on, lines are forming everywhere. If you need a hotel clerk or a travel bureau, chances are you'll have to wait your turn.

Need a passport? The lines wends and wends, sometimes right out the door, and just as your lunch hour runs out you'll probably start mentally kicking yourself for not having come earlier. Like last February, for instance.

So now you're safely out of town. Ah, but see that line ahead. It's a steady stream of traffic. Everyone else has decided to go to the shore, the mountains and into the sagebrush at the same time.

At the hotel, you sit in line to get your car parked, then you stand in line to get your room.

If your vacation lands you at the World's Fair, be prepared to waste up for several of the leading exhibits. There's a long, long line awindin' outside many of the restaurants, too. If you're smart you'll reset your "appestat" so you'll get hungry and eat at off-hours, between everyone else's meals.

NEED PATIENCE

The tourist season is well-lined up. Let's hope you have prepped for it by acquiring a large dose of patience along with your smallpox vaccination.

Actually, waiting on line doesn't have to make you bite your nails or, even worse, annoy others by edging up so everyone's jammed together, or by shoving, or trying to sneak ahead of people who have been waiting longer and more patiently than you.

Being considerate can actually make the wait seem shorter. It only gets to be a real bother when some in line are ill-mannered enough to push, roughhouse or be so boisterous it gives one a headache. Even a five-minute walk can seem like an eternity under these conditions.

Veteran line - standers manage to keep their good humor by putting their time to good use. They read, do puzzles, knit, crochet, embroider and — if a couple is together — they might even while away the time with a game of pocket checkers. Time flies when you keep occupied and keep in line.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"We think he'll make a good watchdog when he grows up."

Ann Landers

Wife Undresses in Closet, Has Deep-Seated Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My wife and I have been married 12 years. She still undresses at night in the clothes closet, with the lights turned off.

I mentioned this casually because I didn't want to make an issue of it. She became upset and said I was lecherous and something must be wrong with my mind. This was five years ago and I haven't brought it up since.

We have two children and are happily married. I have no complaints except this. If you can tell me why my wife behaves this way I will find it easier to accept. May I hear from you?—BLACK OUT.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR BLACKOUT — A woman who hides from her husband while undressing (for 12 years yet) has some badly warped ideas about her body. These ideas were undoubtedly drummed into her when she was a child.

In an effort to teach their children modesty parents sometimes give the impression that there is something nasty about the body. The children grow up ashamed and inhibited. They feel they must hide that which is evil, and darkness is best for hiding.

Judging from the little you've told me I think you are fortunate you haven't had more serious problems with your wife.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our 15-year-old son almost tore the roof off the house because I picked up one of his hi-fi records with my bare hands. He said perspiration and natural oil from human hands ruin grooves in the records and destroy the authenticity of the sound. When he puts a record on or takes it off he use a soft cloth.

This isn't all. He now tells me that soon he will have to buy another needle for the machine and that it has to be a diamond stylus because the needle we now have has been in use almost 150 hours. The new needle will cost $19.95

Have I gone nuts or have times changed that much? I'm an old relic like you, Ann, born back in 1917. Please comment. — DODDERING OLD FOOL OF 47.

DEAR DODDERING — Yup, Dad, times have changed. When we were kids anybody who owned a little ol' table model phonograph was a real gool-darn hi, and a 78c needle was the bee's knees. Today if a kid doesn't have stereo he is considered culturally deprived.

The current crop of teen-agers have a healthier respect for records than we had, and that's good. It encourages interest in fine music. So keep your lip zipped, Dad, and be glad your son isn't out stealing hub caps.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our 17-year-old daughter who graduated from high school this June has told us she is pregnant. Her steady boy friend is 20.

These two want to get married. They say they are in love and sorry they lost control of their emotions. The boy has had three years in college. He is putting himself through by working part time and wants to continue until he gets a degree so he can teach.

I say these kids are too young to get married. If they are really in love they can wait awhile. After the baby comes my daughter will be able to think more clearly. Right now she is an emotional wreck and thoroughly confused.

You have said in your column dozens of times that shotgun weddings are no good. Please say it again and I will show it to them. — CHATTANOOGA FATHER.

DEAR FATHER — What I have said is this: I am opposed to dragging a boy to the altar and forcing him to marry the girl.

Unwilling grooms make rotten husbands and worse fathers. This boy is not unwilling, however.

He wants to marry your daughter and I hope you will not try to stand in their way.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Art Objects Placed High In Household

MONTREAL (CP)—Objects d'art can be seen in high places in the Ewen Turner household.

John and Jennifer Turner, though they're the children of the director of the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, haven't yet learned to appreciate their values. And so the household's artistic works are kept out of reach.

For Brenda Turner, their mother, a "museum is a way of life." And chances are the youngsters will grow up with a better - than - average knowledge of fine arts. In the meantime the breakable works of art are kept out of reach.

In September the Turners will leave Montreal with the two blond' blue-eyed children they adopted while here. Dr. Turner has been appointed director of the Philadelphia Museum.

"It will be a real wrench leaving," says Mrs. Turner. "I would have been happy to spend my life here. The museum not only furnishes us with a livelihood. It furnishes most of our friends, and an active social life. But luckily when one is in the museum field one can keep track of friends easily.

Before her marriage Mrs. Turner worked at the Metropolitan Museum and the Museum of Modern Art in New York. When the family lived in Hartford, Conn., before coming to Montreal, she helped her husband prepare a handbook for the Wadsworth Museum and at the same time was assistant editor of publications for an insurance company.

During the first year in Montreal she edited a handbook for a museum here but since then her life has changed. John, now 2½, arrived, followed by Jennifer, now nine months, and "I'm very domestic these days," Mrs. Turner says.

After 1966: Dim Future For Canada's Uranium City

By ALLEN SACKMANN

URANIUM CITY, Sask. (CP) — There are few pessimists left in this northern Saskatchewan mining town.

Most of them departed on a wave of despair as markets for uranium began to diminish.

The optimists remain, clinging to the hope that international demand will revive before Uranium City becomes a ghost town.

Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited, one of Canada's two uranium producers, is virtually the only reason for the town existing.

Its contracts to supply ore for the United Kingdom expire in 30 months. The future beyond 1966 is dim.

The present population of 1,400 compares with 2,500 only four years ago and is far from th. 8,000 that overflowed the town during its heyday in the mid-1950s.

Evidence of the decline is seen in the business sector where 21 of the 60 businesses are boarded shut. Many are posted as the property of the Municipality of Uranium City.

"Since we started clamping down for non-payment of taxes last year, we have taken possession of about 90 buildings," says Mayor Jack Woodward.

PROPERTY PLUMMETS

In the last three years only three new businesses have been opened. Property values have plunged and real estate is next to worthless.

Malcolm Booth, manager of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, says houses 10 years old, full of furniture, can be bought for $2,000. But there are no buyers.

A cab driver, one of the optimists, says he has his eye on a four-room house he plans to buy for $400.

The bank has restricted personal loans. "We're just not interested in any long-term loans any more," says Mr. Booth.

Another of the optimists is Norm Jepperson, part owner and manager of the Uranium City Hotel.

"With a bit of luck, someone will come up with something to save the town," he says wistfully.

He's hoping that luck will include his claims a few miles away where assay reports show signs of copper. But others emphasize that the signs are only on the surface and there's no indication of what's below the mountain of red-tinted rock.

Uranium City once boasted two hotels. The Uranium City Hotel won the struggle for survival and its competitor now is a white monument to the days when hotel rooms couldn't be obtained for any money.

SERIES OF CYCLES

A. R. Allen, manager of Eldorado operations here, allows himself the luxury of some restrained optimism, too.

The history of Uranium City, he says, has been a series of three-year cycles and he hopes Eldorado can either stretch its commitments to 1970 or find new markets to tide the mine—and the town—over the lean three-year period after 1967.

The optimists view 1970 as the magical year when the industry will revive and Uranium City along with it.

But Mr. Allen says that if the mine is forced to close, Uranium City "will soon become a ghost town" because almost all the men in the community work at the mine.

The pessimists could point to Gold Fields, a nearby town that was deserted in 1939 when costs of mining the low-grade gold made production uneconomical.

But Glen Sherman, a department of northern affairs radio operator and president of the Uranium City Kiwanis Club, says that's unlikely to happen here. The government agencies and some schools would probably remain to keep a feeble pulse beating.

POTENTIAL GHOST TOWN — Uranium City, located in the northwest corner of Saskatchewan, 450 miles north of Prince Albert, virtually depends on Eldorado Mining and Refining Company for its existence. The company's contracts to supply uranium ore expire in 30 months and the effects of diminishing demands for ore can readily be seen. Many businesses are boarded up and the population has dropped to 1,500 from 8,000 in the mid-1950s. (CP Newsmap)

BOARDED BUSINESSES — Boarded-up shops show the effects of diminishing demands for uranium ore in Uranium City, Saskatchewan, once a bustling community of 8,000. Twenty-one of the towns 60 businesses are closed and only three new businesses have opened in the last three years. The town virtually depends on Eldorado Mining Company for its existence and the company's contracts expire in 30 months. (CP Photo)

TOURIST POTENTIAL

Mr. Jepperson sees some justification for Uranium City's existence in its role as a northern distribution point for tiny outposts in the Northwest Territories. He also regards it as a potential attraction to tourists.

Tourism has been touted as a secondary industry but since 1958 only three fishing lodges have been opened. About 500 American fishermen flew into the area last year and spent about $600 each. While some American money found its way into Uranium City, the effects were negligible, says Mr. Booth.

A handicap is that Uranium City is accessible only by air. Residents would like to have a road connecting it with Prince Albert, 450 miles south, but the cost of construction through brush, muskeg, rock and around lakes and rivers makes it impractical now.

In any case, the future of Uranium City, located in the northwest corner of Saskatchewan, 450 miles north of Prince Albert, virtually depends on Eldorado Mining and Refining Company for its existence. The company's contracts to supply uranium ore expire in 30 months and the effects of diminishing demands for ore can readily be seen. Many businesses are boarded up and the population has dropped to 1,500 from 8,000 in the mid-1950s. (CP Newsmap)

"When they hear news like that the stark reality hits them all of a sudden that they may be without jobs," Mr. Jepperson says.

The attitude of remaining residents but if things don't change we'll is perhaps best summed up by Ben McIntyre, editor of the weekly Uranium City North News.

"We have a lot invested here and we'll stay as long as we can. We have three years left in here and most residents but have to go."

economic inter - relations between the parts of our country. . . .

"I hope to prove that so close together are we, so interdependent — so inextricably related to each other in the activities that make for a good life with security and prosperity—that it would be utter disaster if the separation of English - speaking and French-speaking Canadians were even contemplated."

Saturday night, Mr. Diefenbaker issued his press release saying Mr. Pearson's statement was a watered down version of the original disclosure in the Commons, and enmeshed the government leader in a contradiction.

"Denying that the study has to do with separation, he hopes it that it will show separation to be disaster," Mr. Diefenbaker said.

"Despite the contradictory clarifications issued by the prime minister, one fact emerges: That the government has accepted the possibility of dividing Canada by setting up a committee to investigate that possibility.

"NOT THAT IMPORTANT"

"In effect, such a study undertaken at the federal level gives official countenance to separatism and lends to a movement not acceptable to the overwhelming majority of Canadians, including those in Quebec, an importance it does not deserve."

Mr. Diefenbaker demanded an immediate halt to the inquiry. The division of Canada by removing Quebec could not be considered an appropriate subject for study by an official committee of the federal government, he said.

"Parliament must have full information in this matter," he said. "By what authority is the committee constituted in order to investigate a proposal made by its nature is anti-constitutional?

"To whom will it report? what are the terms of reference? what is the personnel? When and by whom appointed? These are some of the things Parliament will want to know.

"Acceptance of the possibility of Canada being split cannot be contemplated... academically or otherwise. Such a study that should cease forwith."

REMAINED CALM

Mrs. Hazel Marshall, a 63-year-old widow and mother of seven who lives on her farm at Fairlight, Sask., wasn't particularly excited about winning $150,000 with the first sweepstakes ticket she has ever bought.

"I own a prosperous farm and am not desperate for money," she explained. "I'm just going to think about what to do with it for a while."

Douglas Witty, a 28-year-old researcher for Abitibi Pulp and Paper mill in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., was the only bachelor to win first-place money. Mr. Witty said he hasn't any immediate plans on how to spend the money, but would take a few days off "to think about it."

Dr. Cyril Sinnott, 41, of Charlottetown heard of his $150,000 windfall in the news room of the Charlottetown Guardian where he had spent most of the morning awaiting results of the race.

"I was rather excited," said the father of six who intends using part of his winnings to repay money he borrowed to finance his education.

HAD DOCTOR THERE

Gordon M. Andrews, 75, of Ottawa, another first-place money winner, was informed of his good luck Sunday with a doctor in attendance. His son-in-law, Herbert J. Waddington, said he feared the general excitement might aggravate Mr. Andrews' heart condition.

Mr. Waddington said the ticket was "a family ticket" bearing the nom de plume Denis O'Hagan. Arrangements were being made for Mr. Andrews to go into hospital for a rest today.

Second-place winnings of $60,000 also went to John W. Fernyhough, 74, a commissionaire at Wainwright army camp in Alberta for 13 years; Mrs. Douglas Armour, a Langley, B.C., grandmother whose husband is a mink rancher, and Fred Hume of Oshawa, a shipper with General Motors of Canada.

L. Raycroft of Lennoxville, Que., Nettie Dunn of Calgary and Raymond Maher of Montreal also won $30,000 on Sunseeker.

Hanging Flower Pots Brighten Main Street

PICTON (Staff) — Colorful hanging pots brightened Picton's Main Street this morning as part of the "beautify Picton project". The campaign to beautify the town is sponsored by the Picton Women's Institute in connection with the Department of Agriculture. Mrs. Pierce Jones, president of the organization, expressed the eagerness of its members to proceed with more projects to make the tow attractive.

Last year, the ladies held a contest which gave prizes for the most eye - catching lawns and gardens. Next in sight are plans to beautify Picton parks. These efforts will be combined to represent the Institute's contribution to the upcoming Confederation Centennial.

PISTOLS IN WRECK

TAIPEI (AP) — Two pistols have been found in the wreckage of a plane which crashed June 20 in central Formosa, carrying 37 persons to their deaths. An air line official asked Nationalist China's Legislative Yuan (Parliament) to make a thorough investigation and answer the question: "Was the pilot shot?" Wang Wen-hsu, chairman of the Civil Air Transport line, said one of the pistols was found in a followed-up book, an American military manual dealing with radar and marked "top secret." Twenty Americans, many of them servicemen and their families, were among those killed in the crash.

Lack of Knowledge Seen In Poor Dental Care

EDMONTON (CP)—Most people who fail to obtain proper dental care have the funds but lack knowledge and an appreciation of its importance, officials of the Canadian Dental Association said Sunday.

Dr. Donald Gullett of Toronto, CDA secretary, said Canadian dentists in a peak year treat 40 per cent or less of the population "but 90 per cent need dental care."

Dr. Gullett told a press conference prior to today's opening of the CDA's annual convention that the dental profession must teach people the importance of proper dental care.

In 1947 Alberta pioneered a treatment program now available to 70,000 child welfare cases, indigents, aged and blind persons. The provincial government pays 75 per cent of the cost of their dental services and the dentists pay the rest. Although the service is free, only about 35 per cent of those eligible take advantage of it.

Dr. Max Lipkind of Calgary blamed apathy, disinterest and a desire for material things rather than inability to pay accounts for the failure of many people to visit dentists.

Dr. Gullett said the association is "setting up the mechanism" to study the Hall royal commission report on health services and any comment by the CDA would be premature.

He said there have been no changes in a policy statement issued by the association before the report was released. The statement recommended dental pre-payment plans for groups rather than a national dental care insurance scheme.

The CDA's suggestions were for a scheme either to reimburse patients for the cost of dental care or to provide specified services on an established schedule of fees.

It further recommended that dentists be consulted in designing any such plan and treatment be provided by dentists in private practice with free choice by patients of dentists who are free to accept or reject them.

Under any such plan the dentists should retain responsibility for discipline within their own professional organizations.

Priority in any such scheme should be given to preventative and restorative care and it must begin by taking in only children.

"Dental manpower would be overwhelmed if an attempt were made to cope, by means of treatment alone, with the great magnitude of Canada's present dental service requirements."

NEW HOSPITAL INSURANCE PREMIUMS

More people in Ontario receive better and more costly hospital care than ever before

On the average day some 56,000 patients — enough people to populate a city — are under care in hospitals of all types in Ontario. These patients are receiving skilled treatment which has never been equalled in the history of the province. Furthermore, the cost of medically-necessary hospital care is no longer a problem for over 98% of Ontario's residents who participate in their government-sponsored hospital plan . . . the plan that ended hospital-expense worries in Ontario.

BETTER CARE—HIGHER COST

For many years the cost of hospital care has been going up steadily, not only in Ontario but in every part of Canada and in the rest of Canada. Though costly, the advanced scientific facilities and special skills available in hospitals are essential in treating the sick. The quality of necessary hospital care cannot be sacrificed. Since 1959 the average cost to the Commission for one day of patient care has increased by approximately 30%.

WHY COSTS CONTINUE TO RISE

PRICES ARE UP

Hospitals, like everyone else, are paying more for salaries and wages, food, drugs, equipment, supplies and services.

About 70¢ of every $1.00 in hospital costs is used to pay hospital employees. Hospitals, today, have more and better-paid employees to serve more patients and provide round-the-clock care.

HOSPITALS ARE USED MORE

Greater use is being made of hospitals as medical science now provides many now, costly types of treatment which require admission to hospital. These procedures require more skilled staff, more facilities, drugs and other expensive supplies. Furthermore, there is no longer a financial barrier to necessary care, so more people obtain the care they need without being burdened by the cost. Also, there are the increasing numbers of elderly citizens many of whom require prolonged treatment in hospital.

BEDS ARE AVAILABLE

In 1947, Ontario had only 17,473 active treatment, chronic and convalescent hospital beds; in 1958 there were 31,000. Today there are over 40,000 such beds available to insured persons and, by 1970, it is anticipated there will be 47,000. More beds mean more patients, more cost.

In addition, all insured patients are entitled to care, without charge, in provincial mental hospitals (23,000 beds) and tuberculosis sanatoria (1,825 beds).

ADDITIONAL OUT-PATIENT SERVICES

Beginning July 1st, 1964 the following services will be included as out-patient benefits:

1) Hospital visits to complete treatment of fractures which were originally treated on an in-patient basis. (Previously, this benefit was only for fractures originally treated on an out-patient basis within 24 hours of an accident.)

2) Radiotherapy hospital services for the treatment of cancer as approved by the Ontario Cancer Foundation and hospitals approved by the Commission for these services.

3) When prescribed by a licensed physician as a medically-necessary course of treatment and provided by hospitals approved by the Commission:

a) Use of physiotherapy and occupational therapy facilities where available. Note: Consideration is being given to approval of other physiotherapy facilities at an early date. A further announcement will be made.

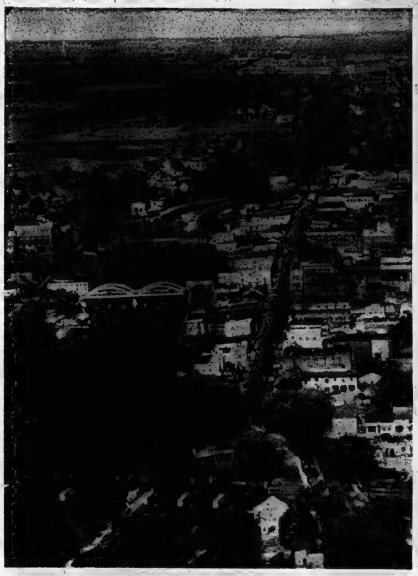
b) Speech therapy where available and provided by qualified therapists for the treatment of an organic illness or injury.

Note: The above summary is for your convenience only. For detailed information please refer to the provisions of the Provincial and Federal Acts and Regulations respecting these matters.

NEW PREMIUM RATES

(Standard Ward Care)

Because of continued rising costs, the Provincial Government has announced increased premium rates for Ontario Hospital Insurance beginning with the regular advance payment to cover the benefit month of October, 1964. In 1961, 1962 and 1963 the Provincial Government prevented, by subsidy, a rise in premiums. In those years the Government contributed $125.8 million to the plan from general revenues. It also paid an additional $157.8 million for the care of patients in mental hospitals and tuberculosis sanatoria.



Even with the higher premiums the Provincial Government must continue to subsidize the cost of hospital care, and the Federal Government's contributions to the plan will also increase as the cost rises. (The cost of the plan does not include the Government grants which are paid to assist communities build their hospitals).

49 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Road mishaps and drownings accounted for all but two of the 49 accidental deaths reported in Canada during the weekend.

A Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday local times shows 33 persons were killed in traffic accidents, 14 were drowned and two others—a man at Renfrew, Ont., and a woman at Canning, Ont. —were killed when they were struck by trains.

Ontario led the provinces with the two train deaths, 11 road mishaps and six drownings.

Quebec reported five traffic deaths and three drownings.

Manitoba had five traffic fatalities, Saskatchewan three, Alberta four and British Columbia two. Manitoba and Alberta also reported a drowning each and B.C. had two.

Nova Scotia had two road fatalities and one drowning and Prince Edward Island had one traffic death.

New Brunswick and Newfoundland reported no accidental deaths.

The survey does not include known suicides, slayings, natural or industrial deaths.

The Ontario dead:

Khrushchev Gets Ragged Cheer in Norway

OSLO (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev arrived today in Norway on the last leg of an 18-day Scandinavian tour.

A ragged cheer went up from a crowd in front of Oslo City Hall as Khrushchev, bareheaded and looking rested after his two-day visit from Sweden, stepped ashore.

Norwegian Premier Einar Gerhardsen, who says Khrushchev's five-day visit has no political significance, greeted the Soviet leader.

"I am glad your visit finally has been arranged," Gerhardsen told Khrushchev. Earlier visits were called off because of hostile news paper comment. This time the Norwegian press was friendlier, although some conservative newspapers still opposed the visit.

Gerhardsen said Norway and the Soviet Union have a common border "which never has given occasion to strife.

GLAD OF CO-OPERATION

"I am also glad about economic co-operation across the border, co-operation which I hope will help create good relationships between good neighbors."

"As we came to Denmark and Sweden, we come to your country with an open heart," the Soviet Premier said.

One elderly woman in the crowd shouted "murderer" until a policeman clamped a whitegloved hand over her mouth.

King Olav V and Crown Prince Harald returned to Oslo briefly to receive the Russian visitors at an audience and lunch today. Then the king and the crown prince planned to hurry back to Hankoe, at the mouth of Oslo Fjord, to work out the sailing crew Harald hopes to take to the Olympics.

Western Spring Horse Show At Fairgrounds Real Success

By GARRY ALEXANDER
(Staff Sportswriter)

Had the crowd been nearly as good as the events, the first annual spring horse show, presented by the Quinte Western Horse Association in connection with "Railway Week" at the Fairgrounds Saturday would have been a big success.

Excellent competition, beautiful horses and talented riders performed before a mere handful of fans in the day-long show under bright, sunny skies.

The show proper was interrupted long enough at noon for a parade down West Bridge Street to the downtown area and back.

Trophies, donated by various city and district firms and individuals, were presented to winners in each of the many events. Ribbons and other small prizes were given to second, third and fourth place finishers.

Art Cortfield, president of the Quinte Western Horse Association, was in charge of the show. Officials included Jim Harvey, of Kingston, judge; Ernie Colbourne, events announcer; liners, Bill Gault and Gerald Vance; ring steward, Ray Kerkeson, and in charge of presenting the ribbons, Steve Garvin. Numerous other horsemen of the district assisted in various ways.

The noon-day parade was headed by most of the horses and riders, in breath-taking parade dress. Ponies, ridden by youngsters of the club, proved popular with sidewalk viewers. Also taking part were Gail Chapman and Brenda Brandcombe majorettes, the ANAF Veterans and Belleville clown band, the Belleville Minor Baseball Association players, a delegation of the Picton Flyers Motorcycle Club, also in parade dress, and the Belleville and Point Anne Fire Department units. In line with the week-long celebration, the CNR was also well represented through cars and transport trucks, driven by company employees and pensioners. The timpsons and the steer and auctioneer driven bride and bridegroom floats completed the parade entries.

PICTON HORSE BEST

Class judging and various events were great in number at the Fairgrounds.

The grand champion class, open to all first and second place horses from the various classes, was won by "Hawthorne Noble Gold," ridden by Charlie Colmer, of Picton. This event wound up the show at 5.30 in the afternoon.

In earlier judging, "Young Hickory's Son," ridden by Jack Lange, won the western pleasure class.

"Mr. Kilroy," with Sandy Day atop, took the child's pleasure pony class, while Sharon Lange in the saddle, on "King's Golden Ace" to the palomino saddle horse class honors.

"Sandy's Rocket" took the junior division western pleasure class, with Sharon Lange in the saddle.

"Babie's Melody" won the child's pleasure class, ridden by Doriand.

"Kim" captured the senior English tack title, ridden by Nancy Allin.

Mrs. M. Steele's "Rideau Bend Bold Lightning" won the open yearling on halter class.

"Kenwill Little Fox" took the child's pony in harness class, handled by Robert Cook.

"Gay Music" grabbed top honors in the junior English tack class, with Joanne McNevin in charge.

Cathy Crawford's "Lady Bo Good" was good enough to win the hunter hack class.

Ten beautiful horses vied for honors in the open parade class, with C. Colmer's "Hawthorne Noble Gold" finally getting the nod over Mary Craig's "Golden Flasher".

The contests produced fine competition, especially among the enthusiastic younger club members.

In barrel racing, Joanne McNevin, aboard "King's Crystal," nosed out Jack Lange's "Mitty" by half a second. Most of these events were run against the clock.

WINS 'POLE BENDING'

Jack Lange was not to be outdone, however; riding "Mitty" to wins in the pole bending and flag events.

Sandy Day guided "Mr. Kilroy" to victory in the musical chairs contest.

Jill Tripp proved steady asaddle, capturing the egg race on "Flare".

Dorland rode "Babie's Melody", to victory in the pony race.

Two of the more exciting events were the pick-up race and the open half-mile race.

"April" won the pick-up race, with Barb Cummings riding and Nancy Allin acting as pickup, edging out "King's Crystal", ridden by Joanne McNevin who had brother Don McNevin as her pick-up.

Carol Ketcheson rode "Jimmy" to victory in the six-horse, half-mile race. "Jimmy" circled the finish in 56.4 seconds, leading all the way but chased to the wire by Peter McNevin on "Vanda" and by George Richmond on "Darling". The horses put their ears back and really put loose in this one.

Competition was so close that many of the timed events had to be settled by ride-offs.

Inspectors Will See Wage Rate Is Enforced

TORONTO (CP) — Thirty-seven Ontario labor department inspectors will spread out through the province today as minimum wage rates go into effect.

Backed up by 55 factory safety inspectors, the officials are under instructions to find and warn violators of the regulations as quickly as possible.

The minimum wage in the Toronto - Hamilton - Oshawa area is $1 an hour for both men and women. Starting today, a minimum of $1 an hour for men and 85 cents for women will be required in other industrialized areas. In rural areas the rate will be 85 cents for men and 80 cents for women.

"Early in the game we're hoping to cover as many places as we can," Thomas M. Eberlee, assistant deputy labor minister, said Sunday.

"If people are not complying, we have to find out right at the beginning. Otherwise people begin to get sloppy and think they're not going to be inspected."

Mr. Eberlee said every industrial establishment in Ontario should be inspected within three months.

St. Augustine Racial Truce Seems Possible

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) The possibility of a truce in St. Augustine's racial conflict loomed today for the first time in nearly two weeks.

A new effort to establish a biracial committee to seek peace was reported nearing success.

But it was unknown if the proposed committee of two whites and two Negroes could accomplish much immediately.

Community leaders predicted any group would have a difficult time because the middle ground has all but disappeared in the furious, month-long push for integration by Negroes and the equally determined resistance by whites.

There has been almost no communications between the two races for more than a week, following collapse of a first effort to find a settlement.

Urges Poland Promote Thaw In Cold War

WARSAW (AP) — Robert F. Kennedy called on Polish Foreign Minister Adam Rapacki that Poland has a unique opportunity to supply a bridge of understanding between the United States and the Soviet Union.

U.S. sources said Kennedy told Rapacki that Poland could play a key role in improving relations because of its membership in the Soviet bloc and the strong ties between the Polish and American peoples.

Red China War-Talk Aimed At U. S. Intended for Russia

An AP News Analysis
By WILLIAM L. RYAN

Communist China's brink-of-war talk about Southeast Asia, ostensibly aimed at the United States alone, could be intended just as much for Soviet ears.

By baiting the United States in Laos and South Viet Nam, Mao Tse-tung may also be arguing for some sort of showdown with Premier Khrushchev.

Behind Peking's belligerence, sometimes mixed with touches of prudence, Mao puts the Communist world's quarrel over peaceful tactics and Communist expansion. Peking wants the whole Communist world, including Soviet power, united in unrelenting pressure against imperialism, confident the West will crack and scorn-ful of dangers involved.

Mao has a talent for frightening the Kremlin. The Red Chinese say ever since the 1957 world Communist meeting in Moscow, Mao has deliberately fostered the notion he welcomed the prospect of war, that even 300,000,000 Chinese died in it.

There is a risk of war today from the Southeast Asian situation. The Chinese seem to have sniffed the distant smell of victory in Laos and South Viet Nam and to be hoping the Americans can be driven out either by a new neutralization conference or by a determined war of attrition.

INSURANCE WANTED

Peking does not relish the thought the attentive prospect might be delayed or even thwarted by a significant increase in the U.S. effort in the Southeast Asia. But if the increased U.S. efforts are to be countered by stepped-up Communist measures, Peking would like some insurance against accident.

Only the Russians could provide such insurance by letting their military power be an implicit shield against American escalation in the event of a U.S.-Chinese clash.

There is no insurance there now. According to Moscow hints, it is by no means certain Russian military aid automatically would help a China in trouble, despite the 1950 Soviet-Chinese mutual assistance pact. Granted Soviet statements indicate Peking in effect already has placed itself outside the Communist orbit by its behavior in the red camp's quarrel.

Nikolai Zhukov, the authoritative voice of Pravda, complains China is playing a dangerous game which can "undermine the foundations of Chinese-Soviet friendship."

Moscow shows little enthusiasm for becoming involved in a confrontation with the United States over Southeast Asia. Evidently, Moscow would prefer some sort of marking - time diplomacy which might favor long-range but safer Communist gains and provide time to deal with the Communist world troubles.

COULD MAKE THINGS HOT

If the Kremlin is successful in its efforts to convene a world Communist meeting — over Peking's objections — Mao would make things hot for Khrushchev by steaming up the Southeast Asia atmosphere. He could present world Communism with a choice of supporting a Communist cause in Asia, or turning its back on a Communist nation threatened by the imperialists.

Moscow wants neither to stand up and be counted at this time nor to risk eventual inferiority in a nuclear war. So Peking's toughness, implying a threat of Chinese hostilities with the United States, also serves the purpose of warning the Kremlin.

TV AND FREEZERS

The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission survey says combined Ontario families with television sets also have either a freezer or a two-door refrigerator - freezer combination.

COBOURG BOUND are Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Rowan with daughters Robin and baby Shelley as they wait at north station to board CN picnic special to Cobourg.

Railway Week Activities Saw Thousands of Kiddies Take First Ride on Train

A big success as far as CN was concerned, but something of a disappointment from the standpoint of downtown merchants.

That is the summation with respect to Railway Week which during the past seven days saw thousands of Belleville and district young people get their first close-up of a railroad in action.

Railway Week activities, planned to mark the lifting of CN tracks from Pinnacle Street saw thousands of kiddies take their very first train ride on steamer excursions out to Anson Junction.

Thousands more inspected the CN display of railway facilities at the north station; there was a symbolic "lifting" of the tracks on Pinnacle Street, and on Saturday and Sunday special excursions behind Engine No. 6167, the only remaining operative steamer owned by the CN, were taken to Peterborough and Cobourg.

HAD GOOD CROWDS

Saturday approximately 500 railway "buffs" and photographers, boarded the photo stop special for Peterborough and return, while on Sunday family groups, oldsters and youngsters alike boarded the special picnic train for Cobourg beach.

"We put more people through our turnstiles than there are in the city of Belleville," stated Ken Fleming, passenger sales manager for the CN Rideau Area.

There was a total of 36,191 persons passing at the CN display at the station, while 9,288 kiddies and adults took advantage of the special steam excursions.

"Railway Week really put CN before the public. We only hope we can keep some of them coming," he said.

Special entertainment events held during Railway Week saw mixed customer reaction. Thursday evening's Tommy Hunter show on the Municipal Parking lot was well attended, but Friday and Saturday night crowds at the Belleville Arena were somewhat of a disappointment.

TRIPS POPULAR

Motorcycle races Friday night at the Belleville Fairgrounds drew a good crowd, but the Saturday horseshow failed to attract the expected numbers.

But steamer excursion rides and the CN display at the north station were the big attraction.

Many of the downtown merchants reported that they saw little difference in the crowds along Front Street.

But railway officials feel the week achieved its purpose, and city officials are happy that it meant the end of railway traffic on Pinnacle Street.

Orioles Zoom Into Four-Game Lead

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Bob Allison hasn't done much broken-field running since his college football days but he's cutting quite a swath through American League pitching today.

Allison cracked a single and his 20th home run in Minnesota's Yanks' 8-3 victory over Chicago White Sox Sunday, extending a consecutive game hitting streak to 19 and hiking his batting average to .340, tops in the AL.

The 230 - pound outfielder-turned-first baseman is the hottest number in the majors, with a .464 mark since June 13, when he launched the season's second longest hit streak. Willie Mays of San Francisco Giants and Ed Bressoud of Boston have had 30-game skeins.

Allison's season average has zoomed 80 points, from .260, during the burst. He has hit seven homers and as many doubles, driven in 11 runs and scored 14 for a league-leading total of 40.

Big Bob is the league's all-star first baseman but in Minnesota he's just the No. 2 man-Killebrew.

GETS 37TH HOMER

The big guy in Harmon Killebrew—and Sunday's game was no exception. After Zoilo Versalles' leadoff homer snapped a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning, the Killer preceded Allison's shot with a two-run, 410-foot smash his 27th, into the bleachers.

Elsewhere, Baltimore Orioles extended their league lead to six games and their league lead to four with a 6-4 victory over Washington Senators while the second-place New York Yankees divided a doubleheader with Detroit Tigers, bowing in the opener 5-4 and losing the nightcap 6-3.

Boston swept a pair from Cleveland Indians 8-5 and 4-3 and Kansas City Athletics blanked Los Angeles Angels 4-0 in a single game.

On Saturday, Baltimore downed Washington 3-1, the Yankees edged the Tigers 5-4 in 10 innings, the Twins jolted Chicago 8-3 with Killebrew and Allison again supplying home runs, Cleveland whipped Boston 4-2 and Kansas City nipped Los Angeles 2-1, ending the Angels' 11-game winning streak.

Minnesota scored six runs in Sunday's seventh-inning spiritedness, including Billy Worthington, who joined the club only a few days ago, of his first victory. It [illegible] homer increased his league-leading RBI figure to 59.

RUNS UNEARNED

The Orioles sent Washington reeling to a sixth straight loss by pushing over a pair of unearned runs in the eighth. John Kennedy boosted a grounder and Don Lock reached a fly ball after Brooks Robinson's leadoff single.

Tom Tresh hit a grand slam homer in the 8th inning of the opener as the Yanks overtook the Tigers after two homers by Don Demeter and a double by Dick McAuliffe had powered Detroit to an early 5-2 lead.

Gates Brown's seventh-inning homer broke up the nightcap.

Felix Mantilla hit two homers in the Boston Cleveland opener, Frank Malzone slugged a pair in the second game and Dick Radatz came out of the bullpen twice to save Red Sox victories.

Two unearned runs and Diego Segui's five hit pitching helped the Athletics stymie the Angels. After Lenny Green dropped a fly ball in the first inning, Manny Jimenez doubled a run home and Bill Bryan followed with a triple. Nelson Mathews homered for the Athletics.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Death, Dame Fortune, Lady Luck and the record books deemed strangely-assorted racing silks at the Raceway harness meet here Saturday night.

A clear star-studded June sky looked down on a track that was surprisingly hard and fairly fast, produced the best racing seen here in years and set the stage for a rare sequence of events.

Little known at the time by the record crowd of upwards of seven hundred racing fans, Death rode with Mr. Ray Mitchell when the veteran owner - trainer - breeder-driver of Brighton, suddenly toppled from the sulky and fell heavily to the track in the sixth race.

Mr. Mitchell was rushed to hospital but it was reported, was dead on arrival. It is believed he was a victim of a heart seizure.

On the other side of the picture, Mrs. Anna Young of 415 Dundas Street went home with a face full of smile and a purse full of money.

She picked Magic Millie and Double Star to finish in that order in the CNR feature pari-mutuel heat and cashed in her tickets for the $432.70 quinella.

"Actually it was the returns from a rather heavy investment," Mrs. Young told this reporter. "After all I had seen $60.00 disappear in earlier races."

And a mountie, I was informed, lived up to the famous slogan: "They always get their man". But this was a different angle.

An unidentified bettor had a ticket on "Can't Deny It" in the first heat of the CNE feature. The horse won and paid $24.80. But when the bettor went to the pari-mutuels to cash in, he discovered he had lost his ticket.

A few minutes later the mountie approached him and said, "Is this yours?" It was $24.80 worth of winning ticket.

The cocoon of bitterness, controversy and argument that earlier this year threatened to eliminate harness racing from the summer sports calendar, has produced a butterfly of success that heralds a record season.

The freckles of discontent and jealousy have merged into a pattern of co-operation. President Ron Isaacs and his board of governing directors, have "married" new ideas to standard odes, with dua respect to departmental regulations, and the results are highly encouraging to say the least.

An early prediction that the city's new "regime" of harness-racing would fall to attract horsemen has been proven a fallacy.

Up to this point the three previous meets brought out some 39 entries for the four two-heat races. Saturday night a ninth heat for "youngsters" was added with an overall entry of thirty-four horses.

Talking with a veteran horseman on shedrow Saturday night, I was told, "this is the way it should be. The purses are better, the racing is better, the modus operandi is better and the pari-mutuel arrangements could be better."

He waved a hand at the crowd milling before the pari-mutuel windows. "People come here to wager — and therein lies part of the success of racing. But under existing conditions here, it perhaps takes too long to accept and pay off wagers."

A Raceway official agreed. "We realize that," he said, "and we have suggestions in mind. . . . And we are not forgetful of the fact that some bettors would like a five-dollar window in the pari-mutuels."

He hinted that if the current success of the meets increase to the point where they will attract 1,000 or more fans, it might be possible to construct a larger pari-mutuel building with the necessary additional windows.

With co-operation taking over from controversy, it seems harness-racing here is well on its way to a record season. Saturday night saw the biggest crowd in three years, and indications point to increases in the future. The harness racing public is no different to that of other sports. Give it what it wants — and the turnstiles will be busy.

Minor Baseball Results

Park Dale Ratepayers gained revenge for their lone defeat of the season by downing Barriage Landscapers 10-8 in a Bantam league baseball game played at Park Dale Saturday.

This was the only game of the day, the Tyke and Peewee fixtures being postponed until later dates.

Terry McTaggart hurled four-hit ball on the Park Dale mound. He bressed third strikes past 13 batters, walking one and hitting another. John Noakes was his battery mate.

Steven Ling was the starter and loser, Howard Wark coming in for two innings before Ling came back to finish up. They gave up only six hits and struck out 11 but issued nine base-on-balls. Brooks Windsor was the catcher.

Larry Moore batted a triple and single and Ted Shaw had a pair of base knocks to pace the Park Dale hitters. J. Noakes and Kevin Allen also hit safely.

The Howe boys, Bernie and Paul, each clouted a home run for Barriages. The only other hits were singles by MacKinnon and H. Wark.

Palmer's Putter Wins For Lema

CLEVELAND (AP) — Arnold Palmer will be more careful in the future about leading clubs to competitors.

About six weeks ago Tony Lema broke his putter and big-hearted Arnie lent him one.

Sunday, in a great come-from-behind effort, and in an extra-hole sudden-death playoff, Tony used the borrowed club to beat Palmer out of the $20,000 top prize in the $100,000 Cleveland Open Golf Tournament. Palmer settled for second place and $12,000.

Arnie and Jack Nicklaus, at the end of 54 holes, were deadlocked at 11-under-par 202 and three strokes ahead of the field. It looked like a dream duel between the two top money-winners.

Nicklaus fell out of it on the first hole of the final round, dropping two strokes to Palmer's birdie, and never came close to catching up.

But Lema, waving Arnie's putter like a magic wand, sank putts of 15, 15, eight, five and 18 feet for five straight birdies to end the final nine tied with Palmer. He birdied No. 14 with a 40-footer and got down in two strokes from 45 feet for another on No. 18.

He was one ahead coming to 18, where he stuck his approach six feet from the hole. He was shooting for a course - record 67 if he could sink it.

But the putt rolled eight inches past the cup. He was careful about it—but the eight-incher also stayed out.

Palmer parred in to tie, and almost won it when his putt hit the back of the cup on 18 and stayed out. They finished at 276, 14 under par for the Highland Park layout.

Lema birdied the first extra hole with a 15-footer, giving him the verdict and reversing last year's decision in the same tournament when Palmer beat Of to 70 in a playoff.

Since borrowing the putter, Lema has won three of four tournaments for a total of more than $49,000 for his June efforts. He's now four ahead this year and no one else has more than two.

Rally Defeats Little Britain

Joyces Clinch It In Eighth

Belleville Joyce Realty used a two-run eighth inning to wrap up a 5-3 Eastern Ontario Senior Baseball League win over Little Britain on the latter's home diamond Saturday night.

Little Britain took an early 4-0 lead with single markers in each of the first four frames. Little Britain gang picked up one in the fifth and a pair in the seventh to make it close. Then came the final Joyce pair and it was all over but the shouting.

Little Britain pays a return call on the Joyce squad here tonight in an 8.30 fixture at the Fairgrounds. Belleville will be bidding for win number seven in eight starts.

Bill Bickford, ace of the Joyce pitching staff, chalked up the win Saturday night with a routing nine-hit effort. Out losers bunched six of their safeties in the middle frames but Latchford retired the final eight men in a row to preserve his victory. He struck out 13 batters and walked three.

Ron Jewell tolled the distance in defeat, racked for an even dozen Belleville hits. He slipped 11 on third strikes and issued two free passes.

Hunter slammed a triple and rode home on Weston's single, all with two out, for the first Joyce run. McGrimmon singled and circled the sacks on an error and Moon's ground out in the second.

A walk, Follwell's two-base hit and Hunter's ground out made it 3-2. Consecutive singles by McGrimmon, Moon and Vickbon got Latchford his 4-0 working margin.

A double play cut short a Little Britain threat in the second but the homesters put together Davison's single, R. Jenkin's fly ball and another hit by D. McMullen to snap the shutout in the fifth.

R. Jenkin's double, two infield errors, a walk and S. Jenkin's base knock made at 4-3 in the seventh.

Follwell got the hickory working smoothly in the eighth, scoring a pair via McGrimmon's triple, an error, Moon's single, another miscue and Soule's two-base hit.

Cliff "Sonny" McGrimmon stroked a triple and two singles while Pete Weston rapped three one-baggers to accounts for half of the Realty hit total.

Bob Moon chipped in a pair of singles; Moe Hunter a triple; Larry Soule and Duffy Follwell a double apiece and John McKibbon a single.

Ron Jewell was the only loser with nine hits, both singles: Ray Jenkin and Wally McMullen contributed a double each, Don McMullen, John Goard, Stu Jenkin, Jack Hallet and Morley Davison split the other base knocks.

Belleville: Soule cf, Follwell 2b, Hunter ss, Weston c, Brailey 1b, McGrimmon 2b, Moon rf, McKibbon lf, Latchford p, Leclerc lf.

Little Britain: R. Jenkin 2b, D. McMullen ss, Goard 2b, W. McMullen c, F. Jenkin lf, Jewell p, Hallett 1b, Davison rf, Brown cf, McTaggart cf.

Brawl Ends Soccer Game

TORONTO (CP) — Police were called Sunday to break up a brawl involving players and spectators at a Toronto and District Soccer League game.

The flare - up started when George Cottle, 21, a player with Queen's Park was kicked in the chest by a Varese player. Later players and spectators chased Mario Diano, 26, secretary of Varese, across the field and attacked him.

Jets Take 3 From Leafs, Suns Lose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It looked like a golden opportunity for Toronto Maple Leafs to pick up some ground in the International League pennant race over the weekend.

Leafs went into the weekend trailing Jacksonville Suns by one game and three game in Columbus where the Jets had lost 11 straight in their own park.

But the Jets ended their tailspin with a 4-3, 3-1 sweep of a doubleheader Sunday after downing the Leafs 4-2 Saturday.

Fortunately for the Leafs, Rochester Red Wings took both ends of their twin bill against the Suns Sunday, 5-3 and 3-1 after losing a 4-1 decision Saturday.

Syracuse Chiefs dumped Atlanta Crackers twice Sunday, 12-3 and 8-4 after dropping 9-2 Saturday, and Buffalo Bisons split with Richmond Virginians, winning the nightcap 2-1 after Richmond blasted Buffalo 11-3 in the opener. Richmond won Saturday's game 4-1.

JOHNSON RUNS WILD

The Jets used three sacrifice flies and three doubles apiece to win the opener for Frank Bork, then unleashed Ken Johnson in the second game. Johnson had three hits, stole four bases and scored two runs, including one on a wild pitch. Johnny Powers also contributed a two - run homer to the Columbus cause.

Woman Wins $442. Quinella

Harness Meet Sets Records

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

Hard-driving horses, bananabunched at the wire, called for four photo-finish proofs at a record Raceway harness meet here Saturday night.

Only three heats of the nine-race program saw "daylight" between the winner and the place and show horses.

Under perfect weather conditions, a record crowd of nearly 700 race enthusiasts, saw the best racing held here in some time.

A well-cushioned track, hard but not fast greeted a record thirty-four horse field that necessitated the extra one-heat dash.

Tragedy marked but did not mar the meet when Mr. Roy Mitchell of Brighton succumbed to a heart seizure while driving his horse "Daisy Mitch" in the sixth race.

The greater majority of the crowd did not learn of the fatality until the meet was concluded.

Pari-mutuel wagering was heavy. The handle of $8,220 was an all-time record. Mrs. Anna Young of Dundas Street was the only holder of the quinella ticket pocketed $442.70.

Several held tickets on "Can't Deny It" winner of the first heat of the CNE Special, purse $175 and $25 added, who paid $34.80, $15.70 and $9.90.

"Magic Mint" won the second heat and coupled with "Double Star" who finished second paid off the quinella. "Can't Deny It" finished a poor eighth.

"Mountain Way" and "Frosty Magic" staged thrilling duels in the dash and mile heats of the fifth race.

Don Heath driving "Mountain Way" won the dash with "Frosty Magic" close behind. The second horse splendidly driven by Shirley Fiset caught "Mountain Way" in the stretch in the mile and nosed the roan speedster by a neck in a whirlwind driving finish.

"Direct Dillard" was the only two-heat winner taking the first dash by three lengths from Atomic Seths and snatching the mile from a photo finish from Bomb B and three other horses.

"Terrific Pick" pushed a nose in front of four other horses in a photo-finish second-race dash but finished third behind "Betty Chief" and "Georgina" in the mile race.

It was in the mile heat of this race that racing fans witnessed the strange sight of a driverless horse crossing the finish line. This was Ron Mitchell's "Daisy Mitch," which finished second in the race dash.

In the one-dash race for colts, an added feature Don Kenn's "Moonlight Dolly" came from behind to win over Reta Herrington's "Danny Sy" and Ken Weeks' "Jacken." All three horses had the lead at one time but the winner took over in the stretch to win by two lengths.

The daily double of "Terrible Pick" in the second and Direct Dillard in the third heats paid $14.70.

The fastest time of the night, 2.14, was paced by "Frosty Magic" in the mile heat of the fourth race.

Top prices were paid by Can't Deny It, $34.80, $15.70 and $9.90 in the fourth heat; Magic Millie, $27.20, $16.90, $5.70 in the eighth heat; Betty Chief $11.70 to win in the sixth heat.

The Tracks

NEW YORK (CP) — Dandy K., a 4-to-1 shot, upset heavily favored Roman Brother in a stretch drive Saturday to win the $115,000 Chicagoan by three lengths at Chicago's Arlington Park.

Dandy K., a three-year-old chestnut colt, came from out of the pack as Roman Brother captured the lead in the turn for home.

Under urging by jockey Don Brumfield, Dandy K. raced neck-and-neck with the 4-to-5 favorite before gradually opening up a gap which was expanded at the wire.

Close Sire was third in the field of 11.

The winner returned $11, $4.60 and $2.80. Time for the 1¼ miles was 1:48.

Roman Brother paid $2.60 and $2.20. Cap Sire was $2 to show.

At Inglewood, Calif., Close By, coming on strong at the finish, beat out the favored Real Good Deal by a head to take the $37,250 Celsema handicap at Hollywood Park.

GURNEY WINS

ROUEN, France (AP) — Dan Gurney of Costa Mesa, Calif., driving a Climax powered Brabham, won the 231.7 - mile Grand Prix of France automobile race Sunday.

Roy Mitchell Stricken In Harness Race

Roy M. Mitchell of Brighton, veteran horseman of the "sulky" tracks, died in harness here Saturday night.

Mr. Mitchell, it was stated, suffered a heart seizure while driving his "Daisy Mitch" in the sixth race at the Belleville Raceway meet.

Rounding the turn into the home stretch, Mr. Mitchell suddenly toppled from his sulky and fell on the track. Other horses swept past him or over him to the wire.

A Toronto physician, said to be a Dr. Schumacher, rushed from his seat in the stands, and attended the stricken driver.

Mr. Mitchell was rushed to hospital by the La Salle Ambulance with the doctor in attendance but the victim was dead on arrival. A post-mortem was held Sunday morning.

Mr. Mitchell suffered a severe cut on the head, but this is attributed to the fall from the sulky.

Don Heath, driving "Irish Lane Lassie," said he was right behind the Mitchell sulky when the driver suddenly fell to the track.

An eye witness on the far side of the track said that "I noticed the horse Daisy Mitch acting strangely as she rounded the far turn, as if she was not under driver control."

Raceway officials exonerated all drivers in the race from any blame in the fatality. "There is no evidence that any of them had any part. It was an act of God," one said.

Mr. Mitchell was a well-known breeder-trainer-owner-driver who has been associated with harness horses for many years. His horses, with himself, were familiar sights on many tracks of the district. He was in his middle-fifties.

TWO RECORDS SET

MOSCOW (AP)—Yuri Vlasov, Russian weightlifter, set a world record Sunday as he won the European championship in the heavyweight class with a total lift of 1,240.1 pounds. One other world record was broken and one tied in the four-day meet. Middleweight Viktor Kurentsov won with a total of 961 pounds.

Pitchers Named Thursday
National All-Stars Selected

CINCINNATI (A) — Manager Walt Alston of the Los Angeles Dodgers followed custom Saturday and named all of the second choices in player balloting to help fill out the National League roster for the annual All-Star baseball game.

In addition to the second choices, Alston picked catcher Smokey Burgess of Pittsburgh and outfielder Johnny Callison of Philadelphia.

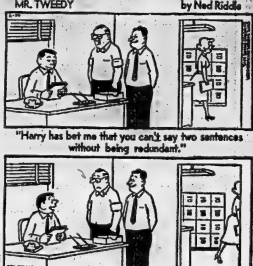
Pitchers for both teams will be announced Thursday.

Those who finished second in the player balloting and who were named by Alston to the all-star squad included:

Catcher Johnny Edwards of Cincinnati, first baseman Bill White of St. Louis, second baseman Bill Mazeroski of Pittsburgh, third baseman Ron Santo of Chicago, shortstop Leo Cardenas of Cincinnati, leftfielder Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh, centrefielder Curt Flood of St. Louis and rightfielder Hank Aaron of Milwaukee.

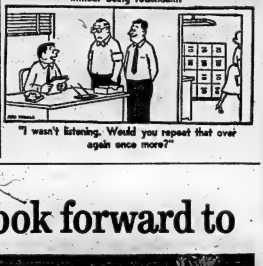
STARTERS ELECTED

Starters in the game were selected by vote of the players and each must play at least the first 3 innings unless injured or ill.



They are catcher Joe Torre of Milwaukee, first baseman Orlando Cepeda of San Francisco, second baseman Ron Hunt of New York, third baseman Ken Boyer of St. Louis, shortstop Dick Groat of St. Louis, leftfielder Billy Williams of Chicago, centrefielder Willie Mays of San Francisco and rightfielder Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh.

Alston's Dodgers and Houston Colts still are without a representative.



Alston will have to take from his pitchers to give the Dodgers a required player but that doesn't figure to be hard for him to do, with Sandy Koufax around. Dick Farrell of the Colts pitching staff is a likely choice from his team.

This year's All-Star game will be played July 7 in New York.

Nick Weslock Takes Ontario Open

Panasiuk Second

By JERRY GLADMAN

TORONTO (CP) — The advance billing for the Ontario Open golf championship promised a free ticket to the World Open tournament at Detroit for the top three finishers. But the way things worked out, the Detroit trip went to three fellows who tied for fourth and sixth.

This caused no particular grief to Nick Weslock, the 47-year-old Toronto amateur who won the $2,000 Ontario classic for the fifth time Saturday. As defending Canadian Amateur champion, Weslock already had his ticket to the World Open.

But Bob Panasiuk, a 29-year-old Windsor professional who finished second, and Gary Fawcett, who took third place on his home Islington course, were less happy about the outcome.

Panasiuk was passed over because he isn't a member of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association which processed the World Open entries. Fawcett, 23, didn't file his entry in time.

When the eligibility problems were solved by the CPGA, it announced that the successful applicants were Frank Whibley of Kitchener, who tied for fourth place with fellow - townsman Gary Cowan, an amateur, and Moe Norman and Alvie Thompson of Toronto, who tied for sixth with John Kindred of Peterborough, another amateur.

NOT CLASS A

"I'd give back the $1,100 (first prize money for the top pro in the Ontario Open) just to play in the World," Panasiuk said bitterly. "They wouldn't let me in because our club doesn't have a Class A pro."

The evergreen Weslock fired an eight-under-par 208 over the 54 holes to win the Ontario crown by three strokes over Panasiuk, missing the Islington course record by only one stroke.

The veteran amateur opened the tournament by trimming seven strokes off the par-72 course with a 65 to take the first-round lead. High winds and tricky greens took their toll in the second round Friday and he dropped back to second place with a 72.

However, he covered the final 18 holes in one under par, going out in 34 and returning on the more difficult back nine with 37, scoring birdies on the first, sixth, seventh and 11th holes.

GAME 'IN HAND'

"I don't figure I had any trouble on the final round," he said later. "I had my game well in hand at all times."

Panasiuk carded a 71, the same score needed by Norman to take the title last year. The Windsor pro's round scores were 70-70-71, including four birdies on the final 18 holes.

Fawcett, assistant pro at the Islington club who surprised the experts by taking the lead after the second round, faded to a 77 on the final day when he three-putted three greens. His third place 213 earned him $800 for his first major prize money since coming here from Vancouver this season.

Gary Cowan of Kitchener, current world amateur champion, and Whibley tied for fourth with 214. Cowan had a 70 while Whibley, who tied with Fawcett for second place in the opening round, carded a disappointing 75.

GOT FAT 75

Norman, who moved from 12th place after the first 18 holes to a two-way deadlock for fourth with Panasiuk Friday, saw his chances go down the drain when he shot a 75 Saturday.

Moe tied with three others for sixth place with 215. The others were Thompson, Phil Brownlee of Toronto and Johnny Kindred of Peterborough. Thompson, Brownlee and Kindred each fired 72 on the final round.

Whibley earned $600 while Norman, Thompson, Kindred and Brownlee got $356.

The four low amateurs on he tournament — Weslock Cowan and Bruce Brewer and Ken Thorpe, both of Toronto—now advance to the qualifying round of the Ontario Amateur here July 22 to decide the four berths for Ontario's 1964 Willingdon Cup team.

Slip Past Phillies Into Lead

Giants Sweep Four-Game Dodger Series

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Thanks to Bill O'Dell, a pitcher with a pain in his neck Los Angeles Dodgers continue to echo all over when they look at the National League standings. O'Dell, sidelined most of the season with the neck ailment, put the crimp on a ninth-inning Dodger rally Sunday and preserved a 1-0 San Francisco victory that boosted the Giants into the league lead and dumped the world champion Dodgers into ninth place.

GIANTS SWEEP SERIES

It looked great to Dark, whose Giants swept the four game series from Los Angeles and rode the great of nine victories in 10 games right past Philadelphia Phillies and into first place.

The Phillies dropped to second by a disastrous 8-2 nightcap loss to St. Louis Cardinals after Chris Short turned a five-hit shutout winning the opener 5-0.

Elsewhere in the NL Milwaukee Braves moved two from New York Mets 7-6 and 9-0, Cincinnati Reds sealed a five-game Pittsburgh winning streak with a double victory over the Pirates, 6-2 and 6-5, and Chicago and Houston split, the Cubs winning the first game 10-2 and the Colts taking the nightcap 4-1 in 10 innings.

The Giants pounded the Dodgers 9-1 Saturday while the Cardinals clobbered the Phillies 8-4, Chicago shaded Houston 2-1, Milwaukee out-slugged the Mets 9-6 and Pittsburgh downed the Reds 4-2.

The Giant run Sunday came in the eighth after singles by Harvey Kuenn and Willie Mays and an intentional walk to Duke Snider loaded the bases.

Cepeda cracked a Drysdale pitch deep to right field and Howard made a spectacular catch saving an extra base hit. But Jesus Alou, running for Kuenn, scored after the catch.

ERRORS HURT PHILLIES

The Phillies made six errors in the second game and the Cards unleashed a 14-hit attack, four of them by Bill White. Short overcame three more Philadelphia errors for his first-game victory. The hapless fielding gave Philadelphia 14 errors in three games.

The Braves scored six runs in the first inning against Met rookie Darrell Sutherland and then held off a late New York rally for their first-game victory. In the second game, Rico Carty and Hank Aaron ripped three - run homers and Tony Cloninger fired a six-hitter.

Pete Rose stroked three straight singles to pace Cincinnati's first-game victory. The Reds' second baseman had a string of seven straight hits broken when reliever Roy Face fanned him in the fifth inning.

The Reds completed the sweep exploding for five runs in the third inning and then holding off a late Pirate surge paced by homers by Willie Stargell and Jim Pagliaroni.

Chicago got home run power from Ernie Banks, Billy Cowan and Dick Bertell to make Bob Buhl's ninth victory easy against the Colts in the opener.

John Bateman and Walt Bond hit homers for Houston. Ron Santo tied up the nightcap with a two-run homer in the ninth but the Colts won it with three runs in the 10th, two of them on Bond's second homer of the day.

Turkey Threatens Cyprus Invasion

Only One More Chance To Settle Issue Peacefully

Greece Must Accept UN Plans for Negotiations

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

LONDON (AP) — Turkey has threatened anew to invade Cyprus unless Greece accepts United Nations proposals for negotiations to settle the strife between the Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots.

Turkish Premier Ismet Inonu told the British government Monday that UN Mediator Sakari Tuomioja of Finland may have only one more chance to settle the dispute by peaceful means.

Inonu told a press conference that Turkey considers it still has the right to intervene militarily in Cyprus despite the presence of the UN peace force on the Mediterranean island.

"There is no contradiction between the provision which would deny Turkey the right of intervention during the presence of United Nations troops in the island," he said.

"This possibility of intervention is not something we desire . . . but it could arise when the deterioration of the situation became inescapable."

Inonu said the next few days would show if Greece was prepared to accept diplomatic proposals to negotiate the issue.

PROPOSAL EXPECTED

Turkish diplomats said Tuomioja is expected to propose that they make a fresh attempt to reach a settlement in separate negotiations with the Greek and Turkish governments.

"If these negotiations should fail, we do not see how we could avoid the Ankara government exercising our treaty right to intervene in the island," a high Turkish source said.

"We have prepared to send our troops into Cyprus on four different occasions since 1958 and the latest occasion was on June 5."

Only the intervention of the United States stopped us from invading, but the Americans now realize, and understand that we have told the Greek government so, they will not be able to re

10 Drowned In Manila Typhoon

MANILA (AP) — Typhoon Winnie paralyzed this Philippine city of 2,000,000 today. At least ten persons were reported drowned and scores more injured.

The storm's winds of up to 95 miles an hour tore through populous central Luzon island before dawn, destroyed thousands of shanty homes and left Manila without power, light, communications, newspapers, and public transportation.

Unofficial reports said seven persons were drowned in swirling flood waters in the Manila area. The commander of the Philippine Air Force counted 3 others dead and damage in the province.

Rains continued but winds had subsided late this morning as Winnie moved over the South China Sea toward the south China mainland.

EYE CROSSES CITY

The weather woman said the eye of the storm passed directly over Manila. The winds tore off roofing, knocked down wood and brick walls and uprooted huge trees.

Hundreds of cars and buses were stalled in flooded streets. Thousands of residents were stranded. Many areas were short of water because pumps could not operate.

Telephone polls were knocked down and news services blacked out. Radio stations were silenced when their transmitting towers were blown down.

Fifteen small yachts were reported sunk in the Manila Yacht Club's harbor. Three ocean-going ships were driven perilously close to famed Dewey Boulevard.

Canada's 97th Birthday Expected To Be Honored in Quiet Manner

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Annual celebrations marking Canada's birthday will go on as usual under the cloud of tragedy today, but, with no extended holiday, there will be less partying than usual.

Most families are expected to stay at home for the one-day midweek holiday although sports events, military parades and various festivals are planned in all provinces.

The shortened holiday will cut down on highway traffic and reduce the accidental death toll.

During last year's three-day holiday 172 persons died accidentally, the highest death toll on record for any Dominion Day celebration or extended holiday weekend in Canada.

Of that total 85 were traffic fatalities. This year the Canadian Highway Safety Council is predicting a traffic toll of 12 deaths and 30 injury accidents.

In the last one-day Dominion Day holiday—in 1963—a total of 12 persons died accidentally, two in traffic mishaps.

Ottawa is planning a changing of the guard ceremony on Parliament Hill followed by parades, a carillon recital and folk music from the 10 provinces.

Sports will highlight provincial festivities. The 80th annual Dominion Day regatta is slated for Long Pond on Centennial Park while a swimming and diving meet and an international track meet will be held in suburban East York, in North York, township and Toronto have planned a physical fitness jamboree.

Prime Minister Lester Pearson is scheduled to address the eighth congress of Canadian Ukrainians, a Catholic organizations at Winnipeg.

Generally sunny weather is predicted across the nation with a few widely scattered showers predicted on both coasts.

Today's Chuckle

Man to his next-door neighbor: "I'm thinking of becoming a bigamist. There's too much grass in this yard for one wife to cut."

THE WEATHER

Synoptic: Cooler air is expected in advance across Northern Ontario today preceded by scattered thundershowers. It will likely move into Southern Ontario tonight. Wednesday will be decidedly cooler throughout Northern Ontario and not quite so warm in the south.

Integration Leaders Charged With Contributing to Delinquency

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — The racial controversy in St. Augustine took a new turn when a juvenile counselor charged Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and other leaders of the integration movement with contributing to the delinquency of minors.

Warrants signed by Fred Brinkhoff Monday named King; Dr. R. B. Hapling, a Negro dentist; Rev. John Gibson, and J. S. Jackson.

The four were charged with using minors who were wards of the juvenile court in integration marches through the city.

The integrationists claimed progress in their battle against race discrimination Monday when the state put into effect new and tougher measures to control violence.

For the first time in the month-long series of demonstrations, officers pushed aside angry white segregationist to allow integrationists freedom to demonstrate.

The integrationists — a few whites among them—romped in the surf at St. Augustine Beach, protected by more than 200 officers.

Officers stood shoulder to shoulder in city square Monday night by erecting a protective corridor for integrationists engaged in the customary night march to the old slave market.

As usual, there was a shouting, taunting crowd of whites waiting in the square, but no violence. Previously, officers stood by until trouble started.

State Attorney Dan Warren announced that in the future persons arrested for attacking officers would be charged with a felony under criminal intor-

Revise Program For July

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—The government Monday revised its parliamentary program for July, submitting fresh ideas to opposition House leaders for overnight study.

A postponement of the controversial flag debate appeared to be a key bargaining point in the new plan to push towards a summer recess starting at the end of July.

Late Monday night, as the Commons adjourned, it was announced that the flag issue would be the first item of business today. There were reports, however, that all parties had agreed to spend only three days on the flag subject, then turn to other items.

The cabinet held an unusual Monday morning meeting to go over a fresh list of legislative priorities drafted by Prime Minister Pearson.

Justice Minister Favreau, the government House leader, then submitted the plan to opposition house leaders. The meeting brought Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) and Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) together at such a gathering for the first time in two months.

At the meeting it was agreed to meet again today. This march,

Robert Kennedy Tells Pole JFK Not Victim of Red Plot

WARSAW (AP) — Robert F. Kennedy says that his brother, the assassinated president, was not the victim of a conspiracy or of communism.

The U.S. attorney-general told a Polish cosmetician in Krakow Monday night "there is no question" that Lee Harvey Oswald killed president Kennedy and "did it on his own and by himself."

Khieronym Kubiak, 25-year-old head of the Polish student union, asked Kennedy for his version of his brother's assassination in Dallas, Tex., last Nov. 22.

Kennedy replied that Oswald was a "misfit in society" and Oswald's professed belief in communism did not prompt him to murder the president.

"Monday in my opinion did not motivate his act," Kennedy said. "It was the single act of

Castro's Sister Flees, Charges Betrayal

CP from AP-Reuters

MEXICO CITY — Fidel Castro's sister Juanita has defected, charging that the Cuban prime minister betrayed his revolution and sold out Cuba to the Russians.

She compared the Castro government with Nazi Germany, saying that terrorism, religious persecution and espionage were the rule.

"The people of Cuba are nailed to a cross of torment imposed by international communism," Juanita Castro Ruz said Monday night in an emotion-charged statement to Mexican television commentator Gallardo Lermo Vela.

With tears in her eyes and a breaking voice, the 41-year-old woman read a six - page denouncement of the Cuban regime headed by her brothers Fidel and Raul.

Miss Castro, one of seven Castro brothers and sisters, refused to say how she came to Mexico from Cuba. She arrived in Mexico aboard a Cuban Airlines plane that arrived Monday. Her sister Lina lives in Mexico City since her marriage three years ago to a Mexican engineer.

Miss Castro said she had sought to bar her brother's revolution against dictator Fulgencio Batista by collecting money, arms and medicine both in Cuba and abroad. After his victory she dedicated herself to building schools and hospitals, she said, but she soon realized Castro had abandoned the ideals of his revolution and "we were being deceived."

She said there are now 75,000 political prisoners in Cuba and the island is "an enormous prison surrounded by water."

"Many of the Cuban people lack food, clothing and other essentials and wonder what happened to $62,000,000 in medicines which Castro received in exchange for prisoners captured in the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion."

Miss Castro said she had helped others "escape from the inferno of today's Cuba," adding Castro's secret police are "comparable to the worst elements of Hitler's Gestapo."

Castro's regime, she continued, subjects political prisoners to inhuman treatment, directs subversive infiltration throughout Latin America and persecutes churchmen.

"I myself witnessed how my brother's militiamen opened up upon a cadjehle demonstration in which I participated," she said. "I saw the boy carrying the banner of the Virgin of Charity beaten to death by these men."

She said anti-Castro groups in Cuba are "anxious to receive help as soon as possible" but are not strong enough to bring down a government "supported by thousands of Russian troops."

She called on the Organization of American States to support "definite action" against the Castro regime.

Premier Adoula Resigns As Last Canadians Leave

Red-Backed Gizenga Will Be Freed Shortly

CP from Reuters-AP

LEOPOLDVILLE — President Joseph Kasavubu today announced that he has accepted the resignation of the government of Prime Minister Cyrille Adoula.

The mandate of Adoula's cabinet officially expired today, the fourth anniversary of the Congo's independence.

But Kasavubu asked the government to stay in office until a new constitution, now before the country in a two-week referendum, has been approved, as it is expected to be.

There was widespread expectation that the new government would be headed by Moise Tshombe, the secessionist president of Katanga province whose defiance of Adoula's government was ended by the UN Congo force early in 1963.

Tshombe has returned from self-imposed exile in Europe last week and embarked on a reconciliation campaign to bring together the still turbulent African country's feuding politicians.

UN OPERATION ENDS

The announcement of Adoula's resignation coincided with the departure of the last UN troops—Canadians and Nigerians—ending the United Nations military operation in the Congo.

An RCAF transport took off with 38 members of a Canadian Army signal unit. A few minutes later a chartered DC-4 left with 85 men of the Nigerian Army's 144 Battalion.

Last man aboard was the UN's last commander, Maj.-Gen. Aguiyi-Ironsi of Nigeria, ending the 19½ million military operation that began only two months after independence from Belgium June 30, 1960, brought anarchy and chaos to The Congo.

The Canadian signallers were handed poinsettia blooms as they mounted the ramp for the first

Kingston Member Sworn In

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Edgai John Benson, 41-year-old Kingston, Ont., chartered accountant and professor of commerce, was sworn in Monday as minister of national revenue in the federal cabinet.

Succeeding the late John R. Garland, the Liberal MP for Kingston took the oaths of a privy councillor and of his new portfolio in Governor - General Vanier's study at Rideau Hall attended by Prime Minister Pearson.

Mr. Pearson said no other cabinet changes are contemplated. "I think we're all set now for a while," the prime minister said.

Soon after the swearing-in ceremony, the new minister took his seat at the treasury benches in the Commons and Mr. Pearson announced that Larry Pennell (L—West Halidmand) would succeed Mr. Benson as parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Gordon.

Mr. Benson's appointment was roundly applauded by all groups in the Commons and spokesmen for the opposition parties praised his work as parliamentary secretary to Mr. Gordon. He piloted the budget resolutions and bills through the Commons this year after Mr. Gordon made the budget speech.

HE EXPLAINED

After his appointment, Mr. Benson told interviewers he was pleased with the revenue portfolio because as a chartered accountant "it's sat on the other side of the table for some 10 years." He had also learned a

Mint Making Money at Rapid Rate to Keep up With Demand

OTTAWA (CP)—They're making money in the toilets and showers at the Royal Canadian Mint.

"That's how tightly the mint is squeezed between its ability to produce and what is wanted in coins in Canada.

To solve this problem, the mint has a proposal before the government to spend money to make money. It wants more space, equipment and manpower to meet the fantastically high demands for coinage from Canada's commerce and its coin collectors.

Day and night, the mint is in full production—melting, rolling, punching, striking, counting, weighing and counting an annual output of 400,000,000 coins.

To do this, the mint is literally bursting at the seams in its old stone quarters on the banks of the Ottawa River with a fight of Parliament Hill.

Space has become so precious, they've put offices on the mezzanine and equipment in the washrooms to keep pace with the crying demand for coins—from freshly - struck silver dollars to one-cent pieces.

Reporters taken on a tour of the mint Monday watched workmen pouring molten gold into bars. To the workers in the refinery, said refinery foreman Ed Shortly shadows, the bars were just so much metal.

But to the newspaper men, as they lovingly fondled a 35-pound bar of gleaming gold, it was $15,000 in one hunk.

The sounds and smell of the biggest gold refinery in North America wafted through the office of N.A. Parker, master of the mint, as he explained the economics of making money.

From Jan. 1 the mint had produced 273,418,765 pieces of coinage—silver dollars, 50-cent coins, quarters, dimes, nickels and pennies.

Forty per cent more than in the corresponding period of 1963.

Largest demand is from coin collectors — people so avidly interested — mint-fresh coins they're willing to pay $3 for $1.91 worth of coins.

These coins are handled with cotton gloves and quickly sealed in plastic envelopes so they are as fresh as a newly-laid egg.

So far this year, the demand for coin sets has jumped 144 per cent to 1,500,733. And the push for separate silver dollars has soared 313 per cent to 1,190,654. Last year, it took 367 tons of silver, 1,068 tons of copper, 220 tons of nickel and 20 tons of aluminum to make the year's issue of coinage.

As coins, the metal is gobbled up by parking meters, vending machines, piggy banks, pockets and purses.

And more and more of it is going into coin collections — absolutely treated, boarded and treasured, but generally unspent in ordinary business.

Demand for coins is so great, other countries have even asked the Canadian mint to make their coins for them — even Cuba.

The mint turned down, reluctantly.

"We'd love to get into that business," says mint master Parker. "There's good money in

Stop-Goldwater Movement Aided by Return of Lodge

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The stop - Goldwater movement in the Republican party may have succeeded in its high purpose with the dramatic return to the United States of Henry Cabot Lodge to warm his fellow Republicans they cannot risk the nomination of an impulsive, impractical man.

Throwing his full support behind trailing Pennsylvania Governor William Scranton, the former ambassador to Saigon says he will get on the telephone and call as many influential party officials as possible—former president Eisenhower.

He will do this on behalf of Scranton because at this late date he could not embark on a national speech - making campaign.

Despite the dramatic flair of Lodge, close associate of Richard M. Nixon who was beaten by the late president John Kennedy in 1960, the question being asked by some political analysts is whether the moderates have been hit by a disease known as "too little and too late."

MANY QUESTIONS ASKED

If Lodge felt the political situation so critical, why did he wait so long before returning to the national scene to do battle against the Arizona archconservative who has pulled the ballad of the possibility of defoliating Vietnamese jungles with small atom bombs?

Why did Scranton himself wait so long before announcing his candidature for president?

And why is the kingmaker of them all, former president Dwight D. Eisenhower, so reluctant to come out in full armor against the Goldwater forces?

The evidence is that the moderates are relatively weak and isolated from the hard core of the new Republican party: Geographically, the old guard is split. The old international spirit of the Republicans of the northeastern states is no longer acceptable to the deeply nationalistic spirit of the south and west.

Undoubtedly Lodge's outspoken criticism of Goldwater will damage some of the remaining bridges. National polls suggest that if the rank-and-file Republicans had their way, they would support Scranton for the presidency, not Goldwater.

DELEGATES DECIDE

But delegate votes—not rank and-file street views — count. Goldwater is an old campaigner who knows the ropes. Surveys indicate he has amassed sufficient delegate support to capture the nomination on the first ballot at San Francisco, despite Scranton's conviction that Goldwater can be stopped.

It is questionable whether Lodge alone can turn the tide. His own national prominence still requires answers to his role in the Diem overthrow and murder of Ngo Dinh Diem and his brother in South Viet Nam last year. It has not yet been publicly determined what responsibility rests with Lodge in the failure of the Vietnamese to beat back the Viet Cong.

And despite the praise heaped on him by President Johnson, some Republicans are said to be wondering whether the Lodge retirement because he no longer was found effective in Saigon.

Goldwater has remained silent in the face of Lodge's initial attack. Undoubtedly, the senator is preparing his counter blows to strip some of the glamor from Lodge's big absence.

Cedar St. Widow Swindled Of $480 by Confidence Men

The telephone rang in the Cedar street home of an elderly widow the other day.

The caller introduced himself as a local bank manager-then politely asked if she had withdrawn a certain amount from her savings.

When the reply was negative, the caller then enlisted her confidential co-operation to catch a teller allegedly under suspicion.

All she had to do was simply cash a personal cheque and draw out some marked bills.

Would she co-operate?

She did.

Today the woman is short $480.

And city police are seeking two men who turned the hefty slice of a widow's savings into the easy pickings of a confidence trick.

It was the third such attempt in recent days. A previous attempt also involved a widow, and $2,400. Fortunately she became suspicious at the last moment.

ISSUES WARNING

Both incidents were the signal today for an urgent, blunt warning from Detective-Sergeant J. B. McLauchlan against a growing incidence of attempts across the community that police term the "easy-money merchants".

Not all are out-and-out thefts, like the cases of the two widows. Many even trust the borderline of legality.

All have only one ultimate object — relieving the victim of as much money as possible, by practising on their trust.

To date, it has been a fairly uneven contest, says the chief.

On one side is the operator's cupidity — on the other, the victim's naivete. The police are caught in the middle.

Many people in this area are signing up for all manner of household possessions from encyclopedias to vacuum cleaners, perfect in their fast talk," says the chief.

Sometimes they are not, when it's too late, or the case has become so technically involved it's impossible to unravel it."

He quotes one-case now under investigation in Deseronto where a householder decided to have contracted for new siding on his house. Shortly after, the contractor returned up, allegedly told him the first concern had relinquished all its operations and they were ready for a new contract for the same job.

Just afterward, the first contractor also appeared, claimed the second document was void and redrew the original contract.

Now, say police, the householder unwittingly has signed contracts valued at $4,000 for outside house siding. His residence, incidentally, is assessed at $1,600.

The incident only emphasizes, says the chief, that people are required to sign any commitment they should first check with responsible business sources in their community.

As for the Cedar Street woman, she, too, will join the "easy-money men" must be written off personally.

And there is also the likelihood it will be repeated. The latest in Belleville has a predecessor in Peterborough a few days previous.

HOW IT WORKED

In Belleville, the routine went something like this:

The alleged caller — after introducing himself as the manager of the Royal Bank — asked if she had cashed a cheque for $650. When she denied this, he queried if she had that much money currently on account.

After that had been confirmed he told her of the "suspicious" teller and requested she cash a cheque immediately for $480. A taxi — courtesy of the bank — would be sent for her.

Afterward, she should take the money home, place it in an envelope and a bank employee would call for it. The bills would then be marked and used in the bank's investigation.

For best trouble, said the voice at the other end, $500 would be deposited to her credit by the bank.

The woman agreed to the scheme and within minutes a taxi was at her door. She drew the money as directed — but there was one slight hitch on the return journey. She had to pay her taxi fare to the bank — and so decided to walk home.

When she arrived home the phone rang almost simultaneously and the voice at the other end queried why she had not taken the taxi. While engaged in the explanation, there was a knock at the front door. She left the phone down, went to the door, was met by a man who introduced himself as a bank employee, and handed over the money.

When she returned she informed her caller at the other end of the link that the transaction had been completed. That was the last she heard — or saw of her $480.

Belleville Bank of Montreal was used for a front in the second incident.

GOT SUSPICIOUS

The story line this time was the same except the caller requested a withdrawal of $3,600. This time the victim became suspicious and — instead of leaving the bank — turned her story over to bank officials.

A dash of confidence was given the conversation in which the fellow was being set up for the swindle. The caller noted: "You haven't brought your pass book down to be marked in some time, have you?"

When the woman agreed she was told to bring it along with her.

This, however, says the chief, was a shot in the dark, part of the smooth stock-in-trade line of the professional confidence man.

The latter two incidents are classified by police, however, says Chief McLauchlan. But they serve to illustrate the various forms of the typical crime when faced with planned duplicity.

Part of Tracks South of Dundas Taken Up

Now that Railway Week has come and gone, it may be some weeks before the small section of street where the tracks disappeared.

That is the area between Dundas street and the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks.

The short stretch of Pinnacle street tracks between the above two points have been taken up, as has the curved track connecting the spur line to the main CPR trackage, and city public works crewmen have done temporary asphalt patching.

City officials say track lifting along Pinnacle street in the downtown area will have to await the availability of funds for street paving.

Great Lakes Water Levels Meeting Seeks Special Study By U. S., Canadian Govts.

TORONTO (CP) — The international conference on water levels, held Monday at the invitation of the Ontario government, decided to ask the Canadian and United States governments to initiate a "special and comprehensive" study of the problem of fluctuating levels on the Great Lakes.

Officials of Ontario and Quebec and eight American states who attended the conference will ask their federal governments to direct an immediate study by the International Joint Commission, which has jurisdiction over border waters.

The 30 delegates discussed the problem of low lake levels all day behind closed doors. At the end of the day representatives of all groups spent two hours composing a six-para-graph statement saying the joint commission would be asked for help.

The conference was called because of acute concern over low water levels on the Great Lakes. It included American representatives from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

The one-day conference also indicated it will meet again at some later date to hear a report on what progress is being made on the problem.

GO TO MONTREAL

Some of those at Monday's conference — including Resources Minister Rene Levesque of Quebec, Municipal Affairs Minister J. W. Spooner of Ontario and Governor Otto Kerner of Illinois — will attend a water conference called by the Montreal port council in Montreal today.

Premier Roberts told Monday's conference he understood that the Canadian government already intended to propose that the International Joint Commission deal with the Great Lakes problem "in all its various phases."

In answer to a question later, he said that the conference was urging the government to do just this because he understood that no firm action had yet been taken and the conference's recommendations would strengthen the federal government's hand.

He also told reporters that Ontario intended to proceed with an earlier decision of its own to study the effects of water levels in Ontario, both on the Great Lakes and other waters, even if the International Joint Commission undertakes a similar task.

"We intend to study what we as a province can do to improve the situation, regardless of what else is done," he said.

A statement issued after the meeting said that both Ontario and Quebec offered to co-operate fully with the Great Lakes Commission, made up of representatives of the eight states which border on the lakes.

IT'S USEFUL

Mr. Levesque described the meeting as a "very useful get-together."

"We Canadians have learned a lot about the way they look at it in the United States," he said, "and the result is that we've all come out of it feeling that we're a common problem and should initiate some common solution."

He said the problem does not seem to be as great in Quebec as in Ontario, but that Montreal harbor was affected by upstream conditions.

Governor Kerner said he was "more than satisfied" with the meeting.

"For the first time we've all sat down together to discuss our common problems and I am sure they can be resolved for the common good."

He said he intended to see President Johnson personally about proposing a federal appropriation for a study and he hoped the Canadian government would join.

WORK TO BE DONE

He said his participation in the conference was authorized by Washington and commented that much preliminary work was still to be done. He recommended Premier Roberts for getting the work under way.

He also said more water might have to be diverted into the lakes from Canadian streams, with the costs shared by those receiving the benefits.

Mr. Levesque said it was urgent to push as hard as possible to get the International Joint Commission moving on the problems of water levels.

He suggested a U.S. Corps of Engineers long-term study of water levels which is to be made public next fall might provide a starting-point for the commission.

Governor Matthew Welsh of Indiana said there was sufficient public concern in the U.S. about water supply that there should be no problem getting support once a program was worked out. He said the action would have to be taken by the federal governments of both countries.

WANTED OUTLINE

Resources Minister J. S. Simonett of Ontario said the conference was intended to outline the problems, not deal with solutions.

He said this was why Dr. George Langford, director of the University of Toronto's Great Lakes Institute, who said Sunday that the conference was a lot of political claptrap, was not invited. He denied Dr. Langford was snubbed.

Mr. Levesque said of Dr. Langford's statement: "Perhaps the scientists don't trust politicians. But even know-nothings like politicians have to get together to learn things. To say the least, it was an unfair statement."

Temple Backed Move to Help Hong Kong Vets

On Monday, June 22, D. W. Groos, M.P. for Victoria, placed before the House of Commons the following motion:

That the standing committee on veterans affairs be empowered to consider the particular circumstances of Hong Kong veterans and to report their opinions and observations as to the special measures that could be undertaken to alleviate the disabilities resulting from the Hong Kong veterans' internment during the war.

The motion was eventually talked out. It had been supported by speakers, including, early in the debate, Robert Temple, M.P. for Hastings South, who spoke as follows:

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the motion presented by the hon. member for Victoria, B.C. (Mr. Groos). The hon. member for Athabasca (Mr. Bigg) quite correctly referred to the fact that these veterans of the Royal Rifles and the Winnipeg Grenadiers went to Hong Kong in 1941 without top level training. There is something else that should be borne in mind, Mr. Speaker and it is that the Hong Kong contingent was entirely different from mechanical transport.

LACKED TRANSPORT

The majority sailed on the "Awatea", a British naval transport, on October 26, 1941. Originally it was intended that the force be supplied with 313 motor vehicles composed of 45 motorcycles, 6 Ford cars, 36 quarter-ton trucks, 15 15-cwt trucks, 2 15-cwt. water tanks and 39 3-ton trucks, but due to administrative difficulties none of these vehicles arrived at the docks in Vancouver on the day they were due and when the Awatea had already sailed. Along with Force C was the Prince Rupert, an escort vessel, which carried four officers and 105 other ranks.

What happened then is history. All the vehicles were loaded on the Don Jose, an American freighter, which set sail on November 4, 1941, bound for Hong Kong but was re-routed to Manila and authority was subsequently given by the Canadian authorities to have these vehicles used by American troops. It may seem, Mr. Speaker, that I am digressing a little, but I think there is a lesson to be learned from this and I am happy to note that in the white paper on defence, and in the all party special committee on defence matters like this are under consideration, so that we shall have transport available for highly mobile forces in future.

CASUALTIES HEAVY

The casualties suffered by the Canadians in Hong Kong due to fighting and later maltreatment and the brutal treatment they received, were very heavy indeed. As a matter of fact, the losses from December 8, 1941 until December 26, 1941 were very heavy. At brigade headquarters five officers and 16 other ranks were either killed or died of their wounds, while in the Royal Rifles seven officers and 123 other ranks were killed or died of their wounds. Fatal casualties among the Winnipeg Grenadiers totalled 11 officers and 128 other ranks. But this is only part of the story.

Many suffered further harrowing experiences. Until 1943 they were all kept in prisoner of war camps at Hong Kong and as a result of the deplorable conditions there four more officers and 124 other ranks died. It is of interest, as was pointed out by Colonel Stacey, in his official Canadian war history, that the losses would have been much more severe except for a very ironical situation. There was an outbreak of diphtheria in the camps and the Canadian prisoners were refused medical support for their own disease. As a result of that they in turn infected some of the Japanese guards with diphtheria, and the Canadians were then taken off their heavy work details and placed in isolation. Perhaps, inadvertently, more lives were saved as a result of that outbreak than would otherwise have been the case.

In January, 1943, 1,183 other ranks together with one officer, significantly a Captain J. A. G. Reid, of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, were taken to Japan and were forced to work in various industries, chiefly mining. Again the conditions were extremely bad and this can be shown as evidenced by the fact that here 136 more men died.

DEATH RATE

I was very happy, Mr. Speaker, to hear my hon. friend from Victoria announce that the Canadian pension commission is now prepared to launch an investigation into the status of these Hong Kong veterans. I expect this investigation is designed to produce information such as the detailed investigation. I have asked for other information and I would like to refer to an article concerning this whole matter; which appeared in the Toronto daily Times of June 13, 1964. It is stated there that the death rate among these men, referring to the Hong Kong veterans is 27 per cent. I have asked for information on this point, and I imagine that there probably must be a typographical error because up to the end of 1945, 106 of the over 1,400 men who were repatriated to Canada after the war had died. This is a death rate of approximately 7.7 per cent. Certainly we are not happy about this at all and we must look into the matter further, but the figure is not 27 per cent as reported in the Victoria Times. I think this bears correcting.

There is no question in my mind that these men suffered more and for a greater length of time than the ordinary, if I may use that word, prisoner of war in other parts of the world. There is no question in my mind that they are deserving, not of special treatment but of treatment which will assure them justice.

Rev. A. Lougheed Honored After 50 Years in Ministry

TRENTON — Rev. Albert Wellington Lougheed, 84, "retired" from active ministry in 1952. Since then, Mr. Lougheed has assisted three Trenton ministers on a regular basis, supplying for holidays or in times of illness and has literally walked thousands of miles, delivering communion cards, visiting the sick etc.

Last evening, the session of Grace United Church gathered in the church parlors to pay honor to Mr. Lougheed, who June 20 marked the 50th year since entering the ministry. Present at the celebration were Rev. J. A. Payton, the minister at Grace Church; Rev. J. T. Irwin, the minister at King St. United and Brien Thrasher, the minister at North Trenton Church.

Throughout his ministry, Mr. Lougheed has deliberately chosen three and four point charges in the country, in eastern and western Canada. He was born on a farm on Manitoulin Island and he liked working in the fields in the week, walking or taking a horse and buggy between his various Sunday appointments.

Graduating from the Methodist and Presbyterian College in Winnipeg, Mr. Lougheed was in the west until 1927, when he moved to Quebec. From 1942, for seven years, Mr. Lougheed ministered at the United Church in Shannonville and went to the Lindsay Presbytery in 1949, where he stayed until his retirement.

Mr. Lougheed has four children, Mrs. Sadie Fraser of Trenton; Keith, assistant principal at the Sault Ste. Marie collegiate; Rev. Jack Lougheed of Shawinigan Falls and William, who practises law in Vancouver.

Mr. and Mrs. Lougheed who live on Dundas St. E. in Trenton, have 17 grandchildren.

Last evening, the anniversary festivities were conducted by Mr. Payton. Mr. Payton explained to those present the session meant to install a registry shelf at the front of the church to honor Mr. Lougheed. A brass plaque will attest to his long career in the ministry of the church and there will also be a guest book for visitors to the church to sign.

GM Commences Contract Talks With Union

DETROIT (AP) — New contract negotiations between the United Auto Workers union and General Motors Corporation open today in the GM building in midtown Detroit against a backdrop of statements about GM's huge and high profits.

GM said Monday that its 354,000 hourly-rated workers are "among the highest-paid industrial employees in the world."

The firm cited an average yearly wage, including overtime, of $7,500.

But UAW Vice - President Leonard Woodcock took issue. He said GM recorded "before-tax profits "of $383,000 every hour of the year" in 1963 and can well afford the union gains.

eral Motors Corporation is bragging today about the value of past economy gains," said Woodcock. "Just about every one of these gains was won by the UAW for GM workers over the tooth-and-nail opposition of the GM Corporation."

UAW President Walter P. Reuther was to open the GM session today. He also plans to be on hand when talks begin at Ford Motor Company Wednesday and at Chrysler Corporation Thursday.

Negotiations at American Motors Corporation begin July 8.

Frogman Busy Retrieving Lost Articles

TRENTON — Flying Frogman, Thomas Coon, has been busy this summer retrieving lost articles from the bottom of various bodies of water in the district. Last month, Tom went down for a 'collection' of fishing gear, but when some area men overturned their boat. Tomorrow, Tom will be at the bottom of East Lake, looking for a pair of spectacles, lost by a gentleman who wore them in swimming. It has not been established if the gentlemen will remove the glasses the better to see mermaids . . . in topless bathing suits, pet.

GENERAL RATE INCREASE

Murray Township councillmen have set the annual mill rate, and the rate is generally increased, because of the loss of assessment, by Trenton's annexation of 360 acres of township land, earlier this year, say the members of council.

Commercial rates are set at 20.7 mills; 4.7 mills up; residential rates are 18 mills, up 4.3 from last year; county rate is the same, 11.8 mills; the high school rate is up 1.1 mills to 20.4 mills, commercial and up 1 mill to 18.4 for residential. The farmland.

The mill rates will now be sent to the Department of Education for final approval, the financial responsibility of each of the 14 school sections in the township when the centralization of sections starts to take place after the first of the year.

Allowed for general assessment is $3,000 or one mill for the proposed new township building. The new building will be the township's Centennial Project, and as such is eligible for a $10,000 grant.

'Hams' Stage Annual Exercise

TRENTON—On Saturday and Sunday, Belleville and district Amateur Radio Clubs took part in the annual field day exercise held under the auspices of the American Radio Relay League. The purpose of this exercise is for amateur radio clubs in North America set up systems of radio stations, using portable equipment, and then have each field station attempt to contact as many other similar field stations as possible, usually in a 24 hour period. In this way, at least once each year, the portable link in the Amateur Radio Service may be examined with respect to its being utilized for communications in emergency situations.

Under the chairmanship of Eric Gilbert, field day chairman, approximately 20 members of the Belleville and District Amateur Radio Club took part. The site for the exercise was about due North of the Hery restaurant on Highway 401. In the 24 hour period, over 600 contacts were made with other field day stations in North America.

BRIDGE TAKES BEATING

The Trenton town bridge has been taking a bit of a beating in the past few days.

Yesterday afternoon, a dump truck, driven by Harry Stewart of Wellington, suddenly disengaged and sprang up, striking one of the girders on the bridge doing visible damage to the bridge. Damage to the truck was set at $150.

Overlooked Detail

There is no newspaper freer from chauvinism than the Christian Science Monitor. It is therefore doubly disturbing to discover that even it is cannot keep the facts straight when it comes to discussing Southeast Asia.

"The grim process of escalation is under way in the war in Southeast Asia," says the Monitor. "The Pathet Lao began a drive which coincided with the tightening of the Viet Cong noose on South Vietnam. The United States answered with jet reconnaissance planes and then with rocket fighter planes in Laos. Peking took public notice of what was happening and issued warnings. The Premier of Laos momentarily pulled back. But he then saw what the results of temporizing would be and he gave his permission again. The United States planes returned to their work. Peking growled again in print."

This is a colorful end, and, with the possible exception of the interpretation of the motives which prompted the actions of the Premier of Laos, an admirably accurate account of what has happened.

There is nothing accurate, however, about a late sentence in the same editorial: "The escalation was begun by the Communist forces."

The Christian Science Monitor has forgotten one fact. The Pathet Lao drive preceded by an important event, an event which if it did not actually cause the drive, as seems likely, certainly provided the Pathet Lao with an excuse. That was an abortive right wing coup. The uneasy truce in Laos was not broken by the left, but by the right.

The Chinese Reds would probably interpret this to mean that the first step in the escalation was ordered by the United States. This seems highly unlikely. The Laotian rightists probably acted on their own. Far from giving any reason for comfort, this ought to add to our concern. It is bad enough when escalation takes part place as the result of the deliberate policy of the big powers. At least they will have weighed all the dangers inherent in such a move. It is much worse when we have escalation forced upon us by some inconsequential faction seeking only its own limited objectives and probably blind to many of the possible consequences.

Instances of this kind are much more likely to result from the actions of groups the West supports than from factions supported by the communists. The communists have their allies under tight control. The West does not.

Not so many years ago the West all too frequently followed the adage "If you are not with us, you are against us." That has been remedied. Neutralists and the non-aligned are no longer regarded, ipso facto, as foes. But we have yet to realize the dangers inherent in regarding all who are against the communists as our friends, entitled to unswerving support.

Leaving too Soon?

They have done so to the sound of grenades tossed into polling booths, to the news of the return of such exiles as Moise Tshombe and Albert Kalonji and to reports of massacres.

To conclude that their stay had done little, if any, good would be a gross misinterpretation. Nothing that is happening in the Congo today, and nothing that is likely to happen in the immediate future, compares with the chaotic violence which was commonplace when the UN troops first entered the country, in the summer of 1960.

It is probably also true that after such a lengthy stay in the country the withdrawal of the troops, no matter when it occurred, would produce some repercussions.

Having said all this, though, one cannot help wondering whether the UN is not pulling out too early. If there were no difficulty in finishing work of this kind, and if the UN had an adequate supply of trained troops at its disposal, would U Thant not be recommending that the UN remain in the Congo for a while? With so much hard work behind it, and with some lives lost amongst the UN troops besides many others amongst the different factions inhabiting the country, it seems a shame to risk a return to the conditions of four years ago.

Equally well adapted, with poetry, to the traveller's needs, are collections of aphorisms or maxims. If they are good—and they must be very good indeed; for there is nothing more dismal than a "Great Thought" enunciated by an author who has not himself the elements of greatness—maxims make the best of all reading. They take a minute to read and provide matter upon which thought can ruminate for hours.—Aldous Huxley.

Risk Worth The Taking

Vancouver Sun

There is no cause for gloating in the declaration of Jimmy Hoffa that he is a victim of a diabolical act of slander and the filthiest jail instance which he has received. There should be relief that sticking now is probably less a deterrent who in one week brutally raped a 49-year-old grandmother and a 13-year-old girl, whom his brother later murdered.

There also are grounds for satisfaction on the part of the angered pities and public who daring to the the tightrope expression, criticized the 13 years in prison which these foul crimes originally drew.

One doesn't take the bench to task frivolously.

But the conflicting sentences imposed by a Quebec judge, the writer of a letter to the editor of the French-language daily La Presse was sentenced in March to a month in jail for "contempt of court. The newspaper was fined $1,000. The judge interpreted contempt as "any act or publication likely to prevent or weaken the administration of justice, to scorn a judge or court or to diminish their authority."

Was it the intention of the framers of the Criminal Code to reduce the public to a frightened flock of sheep, to be fined or thrown into jail if a word was misspelled in their judgment or the sentence of J. Robinette, Q. C., one of Canada's top counsel, dismissed this fascist notion in an interesting legal seminar staged by Thomson Newspapers in Toronto in March, 1963.

His opinion was that temperate criticism is regarded fair play in the courts or magistrate after he has given his decision is perfectly proper and should be done for the improvement of the administration of justice.

Our courts are part of the public domain and must be said; they operate in public and they should be criticized, and may be criticized, so long as judges or magistrates are not criticized personally and accused of dishonesty or bad faith.

Plainly there is a very fine line between fair comment and legal contempt.

While our courts preside publicly are as admirable as any in the world, their efficiency will be thin-skinned men on the bench who'll try to frighten critics into silence, and criticism of sentences always will be risky business.

But when fair comment can and does improve the administration of justice, it will remain a risk worth taking.

Blue Danube To Be Tamed

Kitchener Record

The turbulent waters of the Danube River at the Djerdap Canyon, historically known as the Iron Gate, have long been a hazard to navigation at this famous waterway.

But the exciting prospect of the near future, symptomatic in its way of the new confidence in Europe, is that this handicap will be turned into an asset through the harnessing of its hydro electric plant.

Where the river swills tower 200 feet above the water at the narrowest point will soon arise a large dam that will tame the rapids and produce 11,000-000 kilowatt hours of electricity for the joint building nations, Yugoslavia and Romania.

Soon to be submerged will be roadways built 2,000 years ago by the Romans. Tablets erected by the Emperor Trajan in the third century AD will be saved and raised above the flood waters. Special locks will increase the flow and speed the passage of ships and barges.

The dam, 3,700 feet long and 185 feet high, will be an economic asset of major proportions it a very ancient part of the civilized world. The cost of $400,000,000 will be justified borne by the two building nations. Construction time is scheduled for seven years.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

June 30th, 1944

The 150th anniversary of the landing of the Mohawks on the shore of the Bay of Quinte was observed on Sunday last. In the morning, at Christ Church, the Right Rev. Dr. Lyons, Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, confirmed thirteen young people, and in the afternoon the annual Mohawk service was held in All Saints' Church. This service was almost entirely in Mohawk language and was taken by Mr. Solomon Brant, a fluent speaker in his native tongue. An interesting part of the service was the reading of a poem written by Mrs. H. A. Brant in memory of her father, the late Joseph S. Brant and other pioneers of this locality. The inspiring poem was entitled "In the Springtime", and was effectively read by Mr. Havelock Brant of "Abbey Glen", Kingston, who also gave a resume of Mohawk history and traditions.

Fighting grey trout, that elusive denizen of Salmon Lake and neighboring waters, had a change of heart over the week-end and succumbed to the lures of a city fishing party which overnight landed a total of 27 pounds of delectable fish. The haul included beauties which tipped the scales at eight, seven and one-half, four, three and one-half pounds respectively. The Salmon Lake party included Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Keichenson, Squadron Leader and Mrs. J. H. Forester and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. O'Flynn.

After a keen and hard fought contest in which the electors in the province evinced more enthusiasm than has been seen for many years, the voters in Ontario returned Sir James Whitney and the Conservative party to power with a majority of 37 seats. The latest returns received at the office of the new house will be as follows: Conservatives 68, Liberals 29, Labor 1, Independent 1, total 111. In the City of Belleville the balloting was heavy. J. In East Hastings the returns are not complete, but they plainly indicate that Robert Grant, the Conservative candidate, is elected by a large majority. In North Hastings Robert Cooke, the Conservative candidate, was elected by a large majority over the Rev. J. P. McInnes, the Liberal-Temperance candidate. N. W. Japan Faces Family Woes

Montreal News

Parallel with the greater industrialization of the nation, the pattern of family life is changing both in the cities and in the countryside. As a consequence, wounds are being made in old problems.

Some time has passed since the plight of "day-carrying children" in the cities caught the eye. Thousands of parents whose hands are springing up everywhere in Japan. The old concept that when children came home from school their mothers would be "sure waiting for them, is changing. Family members are finding it more and more difficult to enjoy the evening meal together. In addition, where possible, family members leave messages for each other in the form of letters or tape recordings because they are rarely together.

The mother's place used to be in the home, but now, more and more women are finding jobs and working outside. The greatest reason for it is economic but this is no longer the sole reason. The husband and wife both work in order to earn more. This is partly due to the soaring of consumer prices. An even more potent reason, however, is that no matter how much money one may have, it is always less than one's wants and desires. The consumption boom has abetted this trest toward "lack of money and a feeling of poverty in the midst of an affluent society."

The problem is even more acute in agricultural communities where the menfolk often go away for lengthy periods of time. Not only are married couples unable to enjoy life together but the effect on children is unfavorable.

The problems facing the family in this area are many. Some of these problems are small but irritating. But the picture of the Japanese family a changing because of modern taste, industrialization, severance of the liging standard, and the rapid tempo of 20th Century life. Efforts must be made by individuals and the family as a unit to become attuned to these changes.

World War Just Memory

Ottawa Journal

The Governor General was speaking to some veterans the other day when he quoted these words of the British historian, Mr. A. J. P. Taylor, on the Second World War.

"Those who lived through it (the world war) is a part of their experience. One day they suddenly realize that it, like its predecessor, has passed into history."

For Canadians who haven't fully realised how quickly the years have passed since the war the Governor General offered these words:

"... on this 20th anniversary of the Normandy landings there are 7,800,000 Canadians under the age of 20. There are 9,000,000 who were not born when the war broke out. To these young Canadians, lately but our population, the experiences and lessons of even the Korean War is ill they have any impact at all — purely textbook pictures."

The Governor General is those few sentences gives about as graphic a reminder of the march of time as it is likely to be given by the "new generation" that we so often speak of, and hopefully. Similarly, too, of the responsibility borne by the "old generation" which learned the lessons of war in a way that the young must never be allowed to learn it.

But for Wolfe

Vancouver Province

But for General Wolfe, Canada would probably be, at best, another state in the Union, another star on the U.S. flag.

There would be no English-French language and school privileges to quibble over, no Montcalm, Lemoyne and his followers likely owe everything to General Wolfe and the British victory.

Roundhouses Dark, Silent

Ottawa Journal

Changes science has wrought on life in Canada lead to considerable pain in the Railway Committee. A few years ago, Mr. Donald Gordon, giving the Committee his annual accounting for the CNR, was being asked about the little people at way stations who were soon being lost because the new diesel engines did not pause for refreshment as did their steam predecessors. This year Mr. Gordon has been pounded with questions about the layoffs which will occur as the new diesel locomotives trim the size of the CNR's maintenance staff.

The member for Loudon, Mr. Irvine, was distressed about the closing down of railway shops in his city and this led to Mr. Gordon in remorseless sentences describing how the diesel unit modern train is not getting with repair shops only in Moncton, Montreal and Winnipeg.

The steam locomotive was good for only about 180 miles before passing for overhaul in a and attention while the diesel can run from Vancouver to Halifax and back with fuel stops and stops to replenish its tanks.

The MPs complain about employment lost to their districts and Mr. Gordon replies that it is expected to run an efficient railway. The industrial revolution did not end with the 19th century and the roundhouses made dark and silent are as sad and inevitable as the graveyards of high-masted sailing ships that steam pushed off the sea.

Schizophrenia Common Type of Mental Illness

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Our 21-year old daughter had a nervous breakdown and has been admitted to a clinic. She is responding well to treatment but the doctor told us she is a schizophrenic. Do you have any literature on the subject? We love her dearly, and if we were to know more about it, we might be of greater help to her when she is released. — Mrs. J. M. G.

Just leaving her is a big start toward being able to help her, but it is, as you say, important to know more about schizophrenia.

This is too complicated a subject to be encompassed in just a column or even a small booklet. It is also called "split personality," but I am still of divided opinion as to whether this is a good term. It is true, however, that in schizophrenia one part of the mind (or emotions) becomes distorted while other parts remain relatively intact. It is also true of some other mental illnesses.

Schizophrenia is a complicated form of mental illness. You should do some reading, not on schizophrenia but rather books on mental illness in general, to be able to help your daughter. But I would suggest simple little booklets on the subject because if you try to oversimplify things, you don't do any good at all.

If you happen to have, or have access to, any new books (Say Well Every Year's Out of Date published by Prentice-Hall) by Jill Emma read chapter 3 by "Prevent Mental Breakdowns."

Dear Dr. Molner: Does a golfer start under the chin? I'm 27 and am getting large under the chin. — W. P.

A golfer is a swelling of the thyroid gland, below the Adam's apple. It may be on either or both sides.

A swelling under the chin would be something else, perhaps a swollen lymph gland, which could be felt as a distinct lump. Or, pardon the expression, the "swelling" could be fat.

Noit to J. J. P.: You are correct. Vitamins are in the food category, and certainly do not constitute a medicine. They did, we'd all be mentally ill.

Nietzsche defined man as "the being with the longest memory." When we break continuity with the past, when we want to "start all over again from scratch," we are abdicating the very mark of humanity.

What history should teach is precisely where we have gone wrong. Now we have failed to learn from mistakes of the past, which experiments have proved disastrous or ineffectual, what roads seem blocked off and what seem still open to us in our quest for the good life and the good society. History should help us define the limits we cannot pass and the direction of our goals.

Perhaps more of this is being done today than in our times, but I doubt it. Most Americans still don't understand on what moral and philosophical bases our nation was founded, what it was built on, and what it repected. History is taught as being "dead" — whereas nothing in the world is more alive, more pregnant and more possibilities for greatness and for calamity. To ignore the past is to booby-trap the future.

Strictly Personal

Humans Are Distinguished By Memory

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Things may have changed for the better by now, but when I was a boy, practically no subject in school was taught as badly as history. This was a sickening of intellectual disciplines was turned into a dull memorization of facts, dates, boundaries, and wars.

I was thinking of this the other day, while rereading one of Ortega's fine essays in "History as a System." Ortega remarks the necessity of man that man is distinguished from the other primates not so much by his intelligence as by his memory.

"Every morning," he writes, "the chimpanzee and the orangutan have to face almost total oblivion of what they did through the day before, and their intellect has to work with the impoverished stock of experience. Similarly, the tiger of today is identical with that of 6,000 years ago, each one having to begin his life as a tiger from the beginning, as if none had ever existed before him."

But man, thanks to his power of memory, "accumulates his past." None of us is ever in the first man; we begin our life on a certain level of "accumulated stock." This stock, Ortega emphasizes, is our single treasure, our main one and our privilege.

Most of us, however, think of our memory but the important part of this treasure of a particular sort, that is what seems to us correct and worth preserving, but the memory of mistakes, allowing us not to repeat the same ones forever."

The real memory is the treasure of his mistakes. This is the central meaning of the study of history, and this is why

Jacques Cartier made his first landing on Canada on this day in 1534. Introduced by Francis I of France to search for a northwest passage to the Spice Islands, Cartier explored the Gulf and St. Lawrence, sailing up the rivers of Newfoundland, P.E.I and New Brunswick. he reached Gaspe, where he planted a cross to impress on the natives that the land now belonged to France. He returned to North America the following year with three ships. But it was not until 1541 that a colonial settlement scheme was organized.

little about the department of national revenue as parliamentary secretary to the finance minister.

"I would hope that we can establish a closer relationship between the two departments than we have had before, so that one won't be shot in the back or the nance is doing some things with one hand, and national revenue is cancelling them out with the other."

Mr. Benson said he would give close study to continuing this plan — now — pay — later plan introduced by Mr. Garland.

"We will try to find any ways that we can to make it a little bit easier for people to pay their taxes," he added. "Of course no one likes to pay them, but people have to pay taxes if we are going to have a government. We are not snatching what can to facilitate the payment."

During the question period, Mr. Benson was quizzed with questions from opposition MPs but answered only one of them. WONT'T HANDLE HOUSING

He reported that he would not be responsible for the housing program. This will had been handled by Mr. Garland. Mr. Pearson said housing would continue in the hands of the Postmaster - General Nicholson, who took it over after Mr. Garland's death in March.

Mr. Benson, who served in the army overseas during the Second World War in Britain, France, Holland and Germany, graduated from the Osgoode Hall Law School and was admitted to the bar in 1931.

He practised law in Toronto for a number of years and was assistant professor of commerce at Queen's from then until his first election to Parliament in 1962.

Mrs. Benson is the former Marie Lohan Van Laar of Nijmegen, Holland — and three of the four Benson children accompanied the new minister to government House.

Tributes also were paid to Mr. Pennell on his new appointment as a parliamentary secretary. The 44 - year - old lawyer and RCAF veteran has been chairman of the Commons banking and commerce committee and was acting chairman of the privileges committee this session.

Shapely Swedish Princess Weds Businessman

BORGHOLM, Sweden (AP)—King Gustaf Adolf of Sweden to day led his eldest granddaughter, Princess Margaretha to the altar in the little white Lutheran church at Gardslosa on the Isle of Oeland, off Sweden's Baltic coast.

The royal invited guests from British and Sweden watched the ceremony, where Margaretha, daughter married Britian businessman, John Ambler, 40. Millions of television viewers also saw the tall, shapely princess whisper her "Yes" at the altar.

Ambler and his best man, Christopher Schofield, waited at the altar while the bride walked up the aisle together with her grandfather. Margaretha's own father, the late Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf, died in an air crash in 1947.

Margaretha wore a full-length white satin bridal gown with long high neckline, long sleeves and a train of the same material.

The princess carried a hand bouquet of white lilie edged with 19th century Brussels lace, which once belonged to British born Queen Louise, as it was whisked up in the fresh sea breeze.

The ceremony was conducted by the primate of the Swedish Lutheran Church, Archbishop Gunnar Hultgren of Uppsala, who had also married Margaretha's sister Desiree to a Swedish landowner.

leg of their long flight to Trenton, Ont. The first stop was Elmira.

The UN ended its military role in the former Belgian colony today for lack of money. There were no parades or ceremonials to mark the departure of the UN troops.

Those on hand included the civilian chief of the UN Congo operation, Bibiane Osorio Tafall, some 30 members of the diplomatic corps and friends.

PAKISTANI STAY

The gradual UN withdrawal started three months ago. About 30 Pakistani soldiers running an ordnance depot here will stay as part of the UN's civilian operation.

With the military pullout complete, only 400 Nigerian police remain in The Congo—all in Leopoldville and mostly for training purposes—to help Congolese authorities keep order.

With the resignation of the Adoula government, Tshombe's reconciliation mission went ahead in high gear.

Tshombe conferred Monday night that Antoine Gizenga, Soviet - backed pro - Communist - supported breakaway government, will be freed soon from the island prison where he has been held for 3½ years.

With Gizenga's return, all surviving political leaders of the outset of the Congo's independence will be back in the political arena.

Gizenga claimed to be Patrice Lumumba's successor when he set up his regime in the northeast Congo after Lumumba, the Congo's first premier, was murdered in Katanga.

KALONJI BACK

Also back in the picture is Albert Kalonji, self-styled emperor of South Kasai province, who came out of exile after Tshombe promised to The Congo last week.

Kalonji said he was willing to reconcile with all leaders except Joseph Ngalmula, who was handed life in South Kasai.

Tshombe said he also has been promised support by Antoine Lohara, former vice-president of Kasai. Lubaya was sent across the Congo River from Brazzaville by anti-Communist politicians who call themselves the "National Liberation Committee" and have been trying to overthrow the Leopoldville regime of Adoula.

If Tshombe succeeds in his peace-making role, he is given a good chance to succeed Adoula whose regime was doomed by his failure to stop the spiral of tribal war and rebellion in the eastern and southwestern Congo.

PAST AND PRESENT — Rotary Club president Ronald Cass, left, turns president's gavel over to incoming president Stanley Reston at Ladies' Night Monday. Mrs. Reston, centre, watches procedure.

Stan Reston New President Rotary Club

The dining room of the Quinte Golf and Country Club, overlooking the Bay of Quinte, was filled to capacity on Monday evening when the Rotary Club of Belleville held their Annual Ladies' Night.

It is customary for the club on such occasions, the presiding president turns the presidential gavel over to the incoming president.

Following customary procedure, president Ronald Cass passed the gavel along to president-elect, Stan Reston. He was then presented with the president's pin by immediate past-president, Glen Ashley. Mr. Reston will hold this office for one year.

Past-presidents also receive a pin. Mr. Cass was presented with a past-president's pin by past-president Harry Burns.

The incoming president after receiving the gavel introduced this 1964-1965 slate of officers.

Five other service clubs in the city were represented at the meeting. They were the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, Belleville Quinte Kiwanis Club, Sor-optimist Club, Kinsmen Club, Ye Men's Club and Lions Club.

GUEST SPEAKER

Those present were then entertained by the guest speaker, Miss Isabel M. Laird, Assistant Professor of Physiotherapy at Queen's University in Kingston.

Miss Laird related some of many experiences while travelling abroad. A native of Scotland, Miss Laird came to Canada 13 years ago after spending some time in England.

One thing the speaker did not leave behind in her native land was her Scottish humor.

She related many of her experiences. Miss Laird recalled once while riding on a train after having gone into the ladies room, discovered to her dismay no handle on the inside.

When a girl guide, she added, I was ready for any emergency. I always carried a whistle around my neck. I popped on the compartment wall and troops in the adjoining compartment popped back. This didn't help so I hauled out a whistle which was around my neck and let go with the SOS in morris code. This brought the troops from both ends of the train and when they opened the door I emerged and replied "there's a handle on the inside of the door", and walked away".

RECALLS EXPERIENCE

She recalled another of her experiences when she went into a high class restaurant in Quebec. In her learned French she asked the waitress to suggest something from the day's special. She said the waitress pointed to the centre of the menu and replied "have-a-duck-madam".

"After waiting for some time a plate of haddock was brought in to me. This wasn't what I thought I had ordered at all. I was expecting duck. Had I listened carefully I would have realized what she had said.

This is what is called listening, Miss Laird added. Listening has a great deal to do with what is being said. It is possible for us not to hear things that we don't want to hear.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian H. Cameron and thanked on behalf of the club by Rotarian R. Fyffe.

Before the meeting adjourned, Miss Laird was saluted by those present on the occasion of her birthday as they sang to her, Happy Birthday.

Also celebrating birthdays were Rotarians J. Marker, S. Reston, O. Scott and W. McCormick.

Following dinner, members of the club introduced their wives as HOSTESSES. The ladies were presented with corsages.

Due to uncontrollable circumstances the evening's entertainers, the Quinte Cavaliers, were unable to attend.

Selections from Bach and Purcell were played by Miss Gordon and white gladioli were the setting for the double-ring ceremony performed by Rev. Father T. Boyle.

The bride wore a simple white gown with chapel length of Italian peau de soie, outlined from a handmade Limerick lace veil and carried a white muff, a gift of the bridegroom.

The maid of honor, Miss Doris Greenfield and the bridesmaids, Miss Marney Black and Miss Katherine McVean, all of Toronto were dressed in green peau de soie, green accessories and carried white missals.

Mr. Patrick Meany of Toronto was the groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Michael Murphy, brother of the bride and Mr. Richard Wright, Toronto.

The mother of the bride, wearing a muted blue and green silk ensemble dress and three-quarter length coat with white accessories, welcomed the 100 guests to a dinner reception held at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

The bridegroom's parents, who were unable to attend had entertained the bride and bridegroom during the Christmas holidays in Limerick, Ireland.

For the wedding trip the bride wore a black and white Irish tweed skirt and cape with a white silk blouse and black accessories.

The couple are residing in Toronto.

AN INCREASE IN SOCIAL LIFE—FORECAST FOR FALL

Exciting in the new fall collections now being shown in manufacturer's showrooms are the dinner dresses. Here we see again more of the influence of the 1930's revived for the 1960's. The dinner dress just as it used to be in prewar times, continues to be floor-length with some kind of a sleeve interest, which can be capped, elbow-length or three-quarter, or more dramatic styles, they are wrist-length.

The necklines of these dinner dresses range from wide - cut bateau type to the scooped-out, modest curve or the deeply promising deep "V" plunge. Bodices can be moulded and fitted, or cut on the split-level concept of an overbloused. Skirts are for the most part sheath slender or just gently gored. Often straight-line skirts are relieved by a sunburst pleated effect extending down from the waistline, which gives a slender look. Many of these slim skirts are slit up to midcalf or even higher to show a well-shod foot and shapely leg.

The fabrics used for dinner dresses include flat satin-backed crepes, textured and patterned wools, mat-finished satins, plushy velveta and dreamy floating chiffons. Each fabric adapts itself to a specific style. Of course, the crepes and wools look well in both straight and gored skirt patterns while the satins are best in slender skirts. The chiffons, because of their drapability, are confined to skirts which are pleated or gathered.

USE BEADS EXTENSIVELY

Beading is used extensively. Several dresses have all-over beaded bodices in toned or contrasting patterns. Many necklines and bodices are edged in intricate beaded trims. Even cut-velvet used for trim sometimes has beaded accents.

The extensive use of velvet is another hallmark of the 1930's. The Mary Queen of Scots motif in velvet was repeated often in stately gowns with scooped necklines, full skirts and three-quarter sleeves. The colors for these velvet dresses vary from deep ruby red to cranberry red to royal blue, green, gold and navy. But black was the leader in the velvets. There is no better cosmetic than black velvet. This was obvious when the stunning women who modelled these gowns looked even more handsome, as their individual turn came to wear black.

All these dinner dresses will not adapt for the more formal scene of full evening dress. They remain dinner dresses with built-in sleeves and no cute jackets or gadgets to make them two-occasion dresses. Definitely, a step in the right direction.

Beau's Odd Habits Need Pointing Out to Daughter

DEAR ANN LANDERS — You think you have heard everything? Well, listen to this:

Our lovely daughter who has had two years at Smith College is now going with a big ox who wouldn't be welcome in any school if he didn't happen to be a football player. When my husband met Benny for the first time he squeezed his hand so hard my husband had to soak his hand in a basin of hot water.

ANN LANDERS

We had Benny to dinner last week. When he looked at the cornish hen placed before him he said, "I don't eat stuff like this. Could I have a peanut butter and jelly sandwich?" I asked my daughter if he was kidding. She replied, "No, all he eats is sandwiches. Knockwurst is his favorite." With that she went to the kitchen and fixed Benny a sandwich.

What I want to know is this: When we invite the boy for dinner again, as I am sure we must, shall we have a sandwich ready, or serve him the same food everyone else gets? — NONPLUSSED.

DEAR NON — Make no special preparation for Benny. If he asks for a sandwich again, let your daughter fix him one. It may polat up to her in a dramatic way that Benny has some rather odd habits which will require special handling.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I just finished reading the letter from "Desperate Mother," the woman who felt that she had botched up her life so badly that her children would be better off if she killed herself.

I lived through such an experience when I was a child. Please print my letter in the hope that this mother will see it and change her way of thinking.

My father was a severe alcoholic. He tried to dry out several times and succeeded for as long as six months. One day, after he had fallen off the wagon and was in depths of despair, he came home and shot himself. When mother rushed upstairs she found him dead.

My father did not understand that we loved him in spite of his failures and weaknesses. There are no words to describe the feeling of utter desolation when a child realizes his love was not enough to make a parent want to go on living. This is the most devastating form of rejection.

I still grieve for my father and will to my dying day. So please, Ann, tell "Desperate Mother" to put herself in the hearts of her children before she considers doing such a terrible thing. — A FRIEND.

DEAR FRIEND — Here is your letter. I can add nothing. You expressed yourself as only a person who has lived through the experience could. Thank you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband's parents are grand people. We get along fine. Our only problem is such a minor one that I feel like a sinny complaining.

Every Sunday we have dinner at my in-law's house. After dinner we always watch a living room where everyone plugs their eyeballs into the TV. They will watch anything that moves. During the commercials they make a feeble attempt to exchange a few meaningless sentences.

After several months of boredom I decided to bring a book along. Last week my mother-in-law said, "Why can't you enjoy TV with the rest of us? Why must you set yourself apart?"

I didn't answer her because I didn't know what to say. Please tell me, is it rude to read a book if one is not interested in the TV show? — SQUARE PEG.

DEAR PEG — It is not. If you'd rather read, you should be allowed to with no needling from the widiot section.

* * *

Do you lack self-confidence . . . have trouble making friends? If so, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Be Well-Liked," enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

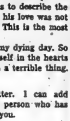
Fall, Winter Fashion Show Is Staged

BY JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

YORK (CP) — Designer Mollie Parnis provided camouflage for the older, less-than-perfectly-figured woman Monday while Anne Fogarty offered the young one with ideal contours every opportunity to show them off.

Christian Dior New York had plenty of fall fashion advice for the rich, be they young or old, and Arnold Scaasi provided some lessons in upstaging (chiefly useful to women who buys clothes to be looked at.

The showings were part of the week-long American designers series arranged by Eleanor Lambert for visiting fashion writers to preview fall and winter styles.



"For women over 21" was the euphemism used to describe a series of flattering collars on slender bubbles dresses by Miss Parnis.

One is a deep set ring collar. The cup collar turns up around the face like petals on a flower in another model. When a collar might not hide a creepy neck, there were always neatly knotted scarves properly placed.

A leotard silhouette dress, long sleeved, high necked, and tight as second skin, is Miss Fogarty.

In villent pastels ringed with fur, in printed velvets and lined jersey leotard dresses, it reached the trim models.

When not in this tightest of all sheaths, the pretty misses whirled in knifepleated skirts or silky-looking plaids. Or they sunned their tones in shaggy opossum or kit fox parkas or wrapped bulky overcoats around slim jersey dresses.

LUMBERS STUDIO BABY OF THE WEEK

It would be a great pleasure to photograph your child in our studios. The results will bring "oh's" and "ah's" from all your friends and relatives when you display your fine Portrait by Lumbers Studio Watch for the big portrait of the "Baby of the Week," every week in the window of Tots 'N Teens and see for yourself the beauty of our portraits.

Speaking Personally

By Gladys Ward

B#

This is the season of piano recitals, and even if they couldn't play a note, the sight of those little girls gaily dressed in their party frocks and little boys combed and polished beyond belief, would compensate the long-suffering parents who have probably wished during the past few weeks that they could turn their ears off and on like a radio set.

The audience is divided into three classes . . . perhaps four. There are the eager children, bobbing up and down with excitement, the apprehensive mothers, the bursting-with-pride grandparents, and the reluctant fathers who look at the 64 numbers on the program with a long sigh.

There is a rapport between teacher and pupils, because they are equally involved, and have discussed this many times. Parents are the outsiders, the critics, the judges, but happily the empathetic listeners and enthusiastic applauders.

Secretly each parent is sure she is cultivating a future Glenn Gould, but overtly she knows that even if nothing comes of his efforts as a performer he has learned an appreciation of music which will make richer his enjoyment of it all his life.

I can understand the mixed feelings of parents because I had a share in it some years ago. By the time I had listened to "A Maid Churning" 1,763¼ times I was slightly churned up myself, and my daughter had a blister on her thumb from the grace notes.

THE BOY WHO DIDN'T PASS

There it was. All the names in the paper of the ones who passed. Jubilant faces everywhere — school over — no more lessons, no more books, no more teachers' sour looks — a whole summer to fill with play or swimming or camp.

Blackboards had been erased, old jam jars full of faded peonies had been thrown out, the closing concert was over, the class picture taken.

He walks alone.

Vaguely he feels he has let his parents down. He is disturbed and unhappy. He tried. Maybe not hard enough, but he tried.

He dreads going home. His father will be awful mad, and his mother will be disappointed. His sister will say, "Bill flrown passed. Aren't you as smart as Bill Brown?"

Sure he is as smart. He can run faster, wrestle better, hit more home runs, and swim twice as far.

Then what happened? He doesn't know. Just a couple more marks on each test. He didn't know one whole question on the social studies paper because he didn't hear one word the teacher said that day. It was spring, and his thoughts were soaring as high as the clouds he was looking at out the window.

His grandfather had promised him a dollar if he passed. What did he care anyway? He was a savage kick at a pebble and sends it flying into the road. All summer long stupid voices would be saying, "Well, did you pass?"

He walks alone. Nobody likes to be a failure.

His dog comes to meet him, tail wagging. He puts his arms around the dog's neck and gives him a hug, and a tear falls on the shaggy head.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: When someone's wearing a particularly attractive dress, is it considered good taste to compliment her on her appearance? A friend once told me it was not correct to make such personal remarks in public but I can't see where it's offensive to note how well someone looks and give her ego a little boost. What do you think about this? — Mrs. K. M., Bridgeport, Conn.

Answer: It's permissible to say to a friend "How well you look," or "My, what a lovely dress," but it's usually not in good taste to make a huge fuss over another's appearance. It might make her feel conspicuous, and, if you single her out for extensive backslapping when there are several other women in the crowd, you might make the others feel you think they look dowdy by comparison.

St. Michael's Parish Circle Holds Tea

Roses are red . . . and pink, yellow and shaded hues and white as they abounded along with the gaillardia, mock oranges and lilies and gracefully arranged in crystal bowls and silver epergnes, setting the scene for the garden tea and bake sale Wednesday, sponsored by St. Michael's Parish Council of the Catholic Women's League.

The guests were welcomed by Mrs. J. B. Tempelman in whose home the tea was held and by Mrs. J. R. Rashotte, president.

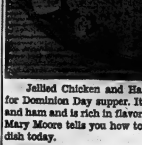
The bake table in the sun room was arrayed with confections and produced giving ample evidence of the skill and flair of the contributors. Presiding here were Mrs. J. Boyle, Mrs. S. Garvin Sr. and Mrs. J. Morrow.

The hostesses who introduced the guests in one another and accompanied them to the tea tables were Mrs. R. Barrett, Mrs. H. Lamp and Miss Stella Ford.

The garden was a gay scene of flowering shrubs and their tea tables, while linen covered. The main tea table was centred on a slightly raised sun deck and beautifully appointed in lace, with silver tea services and enhanced with a centre piece of delicate multi-colored roses in a crystal bowl arranged by Mrs. F. Domenico.

TEA POURERS

The pourers were Mrs. M. Boyd, Mrs. A. Kelly, Mrs. H. Brown and Mrs. B. Burley. Each of the tea tables' sandwich plates was graced with a pastel rose garnish.



The ladies of the group served the tasty refreshments.

The guests continued to come steadily all during the afternoon and the annual garden tea was voted a most pleasant, successful endeavor. Mrs. Rashotte thanks go to all who helped in any way.

Appreciation is also extended particularly to Mrs. F. Ross, the over-all convenor and her committee, Mesdames G. Donoghue, R. B. Collins, J. Lumsden, E. D. Tomsett and J. Menary and sincere thanks from the hostess to Mrs. J. D. Templeman who so graciously opened her home to so many guests on this occasion.

Jellied Chicken and Ham Mould would be ideal for Dominion Day supper. It calls for cooked chicken and ham and is rich in flavor and attractive to behold. Mary Moore tells you how to make this "good cook's" dish today.

Special Mould Holiday Treat

by Mary Moore

To help along the cause of cookery in this column, Eleanor has been experimenting.

She said "Mary, from Sunday I have some leftover roast chicken and from Monday's dinner I have some leftover picnic ham. Wouldn't there be plenty of girls with families like mine who would have these two meats leftover? — not quite enough of either for a meal? How would it be if I make a jellied meat loaf of these two?"

With out giving her time to draw her breath I said "Wonderful!" — and off she went home.

The following night she invited me for dinner and she served:

Dinner Menus

TUESDAY

Barbecued Pork Chops; Stuffed Baked Potatoes; Baby Limas; Tomato and Green Onion Salad; French Dressing; Canned Peaches; Oatmeal Cookies; Tea.

WEDNESDAY

(Dominion Day)

Jellied Chicken and Ham Loaf (see Tuesday); Potato Salad; Pickled Beets; Picnic Cake (see Monday); Bananas and Sweet Cherries; Coffee.

ELEANOR'S JELLIED CHICKEN AND HAM MOULD

2 packages plain gelatine
½ cup cold water
2½ cups boiling water
2 chicken bouillon cubes
2 cups ground (or finely chopped) cooked chicken meat
2 cups ground (or finely chopped) picnic shoulder (or ham)
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup very finely chopped celery
2½ tablespoons chopped parsley (or parsley flakes)
1 teaspoon grated onion
shake of pepper
3 tablespoons piccalilli (or 2 tablespoons green relish and 1 tablespoon chopped canned pimiento)
1 or 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce

In large bowl soak the gelatine for 5 minutes in cold water, then add chicken bouillon cubes and boiling water and stir to dissolve. Chill until partially congealed. Fold in all remaining ingredients. Eleanor turned her mixture into a small angel food cake pan, a legacy from her mother's kitchen, which holds 7 cups and is 6" in diameter and 3" high. But this mixture may be moulded in your standard 6½" pan which holds 6 cups. It will fill it to the brim. Chill until set.

Unmould on serving platter and garnish with border of deviled eggs or unpared thin cucumber slices. Or you may dress with a thin wedge of tomato or cucumber, radish rose. Pass mustard relish at the table.

Clip this recipe for a summer meal when you want to do some preparation a day in advance but keep it chilled and covered.

NOTE: All chicken or all ham may be used instead of chicken and ham .Or you may substitute cooked or canned cold roast port (well trimmed) for the ham.

Eleanor served potato salad and pickled beets with this jellied mould. Ideal for Dominion Day.

Successful Living

Well Adjusted Child Result Of Well Adjusted Parent

DEAR DORIS — I was the eldest of four children, and had to work very hard. I was always alone as the others were much younger. As a teen-ager I seldom took part in normal activities.

I couldn't dance because I was told I'd be a poor dancer; or play athletic games for the same reason. I guess I didn't do anything right.

Now my daughter of ten doesn't have anyone her own age to play with. She plays with certain youngsters whose families I don't care for; they do things that I was taught were wrong.

I hate to interfere as I don't want her to be lonely like I was. But she does seem to be attracted by the wrong kind of people. Wanting her to be happy and well adjusted isn't asking for too much, is it? — FOND PARENT.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR FOND PARENT — Look, Mother, she'll take her cue from you, willy nilly. If you are quiet and fearful, how will she know anything different?

The best recipe I know for a well adjusted offspring is a well adjusted parent. It's your job to learn to play; gain self-confidence and communicate it. Can't you find a single ten-year-old at your girl's school for her to bring home to dinner?

Can't you find time in your fear-ridden life to play with your daughter, read to her, laugh with her, sing a song or two? How about bringing her Daddy into this? You need some family fun.

DEAR DORIS — I am a girl of 14 and like a boy very much who just turned 16. Yesterday he asked me to go to the show with him and my parents would not let me go. My parents both know him very well and think that he is a nice boy.

I wanted to go with him ever so much. Doris, is it wrong to go to a 7:00 p.m. show with a boy whom you like very much? — HEARTBROKEN.

DEAR HEARTBROKEN — Not wrong, but not advisable at 14. Stay with group activities for a while; no solo dates.

DEAR DORIS — I cannot find enough words to thank you for the exercises you sent me. I was a few weeks ago to improve my flat bust. I also find the other exercises very helpful, especially in maintaining the muscle tone of the abdomen.

I know that in this short while the effect is only psychological but I feel more confident because I am really doing something about my bust. — GRATEFUL.

DEAR GRATEFUL — Three cheers! Keep it up every single day and it won't be too long before the effect will also be seen physically — especially if you are giving yourself a build-up diet-wise at the same time. The proper diet is included in the ten cents leaflet "Chart for Curves."

Confidential to TWO TEEN-AGERS — There is no reliable safe way. You are walking straight into trouble if you give up your own respect to indulge your boy friends.

(Teen-Agers: Things are not always what they seem. Write to Doris when human nature puzzles you.)

Here each Wednesday evening from 7 to 9 p.m. and each Saturday afternoon from 2 to 4 p.m., Kiwanians Bill Strachan and Dave Hurry will devote their time and skill to teaching young and old alike how to swim. Mr. Strachan's son David will act as lifeguard.

The lessons are free of charge; everyone is welcome.

The swimming area itself is excellent, the beach being sandy. The Learn to Swim program is conducted on a year-round basis. During the winter pupils were instructed in Mayor McFarland's indoor pool which he generously donated for use.

Scouts and Guides are expected to use this program to pass tests for required badges. Next fall Bill Strachan has a tentative plan for a swim class for handicapped people.

New Clubhouse Opened With Supper, Dance

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward Yacht Club was officially re-opened Saturday evening with a large number of guests present for the event. In attendance were Commodore Jack Hartwick acting as master of ceremonies, Norris Whitney, M.P.P., and Picton's Mayor Harvey McFarland. Over two hundred members and their invited guests enjoyed a smorgasbord supper and later dancing. The club, under renovation since early spring, is now completely modern throughout. Not only does it offer exceptional facilities to the boating tourist but it is indeed also a great asset to the town.

$2 Million Public Debt

Uranium Causes Headache

By ALLEN SACKMANN

URANIUM CITY, Sask. (CP) — Uranium gave this rugged northern community its name. Its reason for being and its biggest headache.

The headache is a capital debt of $2,300,000. Mayor Jack Woodward says the town probably couldn't pay it if Eldorado Mining and Refining Ltd. was forced to close its uranium mine.

Eldorado, which pays 75 per cent of the taxes here and employs 900 of the 1,800 residents, has uranium contracts that expire in 1966. Prospects for new contracts are grim.

Uranium City was forced into its dilemma by the rapid growth that accompanies the birth of a boom town. Roads, utilities, schools and hospitals were suddenly needed as the tiny bush settlement overnight became a town of more than 5,000.

Backed by the Saskatchewan government and Eldorado, who bought the debentures, Uranium City borrowed $2,000,000 to provide the necessary services.

In 1961 the international uranium market collapsed and the town's population fell to the present 1,200. The community then had a property assessment of more than $12,000,000. Today it's $4,000,000. More than 80 cents of every tax dollar goes toward debt retirement.

SOME DON'T PAY

Tax collection is also a problem. Residents are sometimes reluctant to pay taxes because of the town's uncertain future.

"They're in a habit of pulling out, leaving their buildings empty and their taxes unpaid," says the mayor. "Some of the back taxes are pretty old and we've started stepping on them pretty hard. If someone leaves and the taxes are more than a year old, we give them a chance to pay and then take possession."

Seizing the buildings doesn't put dollars into municipal coffers, however. Real estate is almost worthless.

The only investment being made in Uranium City is by Eldorado, spending $1,200,000 this year on new equipment to improve the quality of uranium ore extracted.

A. R. Allen, mine manager, says the investment is being made because indications are that uranium will again be in demand in the mid-1970s and then "we can offer a better product when people want it."

Mr. Allen who fears the town will die if the mine is abandoned, says the Crown corporation is continually hunting for new markets. Consideration is being given to a slowdown in operations to stretch present contracts beyond 1966. Eldorado is also investigating the cost of retaining employees during the lull that will follow.

STILL HOPEFUL

"Miners are great for hoping," says Mayor Woodward, and an example of their faith was seen last year when the $60,000 arena and curling rink burned down. It was replaced with a $100,000 structure paid for by grants from the municipality, a donation from Eldorado and public subscription. Only $2,000 is outstanding.

Eldorado has always helped with civil projects and aided its own employees. It provided $3,000 mortgages at low interest rates so they could build homes. Payments were $40 a month, a blessing during the inflationary 1950s when a one-room apartment cost $125 a month. The firm still has $2,200,000 outstanding in residential mortgages to employees.

Eldorado is the last of eight producing uranium mines in the area and has invested $42,000,000. Since starting in 1953 it has produced 18,455,992 pounds of uranium worth $235,000,000.

Last year it turned out 1,995,214 pounds, a drop of 104,000 from the previous year. Market price is about $8.03 a pound compared with more than $11 a ton in the days when ore was being shipped to the United States for after the 1960 slump, there has been little staff turnover at Eldorado, says Mr. Allen. "All those with itchy feet have left long ago."

Those still at the mine will probably stay until it closes, he says, because Eldorado pays high wages and has an incentive program for miners. A top-notch miner can earn up to $18,000 a year.

The Cyprus independence agreements of 1960 made Britain, Greece and Turkey the guarantors of the island republic's constitution and gave them the right to intervene individually to uphold the constitution.

Archbishop Makarios, the Greek-Cypriot president of Cyprus, has said he considers the constitution and its special rights for the Turkish-Cypriot minority no longer binding. Greek Premier George Papadopoulos, after conferring with President Johnson last week and presumably being informed of the Turkish threat, cabled Makarios that "a Turkish landing would mean war."

Inonu had been conferring with British leaders since Sunday after talks with Johnson. The Turkish premier told British Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home he had information that Greece has secretly raised its garrison on Cyprus far beyond the 950-man ceiling allowed by the 1960 treaties.

The Turkish premier said his government would accept only one of two solutions to the crisis: (1) A partitioned Cyprus with the Greek and Turkish parts united in a federal government, or (2) "Double enosis," a partitioned Cyprus with the Greek-Cypriot part united with Greece and the Turkish-Cypriot part united with Turkey.

The Greeks and the Greek-Cypriots have rejected partition.

A communique issued after Inonu's talks with Douglas-Home said Britain and Turkey consider the 1960 treaties are still valid.

In Washington, Turkish informants said the Johnson administration had assured Turkey no Cyprus solution humiliating to the Turks would ever be imposed.

U. Alexis, U.S. Ambassador Cyrus R. Vance outlined to President Charles de Gaulle the substance of the Washington meetings between Johnson and the Greek and Turkish premiers.

Papandreou arrived Monday in Paris to talk with de Gaulle and French officials. He can now flew to Paris today for similar talks.

Papandreou said his government wants a referendum in which the Cypriots could determine their own future. An international body could guarantee the rights of the Turkish minority, he said.

There has been considerable speculation in Europe that the slayings of Kennedy and of Oswald by Dallas cafe owner Jack Ruby were part of a conspiracy.

Aides said it was the first time the attorney-general had spoken publicly about who killed his brother.

The question came up during the second day of his visit to Poland. Before leaving the country this afternoon, Kennedy was scheduled to go to Czestochowa, spiritual centre of predominantly Roman Catholic Poland.

Although crowds everywhere gave Kennedy an enthusiastic reception, Deputy Foreign Minister Josef Winiewicz was reported to have told Kennedy Monday night that he did not understand the "strict political realities" of Poland's connections with the Soviet Union.

Informants said Winiewicz told Kennedy at a dinner given by U.S. Ambassador John M. Cabot that those connections do not rule out having close ties with others, including the U.S., but he said forgetting such "realities" could hurt the U.S.-Polish relationship.

Hydro to Build On Madawaska

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission said today work will start in about a month on a $37,000,000 generating station on the Madawaska River at Mountain Chute, about 30 miles southwest of Pembroke.

The station, scheduled for service in December, 1967, will have a capacity of 180,000 kilowatts and is designed to meet peak demands on Hydro's east system which serves southern and northeastern Ontario.

Hydro said the project will employ up to 600 men during construction and most of these will be hired locally.

ority list of pre-recess legislation.

Prime Minister Pearson told reporters Monday the flag question is on the priority list, but declined to say whether the government wants to push the issue to a vote before calling a recess.

Meanwhile, the Commons passed two housekeeping measures Monday, but marked time on a third bill to replace the chiefs of staff committee with a single defence chief.

Third reading was given to an interim supply bill to provide the government with $460,268,421 for normal expenses in July. The bill had been under debate for six days.

Later, the measure was held up in the Senate after several senators charged that the joint Senate-Commons special committee on consumer credit is guilty of scandalous waste of public funds. The committee hired an Ottawa lawyer at $250 a day to act as counsel and interview witnesses.

The Senate took the unusual step of referring the supply bill to its estimates committee for detailed study.

The Commons took less than 10 minutes just before adjourning to pass an import credit bill through three stages, including final approval.

HEARD OF FOR SENATE

This measure, also headed for the Senate, empowers the Export Credits Insurance Corporation to increase its liability to $600,000,000 from $400,000,000. The bill also widens insurance coverage by the Crown corporation and exempts it from paying income tax.

In the defence debate, Paul Martineau (PC—Pontiac-Temiscamingue) said Defence Minister Hellyer has announced plan to integrate the armed forces with much fanfare, but he doubted whether this would make the services more modern and efficient.

Mr. Martineau favored integration, but he feared that the Liberals would end up with "just as much brass" and servicemen, or more.

Gordon Churchill and Marcel Lambert, both former Conservative cabinet ministers, expressed reservations about the idea of a single supreme commander. A committee leadership is safer and enables conflicting views to be aired, they argued.

Former fisheries minister Angus MacLean said it might be better to integrate defence leaders at the cabinet level. He suggested the portfolios of defence, associate defence and defence production be merged into one to eliminate duplication.

PLASTIC BAG KILLS

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial police secretary who put a plastic bag over her head to dry her hair killed herself accidentally, police said Monday night. The first convention of the Association was held at the OSD here in 1888.

Want to Send Canadian Team To Deaf Olympics

When the Ontario Association for the Deaf held its biennial convention here over the weekend, several organizations which work co-operatively with it were represented. These included such groups as the International Catholic Deaf Association, the National Fraternal Society of the Deaf, the Ontario Mission for the Deaf and the Canadian Association for the Deaf. This year, though, a new group was added, the Federation of the Silent Sports of Canada.

Since 1924, Olympic Games for the Deaf and Mute have been held every four years under the Comite International des Sports Silencieux. Although a rich country, Canada has never been represented at these games. Now the Federation of the Silent Sports of Canada has been formed. It will seek to raise money to send a team to the next Silent Sport Olympic, which will be held in Washington, D.C., in 1965. Guy Gosselin is president of the new organization, while William H. McGovern of Scarborough, who was elected president of the Ontario Association for the Deaf at its convention here, is the representative for the central area.

The Ontario School for the Deaf here has produced many fine athletes and it is quite possible that any Canadian team selected would include athletes known to Belleville residents. Financial assistance would be much appreciated by the new organization.

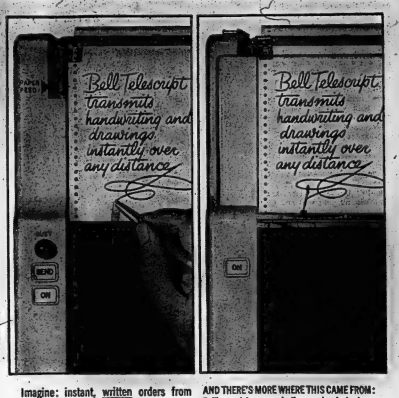
Absolved in Child's Death

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A five-man inquest jury Monday night absolved doctors and staff of Kingston General Hospital of blame in the June 7 death of Nasim Ahmed, seven-year-old Pakistani girl, 36 hours after she was struck by an automobile driven by a Kingston youth.

After more than 8½ hours of testimony, coming mainly from 13 hospital staff members, the jury found the Pakistani girl had received "the best medical and professional service" available.

Major Ha Ahmed, father of the child, insisted she had not received proper attention in the 36½ hour period before her death.



He said several doctors were in attendance at the emergency department but "they were all standing there. They were not checking her."

Mrs. Ahmed, whose letters to several newspapers touched off a controversy and caused the reopening of the case, offered no testimony. She broke down in court witness box and was ex-cured from the court room.

Pioletless Jet Fighter Kills Two Children

HAVERHILL, Mass. (AP)—A silent and pilotless jet fighter slashed into a sleeping neighborhood early today, brushing half a dozen homes and a dozen cars before exploding into a house at the end of the street, killing two children.

Todd Gifford, 10, and his sister, Pamela, 3, died when they were trapped in their mid-storey ranch house and burned to death.

Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Karl H. Gifford, escaped practically unhurt.

The pilot of the Massachusetts Air National Guard F-86, Capt. D. F. Sullivan of Boston, ejected himself from the crippled jet and parachuted into the nearby Merrimack River.

He was rescued uninjured, by a coast guard helicopter.

The crash started a three-alarm fi rietah damaged several other homes.

The plane caromed about 100 yards down the street, ripping up chunks of pavement, tearing down utility wires, bouncing into cars and brushing other homes before the fuselage buried itself in the Gifford house.

Jaycees Transform Vacant Lot Into a Beauty Spot

Starting today it's a case of heart and flowers for Belleville.

The heart of the city is about to get flowers—and then some! The result—courtesy of the Jaycees and some civic-minded citizens and businessmen—will be the transformation of a vacant lot into a beauty spot near the city's Four Corners.

It all started with a fire some years back that destroyed a business-apartment block on East Bridge Street immediately east of the city's main intersection.

After the building was gutted its shell was demolished. It has been that way ever since — a surprising vacancy in an otherwise unbroken line of business houses and one that exposed the scarred backs of adjacent old buildings to the main street public. In time also, it has become overgrown with weeds and collected odd pieces of waste in the mysterious way waste lots always do. A couple of advertising billboards were added later—but did little to enhance the scene.

Now, within two weeks, the Jaycees propose to work a change that will turn the spot into a thing of near beauty—as far as finances will permit.

PAVE WITH TILE

Plans call for paving the lot with tile, planting flower beds, surrounding them with benches and breaking the scrubby monotony of the back walls with a 14-foot trellis.

Work was expected to start today—says the project's chairman Dick Hurst.

The effort has been given an initial guarantee of completion not only from local business and private donations but also in a basic sense from two sources.

Tile is being provided by Wilson Concrete while the Belleville Horticultural Society is also supplying and planting the flower beds.

The Jaycees themselves are building the benches. "Eventually we plan to put a fountain of some sort in there," said Mr. Hurst.

However, financial help is still needed from the public for a scheme the Jaycees have initiated as a civic project.

PRODUCES STEEL

Sweden's output of crude steel reached a record 1,147,000 tons in the first quarter of this year—up 12 per cent.

Crown Fails To Prove Accused Lied

MONTREAL (CP) — Joseph Bonanno, described by the Crown as a top United States underworld figure, was acquitted Monday on 2 charges of perjury.

Judge Emile Trottier ruled the prosecution had not proved that Bonanno, 59, alias Joe Bananas, had willingly and knowingly lied in an affidavit that accompanied his application for habeas corpus.

Immediately following his acquittal, Bonanno was brought before Judge Marcel Caboury to face another perjury charge arising from a statement he made when applying for status as a landed immigrant.

The charge states he lied when he said he had no criminal record in the U.S. when, in fact, he had been convicted and fined $50 in New York in 1942 for a violation of the Minimum Wage Act.

The case was adjourned indefinitely.

Bonanno, describing himself as an "import and developer," arrived in Canada in May and applied for landed immigrant status. He was ordered deported at an immigration hearing May 27 and chose to fight the order when the first perjury charge was laid.

United Church Minister Out On Own Bond

CHATHAM (CP) — A 45-year-old United Church minister was released on $1,000 personal bail Monday after being charged on eight counts of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Rev. Russell Horsburgh was remanded to May 8 without plea after a hearing in camera before Magistrate Ivan E. Craig.

Crown Attorney Blake Ward said the case will be heard in juvenile court because of his concern for the names of the young persons involved. He said the charges did not arise from activities in the church.

C. E. Perkins, defence counsel, said the charges were to the effect that Mr. Horsburgh had knowingly and wilfully contributed to juvenile delinquency by promoting, encouraging and providing accommodation where sexual intercourse could take place.

The dates of the charges ranged from last Dec. 1 to June 1.

ORGANIZED SHOP

Mr. Horsburgh, married and with two sons, organized the Shuffle Shop in the church basement shortly after his arrival in Chatham four years ago. The club was a Friday night affair for teen-agers who had been involved with the law.

The members, about 25 boys and girls, danced by records, played billiards and conducted discussions on many subjects, including sex and teen-age dating. Mr. Horsburgh supervised the meetings.

Members of the club pledged themselves to observe a set of rules that included no smoking at the Shuffle Shop, no profanity and help in looking after church property.

The minister said the club provided relaxation from the world's tensions in a healthy atmosphere.

Before going to Chatham, Mr. Horsburgh had preached at Hamilton, Sudbury and Kitchener.

Judge Upholds Crown Appeal

FARRY SOUND, Ont. (CP)—Judge Walter Little Monday upheld an appeal by the Crown against the dismissal of a careless hunting charge against Stanley Wilson, 64, of nearby South River, and fined him $100 or one month in jail.

Magistrate F. C. Powell had previously dismissed the charge, placed in November after Joseph Simonich, of the Parry Sound area, 80 miles north of Orillia was wounded in the hand and hip while hunting.

Wilson admitted at his trial he did not see a deer, but fired twice when he saw a flash of white in the bush.

The case was the first careless hunting charge to be appealed in Ontario.

Lung Cancer Not Caused By Smoking Says Surgeon

WASHINGTON (AP) — A St. Louis surgeon who specializes in treating lung cancer testified Monday: "I do not believe that lung cancer is caused by cigarette smoking, and I do not believe smoking is responsible for any shortening of life."

The surgeon, Dr. Thomas Burford, said "so long as the cause of cancer is unknown it would seem only reasonable that to raise an alarm about cigarette smoking is unwarranted."

"We are producing a disease worse than cancer — cancerphobia," Burford said in testimony before the House of Representatives commerce committee.

The committee is considering 10 bills proposing various ways for the federal government to curtail cigarette smoking. Some bills warn, introduced after a special advisory report last January saying cigarette smoking may cause death from cancer and other diseases.

The federal trade commission, basing its decision on the report, issued a rule last week requiring cigarette labels and advertising next year to warn customers that smoking is a dangerous health hazard.

Testimony by Burford and two other witnesses, a statistician and a heart specialist, disputed the health service report.

The statistician, Alan S. Donohahoe, said the report was based on haphazard statistical methods.

Donohahoe, executive vice-president and assistant publisher of the Richmond, Va., Times - Dispatch and News Leader, testified that the report's statistical data "are internally inconsistent, lead to unreasonable implications, and we contradictory not only with other research of a competent nature, but also with other facts known to be true."

The heart specialist, Dr. Henry Russek, formerly of the U.S. public health service, said research shows that emotional stress from a person's occupation is related to coronary heart disease.

"Statistical findings linking the tobacco habit to coronary heart disease afford no proof of a causal relationship," Dr. Russek said, "since excessive smoking, like over-eating and failure to obtain adequate exercise, is often an undesirable manifestation of psychological stress."

Leader of Segregationists Wants to Keep Kids White For Next 100 Generations

By PAUL WELLS

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Holsted (Hose) Manucy, a tough, barrel-chested man wearing an old cowboy hat, commands a big, well - organized army bive in a furious fight against racial integration.

Its goal, Manucy says in his quick, slow southern drawl, is "to keep our kids white kids for the next 100 generations" in this tourist city now in the throes of daily racial violence.

Manucy's group claims 1,476 members and a better communications system than the regular law enforcement agencies. It has frequently given aid to the police and sheriff's office.

Right now it is working on its own, around the clock, in an effort to blunt the assault of St. Augustine's racial barriers by Dr. Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

"We're not responsible for the rock throwing in the square or the fighting on the beach," Manucy says. "That was done by kids who are not members. We can't control every kid."

SAVED ONE LIFE

Manucy was credited with saving a policeman's life by wrestling a gun from a white man angered because officers used tear gas to stop a white counter-demonstration.

Manucy's organization is called-the Ancient City Hunting Club. It has a clubhouse and a hunting preserve.

Recently, when federal Judge Bryan Simpson saw Manucy's name on a list of special deputies, he noted that Hoss was an ex-convict and wondered if his club wasn't a branch of the Ku Klux Klan.

"Sure, I've got a record," Manucy said. "Everybody around here knows that. It's a whisky record. I never stole anything.

"We're not tied to the Klan in any way, although I'm not knocking the Klan. It's a wonderful organization."

Last week, Manucy's organization kicked off a campaign to have white employers fire their Negro help. Some, he says, already have done so and others will follow suit.

HAVE TO GO NORTH

"A nigger can't make a living without a white man," Manucy says. "He will have to go north, where the welfare cheques are bigger.

"That's the way to win this fight without bloodshed."

Manucy and Sheriff L. O. Davis, who are close friends, are credited by many with helping to prevent violence by whites.

Manucy says he has received many threats. Bricks have been thrown through the windows of his cars. Last year, a shot was fired into a car driven by one of Manucy's sons, killing another man in the car.

But Manucy says he isn't afraid. "There's no white man scared of a nigger. That's a proven fact in St. John's County."

Communist-Backed Rebel Warriors Driven Into Jungles By Fighter-Bomber Attacks

By DENNIS REELD

BUKAVU (AP) — Congolese Army forces inched forward Monday in lukewarm pursuit of Communist-backed rebel warriors whose threat against this eastern Congo city has been shattered by fighter - bomber air attacks.

Tribal warfare and rebellion raged on in other eastern areas on the eve of a United Nations troop withdrawal from The Congo.

U.S.-made T-28 fighter-bombers drove drugged and fanatical Bufulero rebel hordes back into the jungles over the last few days after they had come close to seizing this Kivu province centre in the Rutsi Valley.

Demoralized and unenthusiastic Congolese Army forces, moved slowly down the valley toward Uvira, headquarters of the revolt against The Congo's tottering central government.

The dissidents are led by former provincial justice minister Gaston Soumialot and are pledged to the support of leftist guerrilla chief Pierre Mulele, whose own revolt has been going on for months in Kwilu province, to the west of here and closer to Leopoldville, the national capital.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carter, Sports Editor

Word has gone out to the muskie nob which headquarters in and about the Ottawa River that the Belleville "Untouchables" are on their annual prowl.

These "Elliot Nesses" of the inland deep waterways who have been declaring war on overzise muskies from Pigeon Lake to the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Rivers are Fred and Frank Atkins.

Frank is Bowl-O-Drome Bill Bateman's poppy-in-law while "Uncle" Fred who has a physical handicap has been his muskie-scouting partner for the past thirty-plus years.

One top-side, the other underside, both are flirting with eighty years of age.

Years of probing the deep water haunts of the fighting muskellunge has brought them an uncanny knowledge of where to go for what they want.

There, are no posh resorts, swank riverside or lakeshore fishing cabins for the "boys".

Every year they hit for the St. Lawrence or Ottawa to get a two-weeks' jump on the other Ontario seasons. The muskie and bass seasons opened here Saturday.

Hi-ryer and trailer, boat and motor plus camping equipment and a nice tent site near a good muskie haunt for them.

And those jacks of the muskie beanstalk feeling grounds seek out the "giants" of the breed. Anything under 16 or 17 pounds usually gets a new lease of life.

Their favorite weight is between 25 and 30 pounds and they haven't near enough fingers on their hands to record how many of these weights they have hooked.

At the moment they are safely and comfortably camped somewhere on the Ottawa. The first two days they sniffed the air, looked at the weather and decided to stay inside.

The third day was it. Just forty minutes after they had tossed their lure overboard an 18-pounder greeted them.

They boosted it some time later and their first fish of the season was on display at the Bowl-O-Drome Saturday afternoon and evening.

They have told me some whopping stories of the fighting qualities of the musky, a battling so-and-so that exhibits a bull-like ferocity when hooked.

I do not know their modus operandi but the office vice-president in charge of musky fishing says the scaled heavyweights he concealed among aquatic plants at the side of channels or off shelved rocks in medium-stop lakes. After spawning they withdraw to deeper water to feed.

In July you'll find them in the depths and near shoals out from shallow bays. Its midsummer habits are something of a mystery. At this time they are rarely caught on a full stomach probably because they only feed at certain times.

August, I'm told, is the prime musky month. Trolling in deep water out from a weedy shore or off the rocky shelves will get you something.

This, it is stated, is because Madame Muskie decides it's time for a change of address and she drags the old man out on a house-hunting tour. They usually swim in pairs. So, if you hook one, don't rush away. The spouse is somewhere in the vicinity.

During the latter part of September when the leaves are turning, the muskies frequent shallow water one or two feet deep alongside logs or stumps and among lily pads and rushes.

Muscoka Bay, the Meira, Sioco Lake and the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Rivers, if you want to travel that far, are some of the best muskie-producing grounds in the area. In 1963I an American and his wife caught two muskies weighing 64 and 61 pounds in the deep waters off Alexandria Bay.

Jets Wallop Suns 15-3, Leafs Lose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jacksonville Suns have one thing in their favor in their race for the International League pennant. With four other teams bunched close behind, they can afford to lose a game without losing much ground.

The Suns were walloped 15-3 by the suddenly - potent Columbus Jets Monday night, but maintained their one-game lead over Rochester Red Wings as the Wings bobbled an 8-6 decision to Buffalo Bisons.

Syracuse Chiefs took over third place, half a game behind Rochester, by edging Toronto Maple Leafs 4-3, dropping the Leafs into a fourth-place tie with Buffalo, two games off the pace.

In the other game, a battle of second division clubs, Atlanta Crackers nipped Richmond Virginians 5-4.

The Jets erupted for six runs in the first inning, and added another six in the next two innings, including a three - run homer by Johnny Powers.

The Jets were held to six unearned runs as Rochester pitchers committed three costly errors. Bombers got four times in the third inning, all unearned.

At Toronto, an Ottawa-born infielder paved the way for the Syracuse victory. Third baseman Chuck Tyrk, who entered the game with a .113 batting average, slammed a two-run double in the sixth off Angelo Bruce Bruhaker held the Leafs to eight hits.

Dwight Siebler retired the last 19 Virginians in order, and gave up only one hit in the last eight innings, to pick up his first victory in seven decisions for Atlanta.

The flame in Elroy Face's fork ball appears to be flickering.

Face, not long ago one of the top relief pitchers in the majors, was rocked again Monday night in Pittsburgh Pirates' 7-6 loss to the ninth-place Los Angeles Dodgers.

The 36-year-old right hander entered the game in the seventh inning just after a four-run rally had tied the Dodgers 5-5. He got the first batter, but before retiring the side he walked three batters and gave up two singles, allowing the Dodgers to score the two runs they needed for the victory.

Face suffered his third loss in five decisions and had his earned run average soar to 3.28 for 22 games.

Face won 17 straight games in relief in 1959 and has averaged 61 appearances a season for the last eight years. Manager Danny Murtaugh says he is one of the greatest relief pitchers of all time. But his time could be running out.

In other National League games Monday, New York Mets edged San Francisco Giants 4-3, Houston Colts trounced Philadelphia Phillies 8-4, Milwaukee Braves downed St. Louis Cardinals 7-4 and Cincinnati Red whipped Chicago Cubs 6-1.

DRIVES WINNER HOME

Frank Howard drove in three runs for the Dodgers, including the winning run with a second sacrifice fly. He also homered. The Pirates, down 5-1, had rallied for a run in the seventh and third baseman Derrell Griffith, two wild pitches by Bob Miller, a walk and a single.

Jesse Gonder's two-run homer in the ninth off Bob Bolin lifted the Mets to their fifth victory in 10 games with the league-leading Giants. The blow followed a one-out walk to Larry Elliot. Jim Hart belted four hits, including a fourth-inning homer, for the Giants.

Bob Aspromonte's hitting and Bob Bruce's pitching led Houston over Philadelphia. Aspromonte climaxed a five-run first inning with his second grand-slam homer of the season. Bruce allowed seven hits, two after the fourth inning, and didn't walk anyone to record his eighth game against four defeats.

Ed Mathews walked in his first four appearances, then homered in the ninth inning, tying the Cardinals 4-4. The Braves went on to score three more runs in the inning. Gene Oliver singled off Ron Denis Menke with the deciding run.

The Reds whipped the Cubs behind the hitting of Steve Boros and Leo Cardenas. Boros drove home two runs with a triple in the second inning while Cardenas doubled home three runs in the third.

Parker will assist head coach Bobby Simpson with the offence, Roundtree will work with defensive coach Jimmy Dunn and Shipp will assist line coach Cliff Speegle.

The team also announced halfback Dick Shatto, tackle Danny Nykoluk and centre Norm Stoneburgh will share the job of team captain this season.

Says Pro Did Not Apply

CPGA Denies Panasiuk's Charge

TORONTO (CP) — The only reason Bob Panasiuk is not a member of Canadian Professional Golfers' Association is because he did not apply for membership this year, Bill Richardson, president of the CPGA Ontario branch, said Monday.

Richardson was replying to press reports quoting the 23-year-old Windsor pro as saying the CPGA wouldn't let him join the association.

Panasiuk, who finished second to amateur Nick Weslock in last week's Ontario Open, was ruled ineligible to compete in the $300,000 World Open tournament in Detroit in August because he is not a member of the CPGA.

Originally the top three pros in the open were to qualify for the Detroit tournament. But second-place pro Gary Fawcett was not eligible and the three open ings went to Frank Whitley of Kitchener and Moe Norman and Alvis Thompson of Toronto. Whitley was third low pro, Norman and Thompson tied for fourth.

Richardson said Fawcett was not eligible because he didn't file his application for the world tournament in time.

Panasiuk could have joined the CPGA if he had taken the time to file out an application, Richardson said.

The Windsor pro said Saturday he had not been allowed to join the association because he worked for a club that didn't have a class A professional—one who has five years' experience.

Bow To Little Britain 6-1

Joyces Suffer Second Defeat

By GEO. H. CARTER
(Sports Editor)

Little Britain bludgeons blasted out a 16-hit barrage here last night to hand Joyces their second Eastern senior baseball defeat. The score was 9-1.

The hit spray backed by a neat five-hit pitching job by their ace Ron Jewell who whiffed 12 and issued four free passes.

Impotent before Jewell's hurling, Joyces could do little that was right.

Five miscues and errors of omission and commission by Cody Vaughn, their starting hurler, and Bev. McLean, his successor say good. They split six innings of duty giving up 13 hits and six runs.

But coach Gordy St. Louis' decision to use an untried hurler paid off handsomely — even if it came too late.

Youthful Dave Lewis, 18, who toils for Shannonville, took over the fireman's job in the seventh — and proved something of a sensation.

In relief he stole Jewell's thunder, in his senior baseball debut. Lewis a southpaw, faced but ten men in three innings of duty. He struck out six and allowed but one hit. He whiffed the side in the ninth.

Vaughn gave up seven hits for four runs, and McLean who took over in the third yielded two hits for a pair of runs.

Little Britain scored twice in the first innings off three hits and two Joyce errors. They got to Vaughn for three hits and two runs in the third which sent him to the showers.

They scored a single in the fifth off two hits and another Joyce bobble and repeated in the sixth on another hit and miscue.

Joyces broke the scoring ice in the fifth on two walks, a stolen base and Larry Soule's mighty triple to the centre field fence.

Two consecutive hits in the seventh with none out proved the swan song for McLean. Enter Lewis who promptly squelched the rally.

Three of Joyces' hits went for extra bases and with the exception of Soule's triple went for nothing. Mavety blasted a triple, Moe Hunter a double with McGrimmon and Vaughn getting singles.

Mike Herr with four hits led the Little Britain artillery. Ashmore, Bushy, Jewell and McTaggart each clouted a pair with singles going to Taylor and Jenkins.

Joyces meet Canniffon here Friday night with game time at 8:30.

The Teams:

Little Britain: Herr, Goard, Ashmore, McMillan, Bushy, Jewell, McTaggart, Taylor Jenkins.

Joyces: Soule, Moon, Weston, Mavety, Hunter, Muirhead, Chatland, McKibbon, McGrimmon, Asselstine, Vaughn, McLean, Lewis.

Birds On Wing, Win Seventh In Row

—Radatz Eyes Record

By HAL ROCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dick Radatz a monster?

Why that's silly. Any American League batter can tell you that thing is the Boston bullpen is more like a machine.

Take Monday night for example. Radatz threw 32 pitches at Kansas City Athletics and 26 were strikes. He hiked his 6th appearance of the year and his 2 1-3 inning stint saved a 4-3 victory for the Red Sox.

The save, his third in two days, was the 12th of the season for the huge reliever, who sports a 1.63 earned run average and seems a shoo-in to snap Jim Konstanty's major league record of 74 appearances in one season.

After a relief Radatz save, an official of the losing club said: "the only way to stop the guy is with a gun, I guess. And then I suppose before he keeled over he'd strike out the last batter."

Elsewhere in the AL Monday Baltimore Orioles stretched their winning streak to seven games with a 6-3 victory over Minnesota, Chicago White Sox topped Cleveland Indians 5-1 in 10 innings and Washington Senators defeated Detroit Tigers 5-3. New York Yanks and the Los Angeles Angels were not scheduled.

Radatz came on when the Athletics had reached starter Earl Wilson and reliever Arnold Earley for two runs in the seventh. Dick got blinch hitter Doc Edwards to fly out and then stifled the Athletics the rest of the way.

Boston shortstop Eddie Bressoud drove in two runs with a double and a triple and scored another.

Robin Roberts survived two early home runs by Tom Oliva and Harmon Killebrew's 28th circuit clout as the Orioles extended their league lead to 6½ games over the idle Yankees.

Norm Siebern hammered a two-run shot for the Orioles who have won 10 of their last 11 games.

Sox McDowell had the White Sox blanked for 8 2-3 innings before home runs by Tom Oliva and Harmon Killebrew's 28th circuit clout as the Orioles extended their league lead to 6½ games over the idle Yankees.

The winners took a 4-0 lead in the third and used great plays by J. Martin and F. Donovan, robbing D. Smith of extra base hits twice, to hold the lead. Lightfoots made it close on Powers' three-run homer in the fourth but Clty came back with pairs in the fourth and fifth to wrap it up.

Dave Feeney pitched a six-hit ball game, fanning one and walking four for City Hotel. Harry Powers allowed nine hits, whiffed one and passed three on the Lightfoot rubber.

Doug Hull had two doubles, knocking in three runs, Frank Donovan two and Dave Feeney a bases-empty homer for the winners. E. Donovan, J. Sutherfield, J. McEvers and G. Smith added the other base knocks.

Don Dolan and Jim Sheridan got two hits apiece, Harry Powers, his homer and Garvin one safety in a losing cause.

In another game, Point Anne was reported to have defeated Verchast Daubeny 8-4 by forfeit.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids . . . and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." This was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reductions in retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among those case histories were a majority of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most importantly of all, results were thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured tissue and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and tastes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

American League Selects Top Sluggers

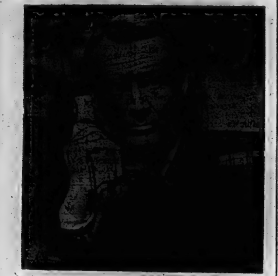
BOSTON (AP)—The top nine batters in the American League are on the all-star squad, completed except for pitchers and announced today by president Joe Cronin.

Al Kaline of Detroit Tigers, a terror in past mid-season classics, was prominent among the latest additions. Manager Al Lopez, like National League pilot Walter Alston, followed the players' balloting down the line in naming second choices. Lopez also added first baseman outfielder Joe Pepitone of New York Yankees "because he can play two positions."

Lopez will complete selection on an eight-man pitching staff to be announced Wednesday night. The game will be played July 7 at New York's Shea Stadium.

Chicago White Sox, now in third place but in the thick of the pennant fight all season, failed to place a man among the 17 non-pitchers. So did Cleveland Indians and Kansas City Athletics. Since all teams have to be represented, Lopez must choose the best factor in his pitching picks.

DOMINATES ADDITIONS



Detroit dominates the additions made today with catcher Bill Freehan and second baseman Dick McAuliffe joining Kaline, who has been selected for the 10th time, second only to Mickey Mantle's 11. 12 all-star contests, Kaline has batted .345 with two homers and six RBI's.

First-baseman Norm Siebern and shortstop Luis Aparicio represent Hall of Minnesota Twins.

Boston Red Sox third-baseman Frank Malzone, outfielders Carl Yastrzemski and Lenny

Dr. Kildare Series Will Do Three-Part Show This Year

NBC's Dr. Kildare—actor Richard Chamberlain — writes the following column as a guest for Cynthia Lowry who is on vacation.

Written for
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
By RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — One hundred down and 34 to go—for this season.

When Toronto-born Raymond Massey and I recently cut a "birthday" cake marking the completion of our 100th show for Dr. Kildare, that was our main feeling. But the thoughts that went through my mind were many and varied.

I've often been asked if I were not bored with the intern grown into a resident; impatient of dialogues with those tongue-twisting medical terms; frustrated when having my head and ladies die in the closing moments.

I've even been misinterpreted when I said I wouldn't do another TV series. It looked in print as though I were fed up with Dr. Kildare, and ready to call it quits at the drop of a suture.

Another series after Kildare? No, because, after Kildare there are many other things I hope to do. But, boredom? No, I'm grateful to say, that hasn't got in. And I don't expect it will.

WHO HAS TIME?

In the first place, who has time to become bored. Not with 33 or 34 television shows a year, roughly the equivalent of 20 full-length motion pictures.

There is no substitute for experience, and that I'm certainly getting—and I'm still learning from Kildare.

One scarcely could work with Raymond Massey and not learn daily something about his craft. Nor with such guest stars as Cyril Ritchard, Walter Pidgeon or Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

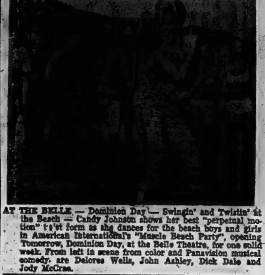
There are plans for the season ahead that help alleviate any tendency toward boredom. This year for instance, we'll do our first three-part story, with an Italian background when Dr. Gillespie takes Kildare with him to Rome.

Several of our stories will deal with controversial subjects born in medicine and in human relations.

That is an indication of how Kildare has matured since he was introduced as Parnell James, saw intern three years ago.

DEVELOPMENT IS KEY

Beyond everything else, this development is probably the key to the continued interest both Ray Massey and I feel toward what is his longest "run" —by far—in a single role. Neither the Gillespie nor Kildare characters have been allowed to stand still. Individually, and in their relationship with each other, the characters have shown a steady progression.



My own thoughts as we start a new season cannot help but include my own ambitions beyond Dr. Kildare. I hope for a wider range of roles—to do

The Trots

LONDON, Ont. (C) — Wally B Byrd won his fourth race in eight starts here Monday taking the 2500-yrace London Trotter Week Pace at the Western Fair raceway.

He paced the mile in 2:06 3-5 and paid $7.20 for the win. Second $500 race went to Wee Ja Salle, pacing the distance in 2:09 and returned $16.80.

One of the largest crowds of the present week—$235.10—was manufactured in the fourth race when Barney Diesel fanned home first for $16.40 to 20-1 shot Virt's Star ran second.

AT THE BELLE — Dominion Day — Swingin' and Twistin' at the Beach — Candy Johnson shows her best "perpenal motion" t'y't form as the dances for the beach boys and girls in American International's "Muscle Beach Party", opening Tomorrow, Dominion Day, at the Belle Theatre, for one solid week. From last is scene from color and Panavision musical comedy, are Delores Wells, John Ashley, Dick Dale and Jody McCrea.

Old Master Fred Astaire Is Dancing Once Again

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—After a four-year absence from his art, Fred Astaire is dancing again—and you should see his Watusi.

You'll get a chance next fall with the airing of the musical comedy he is doing with Barrie Chase for the Bob Hope Chrysler Theatre. He has been filming the show at Universal City these days, and it's always a pleasure to see the old master back in action.

How does he look? Simply great. It probably shouldn't be mentioned, but Fred is as old as the century. Yet he moves with utter grace, as always, and the long-chinned face appears unchanged from the days when he and Ginger Rogers seemed to glide several inches above the dance floor.

"Feel pretty good," he admitted. "I don't work out or anything like that — just play golf. But I get back in training pretty easily by using a simple method: If my ligaments start to hurt, I just ignore them. Like as not, the ache goes away."

There is only one Astaire approach to this dancing; that is one of perfectionism. His numbers will occupy only seven minutes of the hour show, but he took two full weeks to rehearse them with Barrie and his longtime choreographer, Hermes Pan.

OLD CANE SOLO

One number is in the old-time Astaire style, a solo with a cane to punctuate his taps. The other is a smooth ballroom number with Barrie. Then they team for a light - hearted Watusi. The dance is the rage of the younger citizens, who stand a few feet apart and engage in angular contortions.

What does Fred think of the Watusi?

"Oh, I think it's a lot of fun," he replied. "It's not really a dance. It's more of a movement, an expression. I've been around to a few of the spots to observe it, and the kids seem to have a great time doing it. The music plays real loud and everybody gets carried away."

The Watusi is not for me, because I never go out dancing. But I think it's fine for those who enjoy it."

OASA Sets Playoffs Deadline

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Deadline for entries in the provincial playoffs of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association is Wednesday, association secretary Leroy Pickard said Monday.

Mr. Pickard also said no playoff may be signed to OASO certificates after July 15 and all teams must be ready to begin the provincial playoffs by mid-August.

All playoff series will be home-and-home affair except for the squirt series, which will be played Sept. 12 as a tournament in New Toronto.

Your hunch is correct. Take time to follow through on suggestion.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Details may appear irksome . . . but you can handle them. Involves condition affecting home life, security. Time when your own judgment is better than so-called experts.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): Practical affairs demand attention. Recent events point way to future action. Plan for home improvement — frank talk with family member. Change needs to vary — but not today.

Pisces (Feb. 19 to March 20): Gain pleasure through accomplishment. Take nothing for granted. Check personal impressions. Experiment with hobby. Reward due. You earn respect of loved one by displaying understanding.

If today is your birthday you are sensitive, possess deep understanding of the creative arts. By next month you may be involved in new, exciting project.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Those who favor change can cut over fraction which advocates "standing still."
